PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 107th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—Tuesday, November 12, 2002

The Senate met at 1 p.m. and was called to order by the Vice President (Mr. CHENEY).

PRAYER

Serendipitous God who delights to surprise us with interventions of inspiration when we least expect them and most need them, we praise You for enabling this lame duck session to soar like an eagle. We pray that these next days completing the work of the 107th Congress will be expeditious. Following last Tuesday's elections, may a spirit of magnanimity be the ambiance of the Senate family. Help those who lost accept Your comfort and courage with the assurance that when one door closes, You open a new door of opportunity. Enable those who won to reach out with empathy to those who were defeated. Bind the whole Senate family together with the greater ties of dedication to You, patriotism for our Nation, and commitment to excellence in finishing well the work that must be done. With oneness of mind and heart we claim Your promise through Isaiah: "Those who wait on the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint."—Isaiah 40:31. Thank You, Lord, for this eagle session. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Vice President led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

CERTIFICATE OF APPOINTMENT

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a certificate of appointment for Senator DEAN M. BARKLEY of the State of Minnesota.

Without objection, it will be placed on file and the certificate of appointment will be deemed to have been read.

The certificate of appointment is as follows:

> STATE OF MINNESOTA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
> To the President of the Senate of the United States:
> This is to certify that, pursuant to the power vested in me by the Constitution of the United States and the laws of the State of Minnesota, I, Jesse Ventura, the Governor of said State, do hereby appoint Dean M. Barkley a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States until the vacancy therein, caused by the death of Paul Wellstone, is filled by election as provided by law.
> Witness: His excellency our Governor, Jesse Ventura, and our seal hereto affixed at Saint Paul, Minnesota this fourth day of November in the year of our Lord 2002.
> By the Governor:
> JESSE VENTURA,
> Governor.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH OF OFFICE

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will present himself at the desk. The Chair will administer the oath of office as required by the Constitution and prescribed by law.

Mr. BARKLEY, escorted by Senator DAYTON, advanced to the desk of the Vice President; the oath prescribed by law was administered to him by the Vice President; and he subscribed to the oath in the official oath book.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Congratulations.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

SCHEDULE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, today the Senate will be in a period for morning business wherein Senators will have the opportunity to eulogize our departed colleague PAUL WELLSTONE, the late Senator from Minnesota, and to welcome Senator BARKLEY.

I understand Senator DAYTON and Senator BARKLEY, who was just sworn in, would like to speak. I ask unanimous consent that following my remarks and those of the Republican leader, Senators DAYTON and BARKLEY be recognized to speak.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WELCOME TO SENATOR DEAN BARKLEY

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, Senator LOTT and I would like to begin by welcoming Senator BARKLEY. He is the 39th Senator to represent the great State of Minnesota. He was born in Annandale, MN. He received his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Minnesota, so he is truly a son of the State.

He ran for the House of Representatives in 1991 and for the Senate in 1994 and then in 1996 as a reform party candidate. He advised the Governor, Governor Ventura, in his successful campaign for the Minnesota governorship in 1998. He was appointed as director of Minnesota's Planning and State Strategic Long-term Planning Agency.

In addition, as a businessman, he brings a great deal of experience and real-life perspective to this Chamber. I congratulate Senator BARKLEY, his wife Susan, and their three children and welcome him to the Senate family.

Before I make my remarks in regard to our dear departed colleague, I yield the floor to accommodate Senator LOTT's interest in welcoming Senator BARKLEY as well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I extend our welcome to our new Senator, DEAN BARKLEY from Minnesota. I congratulate him on his selection and wish him well on behalf of the Members of the Senate on both sides of the aisle. I pledge to him my commitment and our commitment to work with him as he fills this interim appointment on behalf of the people of the great State of Minnesota.

I reviewed his background. I have had a chance to visit with him. I know he is going to be very serious about this opportunity he has to do the right thing for his own State but also for our country.

His experience as director of the Minnesota Planning and State Strategic and Long-term Planning Agency should serve him well in his time in the Senate. His involvement in the effort toward good government in his State, his participation in the reform party and the independence party, and as a matter of fact his friendship and work over the years with members of both parties, Democrat and Republican, will serve him well in this period that he will be in the Senate.

We are looking forward to the opportunity to encourage him, to answer his questions, and to work with him on behalf of the people he will now represent. So I extend our congratulations and our welcome to Senator BARKLEY of Minnesota.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF PAUL WELLSTONE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, let me reiterate our welcome to Senator BARKLEY, but no one needs to be reminded how it is he is here. I begin our remembrance of PAUL WELLSTONE with the recognition that at times such as this it is more important to celebrate a life than to mourn a death. I will do my utmost in the next couple of minutes to remember my own advice, the importance of celebrating a life.

We mourn the loss of PAUL WELLSTONE, his wife Sheila, their daughter Marcia, the staff, and the pilots who lost their lives. It has been a shock from which we have not yet fully recovered. Sometimes in these difficult moments, I turn to the Bible, sometimes I turn to expressions offered to me by others, and sometimes to poetry.

An old Irish text was found in a Carmelite monastery in Tallow County, Wicklow, Ireland. The text was entitled "Togetherness." I find solace in the words of Togetherness.

> Death is nothing at all—
> I have only slipped away into the next room.
> Whatever we were to each other, that we are still.
> Call me by my old familiar name, speak to me in the easy way which we always used.
> Laugh as we always laughed at the little jokes we enjoyed together.
> Play, smile, think of me, pray for me.
> Let my name be the household word it always was.
> Let it be spoken without effort.
> Life means all that it ever meant.
> It is the same as it always was:
> There is an absolute unbroken continuity.
> Why would I be out of your mind because I am out of your sight?
> I am but waiting for you, for an interval, somewhere very near, just around the corner.
> All is well. Nothing is passed, nothing is lost.
> One brief moment, and all will be as it was before—
> Only better, infinitely happier, and forever—
> We will all be one together . . .

PAUL was all of 5 foot 5. But I remember what someone once told me: someone certainly more than 5 foot 5. He said it is not the size of the man in the fight, it is the size of the fight in the man. PAUL WELLSTONE by that measurement was a giant. He fought. He spoke. He challenged us all. But he did so in a way that made him a friend, not an enemy, a friend with people on this side of the aisle and a friend, of course, with those on this side, too; he had friends.

While he walked in this Chamber small in stature, everyone recognized that if you measure a man and, in so doing, measure the true weight of his being, you don't measure his size, you measure his heart.

PAUL WELLSTONE inspired me. With his physical challenges—his back, his knees, his legs from wrestling injuries, and then later with MS—I never once heard him complain. Never once did he come to me saying, TOM, you have to give me an opportunity to recover, to rest. He had an energy, a dynamism, that overcame all of those ailments. He seemed more well than those who are well. He inspired all with his joy, with his passion, with his energy.

For those of us who believe in public service, there was no greater evidence of his deep sense of commitment to public service than his advocacy for mental health parity. Again, working across the aisle with Senator DOMENICI, that passion, that energy, that commitment, that determination, that persistence, all that was PAUL WELLSTONE, flowed right up there from that desk. We knew he cared about mental health parity. I can think of no better monument, no better memorial, no better way to honor him than by passing mental health parity soon.

We were all the beneficiaries. Perhaps those who will benefit most by his memory, his example, by his commitment, are our youth. I spoke to his staff on the Sunday following his passing. I reminded them that in the course of 5 years in my early life, I, too, lost heroes. Their names were John F. Kennedy, Robert F. Kennedy, and Martin Luther King. While I recognize their physical being is no longer here, as our poem said, I recognize, too, that they only slipped into the next room, and their spirit was very much alive. And that burns within me with my understanding and my belief in our democracy in this commitment you must make to public service.

In remembering the Wellstones, we must also pay tribute to that remarkable woman, Sheila Wellstone, for her advocacy, her leadership, her commitment to abolishing domestic abuse. The commitment she made, the lives she saved, her willingness to be engaged, the extraordinary effort she made and the example she set, too, is something we will always remember and for which we will always be indebted.

On this new day, let us not think of sadness but of celebration. Let us celebrate the life of PAUL WELLSTONE as we acknowledge the loss of his physical being. Let us extend our heartfelt condolences to David, to Mark, and to Todd, to Cari, Keith, to Joshua and Acacia, Sydney and Matt, his family. The hole in their hearts is large. The hole in their lives may never be fully filled.

To them I ask they, too, find solace in the words of "Togetherness."

> Death is nothing at all—I have only slipped away into the next room. Whatever we were to each other, that we are still.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I will begin by thanking Senator DASCHLE for his remarks so well delivered just now and also for conversations that he and I experienced in the aftermath of this tragic loss.

I rise today also to pay tribute to the life and the service of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE of Minnesota. He had a real impact on this institution. He was a committed warrior to things he believed in. He did it not only with compassion but with sincerity and also generousness and geniality. He never failed to take the time to tell a story, to explain why he felt so strongly about these issues. He was unfailingly willing to be considerate of others, to seek an agreement as to how the process would work, even when it led to a battle of words and of votes. He also had such an upbeat, optimistic view of that process, that battle, and the next one.

He would come over and say: "Good job, I'll get you next time," if he hadn't won. Even when he might be the single vote, or one of a couple of votes—just a few—he was undaunted. You cannot help but admire that approach to life and to the Senate. I not only understand when Senators take a different view, I appreciate it when they take that view—the way PAUL WELLSTONE did.

I have learned over the years that the saying that seems trite is so true in life and in this institution: You can disagree without being disagreeable. He was the master at that.

I appreciated the friendship we developed. I loved to pick at him. I loved to go over and kid him about the little extra face hair that he had for a while, and I would tell him he was my man for the nomination for Presidency. When other potential candidates would come up, I would say: Oh, no, I am already committed to PAUL. He loved it, actually.

He was very kind to me. When I faced difficult tragedies—as with Paul Coverdell, when I stood here with tears rolling down my face, announcing the loss of that great Senator—he would always be one of the first to come over and engage and say how he felt. Sometimes in difficult straits that the Senate has had to go through, when Senator DASCHLE and I had to make difficult decisions, he would be the only one who would come over and say: It was tough, I know, but you did the right thing. I remember that.

So I think the people of Minnesota have an awful lot to be proud of in their Senator. When I went there to pay my respects to the people of Minnesota and to the family and to his friends and supporters, Senator KENNEDY was on the bus as we were leaving the airport. He said: We appreciate the fact that you are here. I know you are here not just because you are the leader of the party, but because you wanted to pay proper respects.

I said: I am here because it is the right thing to do, but also because, if the tables had been reversed and this was for me, PAUL would have been there. I really believe that.

So I take my hat off, I salute the Senator. He will be missed. The Senate will be different. But to the people and his family who are so heartbroken, to his friends and supporters and the people all over his State, our memory of him and his service will not be forgotten. He will go down in history as a truly unique Member of the Senate. I guess we all are in some respects but PAUL more so than others.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, for more than 20 years PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE were my friends and my political allies, so it is with a heavy heart that I stand here today. For the last 2 years PAUL was my mentor and partner in the Senate, and I will miss him especially, as will Minnesota, as will America.

I thank my many colleagues in the Senate who came to Minnesota just a short time ago for the memorial service commemorating PAUL and Sheila, their daughter Marcia, their staff and friends, Mary McEvoy, the Democratic Party Associate Chair, Tom Lapic, and Will McLaughlin. Over half of the Senate attended that evening. Another dozen former Senators, a dozen or so Members of the House, President Clinton, Vice President Gore, Secretary Thompson, Reverend Jackson. PAUL and Sheila would have been honored.

I especially want to thank my Republican colleagues, Senator LOTT, Senator NICKLES, and the others who attended that evening. I was not aware until the next day that Senator LOTT was treated discourteously by some in the Minnesota crowd. To him and anyone else who suffered that misfortune, I deeply apologize. PAUL and Sheila would have been horrified, as was I when I learned about it, as would the people of Minnesota have been. That is not the way we treat distinguished guests in Minnesota.

As for the rest of the evening, if the eulogists spoke sometimes a little long, they at times became impassioned, political, or even partisan—well, it was a service for PAUL WELLSTONE. The speakers were selected, but they weren't scripted. They were all family and close friends who were still in shock and in great emotional distress and in deep pain.

What was most extraordinary about that service that evening, what hopefully will be remembered now the campaigns have concluded, is that over 20,000 people came to honor the lives and mourn the tragic deaths of PAUL and Sheila and Marcia WELLSTONE, Mary McEvoy, Tom Lapic, and Will McLaughlin—over 20,000 people. That was unprecedented in Minnesota.

Nothing in my lifetime or in my knowledge of the State was even in the same realm of that magnitude of love and gratitude and grief and sorrow. The service was held at the University of Minnesota Basketball Arena which seats over 15,000 people. It was filled an hour before the service was scheduled to begin. The fire marshals closed the doors. Another 6,000 or so arrivals filled an adjacent arena to watch the service on closed-circuit television. It, too, was overfilled by the time the service began. Police and university officials urged late arrivals to go home and watch the service on television, but hundreds, several hundred, remained clustered outside, standing around, wanting to be part of this unprecedented Minnesota congregation. That enormous outpouring of people and their emotions attested to the breadth and depth of PAUL WELLSTONE's political reach. He had touched so many people so deeply. He had helped them, comforted them, and reassured them. He had inspired so many people. He was their voice, their champion, their hero, their United States Senator. And then suddenly, tragically, cruelly, he was snatched away and gone forever.

It was a service to remember and in part regret. It was a service of remembrance and regret for eight exceptional people who lost their lives flying to a funeral service in northeastern Minnesota.

I knew PAUL, but the first time I saw him in action was in June of 1982 at the DFL State Convention. I was endorsed at that convention to run for the first time for the U.S. Senate, and the first day that 3-day convention opened, PAUL announced—much to everyone's surprise—he was going to run for the endorsement for State auditor 2 days hence.

For the previous 8 months, a very earnest young man had been in every county and every district and political event in Minnesota in Democratic circles, explaining in numbing detail the functions of the office of State auditor and how he was the best qualified to fulfill them. Sunday came around, and the auditor's endorsement was the last endorsement at the end of the third day. There were 1,300 Democratic delegates who were tired and worn out and ready to go home. PAUL appeared on the stage after his opponent's one last excruciating explanation of the auditor's position, and presented himself—most of the audience seeing him for the first time—and he gave a typical PAUL WELLSTONE speech: Nuclear freeze, save the environment, for economic justice—nothing of much particular relevance to the office of State auditor. He was endorsed by acclamation of the delegates.

PAUL and I both lost our elections that November, but we spent the next 3 years campaigning together, working for the Governor of Minnesota, Rudy Perpich, in the Office of Energy and Economic Development. We spent many hours talking and traveling the State together. In 1990 we swapped our political aspirations, PAUL ran for the Senate and I for State auditor, and this time we won. PAUL's victory in 1990 was one of the most memorable David-defeats-Goliath stories in America's political history.

In the first published poll several months before the election, the incumbent was ahead by over 50 percent. PAUL was in single digits. He was given no chance to win, and almost no help by the political establishment. He was outspent in the campaign by over 5 to 1. Yet PAUL was the only Democratic challenger that year who ousted an incumbent. His campaign symbol, his signature and his icon, became the rattling, gas-guzzling, usually in-the-repair-shop green bus. But despite a brilliant campaign which captured the public attention, this distinctively different candidate walked fast and talked fast and actually rode a bus. His innovative ads won national awards that year, produced a campaign that couldn't even afford to air them.

Despite 8 months of PAUL WELLSTONE and his best hyperdrive, that amazing energy and excitement, and organizing all over the State, he still entered that final weekend before the election, with most polls showing him being 6 to 8 points behind.

That Saturday, as our Statewide DFL ticket boarded the bus—not PAUL'S bus, which was once again in the repair shop, but another bus—for its final 2-day swing around the State, PAUL's opponent had just launched a vicious personal attack against him. The campaign had no money to produce or air a response. Those 2 days were agonizing for PAUL and Sheila and Marcia, who accompanied him, and for those of us who were sharing that experience with him. Then, like a miracle, the hero of the moment came forth, the former Senator and Vice President, Walter Mondale, whom fate was to bind to the conclusion of another Wellstone campaign 12 years later.

The Vice President publicly denounced the attack as a violation of Minnesota's standard of decency. The editorial board of the State's largest newspaper agreed the day before the election. And the majority of Minnesota voters agreed the following day.

It was the most stunning upset and astounding victory in Minnesota political history.

PAUL WELLSTONE was on the green bus headed to Washington, which, of course, was the bus that broke down on the way.

Despite PAUL'S 20 years of political experience, he wasn't prepared for the Senate. The Senate may not have been prepared for PAUL. I know he later regretted some of his earlier decisions. He told me so after he sat down with me when I won my election two years ago, and he was counseling me to take a different approach.

But while he would have changed perhaps his early style, he would not have changed his substance. He would not have changed because he could not have changed his values or his ideals or his convictions. He could not alter his passion for social justice, his caring for people, or his outrage at their oppression or suffering. His values were the essence of who he was. They were the core of his beliefs, the cornerstone of his conscience. They were the hallowed ground of his political soul.

PAUL WELLSTONE was a hard-working political activist, a hard-nosed political organizer, and a smart, savvy politician. He wanted to win. He knew how to win. But he would not win if it meant losing his soul or forgetting his conscience or sacrificing his principles.

He was no Don Quixote out tilting at windmills. He was rather, a Richard the Lionheart on a crusade, mindful of the risks, the pitfalls, and the odds, but undeterred by them.

Time after time during his 12 years in the Senate, he took his stand believing that he was right—well, maybe not right but correct. He voted his conscience. He voted his convictions, hoping that 50 or more of his colleagues would vote with him, but willing to stand alone if they did not.

Some people said that PAUL'S dissenting votes reflected badly on him. Others said they reflected badly on the Senate. Some people believe the Senate would be a better place without PAUL WELLSTONE. Others of us believe the Senate would be a better place with 50 more like him.

Those who questioned his accomplishments overlook the obvious. PAUL could work tirelessly, speak persuasively, and do everything effectively. But he could only vote once—1 out of 100, 1 out of 535.

Paul had only 2 years out of his 12 years with a Democratic President, Senate, and House, as the Republicans will have again in January. For his other 10 years, PAUL served in divided government. He did not accomplish all he wanted to. He did not accomplish much he wanted to. But he accomplished all he could. And he would have accomplished so much more if death had not intervened so suddenly and so cruelly.

There was so much life and so much politics left in PAUL WELLSTONE, and so much courage. His death echoes the words of Ernest Hemingway:

> Few men are willing to brave the disapproval of their fellows, the censure of their colleagues, the wrath of their society. Moral courage is a rarer quality than bravery in battle or great intelligence. Yet it is the one essential, vital quality of those who would seek to change a world which yields most painfully to change. If people bring so much courage to this world, the world has to kill them to break them, so of course it kills them. The world breaks everyone and afterwards many are strong at the broken places. But those that will not break, it kills. It kills the very good and the very gentle and the very brave impartially. If you are none of those, you can be sure that it will kill you too but there will be no special hurry.

Those are the words of Ernest Hemingway.

PAUL WELLSTONE wasn't that fatalistic. At least, he didn't live or practice the politics of fatalism. PAUL was a social reformer and a crusader for social and economic reform. He believed in it. He dedicated his life to it. He gave his life for it. He knew the odds were stacked heavily against him, especially here in Washington. He knew how hard it was; how unusual the circumstances had to be for a PAUL WELLSTONE to make it to the Senate. He knew how hard it was for a PAUL WELLSTONE to stay here, to combat the powerful forces aligned against him and their enormous financial and political resources that would try to defeat him.

He detested political fundraising. He disliked the amounts of money he had to ask for, and he distrusted most of the people who could provide it. His loathing of fundraising was matched only by his hatred of flying in small airplanes—the principal reason he vowed his 1996 campaign would be his last. But when the time came, he could not turn his back on the crusade. He could not abandon the causes, and he could not leave the people—because it was the people PAUL loved. He loved being with people.

As long as he wasn't raising money from them, or flying with them, PAUL loved being with people—real people, farmers, iron rangers, educators, senior citizens, children, all classes, all races, all religions, all points of view. PAUL practiced the politics of diversity, and inclusion, and empowerment. He truly cared about people as individuals. He cared about their lives, their families, their well-being. He loved visiting veterans homes, nursing homes, and schools. He loved spending hours with people who couldn't vote or benefit him politically.

He cared about people because they needed him—not because he needed them. The poor, the unfortunate, the mentally ill, the disadvantaged and the distressed—he loved working for them, working to make their lives better, and working to give them a chance, a job, a farm, a home, a life.

I agree with the majority leader. If this Senate, if this Congress and this administration want to show their respect for PAUL WELLSTONE, if they want to honor his memory, we will pass and the President will sign into law the Wellstone-Domenici Mental Health Parity bill before we adjourn this year. Nothing less would do him justice. Nothing else would make him happier.

PAUL came to love this institution of the Senate. For an organizer, it was the ultimate challenge. He genuinely liked most of his colleagues—even those he disagreed with most of the time. Yes. He got frustrated, discouraged, and impatient. But he respected the Senate. He loved being a Senator, and he was learning how to be a great one.

He was a great man. He was a great husband—with an even greater wife, Sheila. He was a great father and a great politician. He was an excellent U.S. Senator, and he was becoming a great one. But death denied him that opportunity. And it denied us him, and it denied the people of Minnesota the leader they elected to represent them.

He died on his way to a funeral, that of the father of a friend. He flew because he had to, despite what in hindsight seems more like a premonition than a fear. He willed himself to fly because he had to be the best U.S. Senator he could be.

And he never backed away from adversity. He got on a reliable plane with a reputable charter firm flown by two licensed pilots. They flew into what was reportedly occluded but not threatening weather, with low clouds and light, freezing precipitation—not ideal but not unusual for northern Minnesota in late fall.

And then, somehow, inexplicably, the plane landed in a desolate forest rather than a nearby airport. It burst into a huge conflagration and destroyed the lives of eight people, and damaged many more lives who lost their loved ones, and left many thousands—thousands—of people without their leaders, their allies, their heroes, and their friends.

But life goes on, as it must. Minnesota held an election, as it should. Senator-elect Norm Coleman conducted himself honorably in the aftermath of that great tragedy and won honorably and honestly in that election and has earned the right, through the expressed will of the people of Minnesota, to serve as a U.S. Senator for 6 years, beginning in January. And I pray that he will be our Senator for the next 6 years.

But former Vice President Mondale performed a great service to our DFL Party in Minnesota, to our State, and I believe to our democracy by stepping forward at the last moment when, in hindsight, the situation was impossible but seemed possible only because it was former Vice President Mondale.

Senator DEAN BARKLEY is an excellent appointment made by Governor Ventura. He has earned this honor. He is knowledgeable. He is experienced. And he is committed to good government. He has proven that as commissioner of State planning. Through his own political pioneering he has forged an independent strength and spirit which has captured the political imagination of the people throughout our State and offers great promise in the years ahead, and he will have himself great promise in the years ahead. I am honored to be working with him during these next months, as I look forward to working with Senator-elect Coleman when he begins his term in January.

We have a special spirit in Minnesota. Our political spirit is testified to here today by Congressman JIM RAMSTAD and Congressman MARK KENNEDY, who are witnessing these words of tribute to their colleague. Both worked closely with Senator WELLSTONE, especially Congressman RAMSTAD during his long years in the House with PAUL on many issues of which they shared concern and commitment. And PAUL'S staff, who loved him and gave their lives of service with him, and who are suffering a loss that is also immeasurable, are here as well. And I pray that they, too, will find opportunities in the future. I know they will, but it just will not be with PAUL.

Years ago, then-President John Kennedy paraphrased a statement made by Theodore Roosevelt which seems like a fitting bipartisan note on which to end these remarks. He said in New York City, in a speech paraphrasing President Roosevelt:

> The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood, who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at best, if he wins, knows the thrills of high achievement, and, if he fails, at least fails daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.

PAUL, you have won many battles, but now you can wipe the dust and sweat and blood off of your face, and may you rest in eternal peace.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DURBIN). Under the previous order, the Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I stand to say a few words in honor of the late Senator PAUL WELLSTONE.

Over a decade ago, Minnesota sent one of its best to this Chamber. He followed in the special tradition of public service that our State knows well. From Ramsey to Stassen, from Olson to Humphrey, from Mondale to, yes, Ventura, our State has broken the mold more than once.

The man we sent here was PAUL WELLSTONE, and no one would dispute that Minnesota broke the mold again. PAUL was short in stature but, as it proved, enormous in energy and passion. He had a passion for principle, he had a passion for politics, and, most of all, he had a passion for people.

PAUL was a fighter, and, much like Hubert Humphrey, a Happy Warrior. PAUL was the most effective kind of fighter there is: one that never gives up—never. And if there is one attribute that his colleagues and his constituents admired, it was this: his unrelenting energy to fight the fight.

I knew PAUL. I respected PAUL. We both have been like salmon in our own political rivers, swimming into the currents. Therefore, understanding his tireless energies in the cause of change, I am highly honored to speak to his memory today.

True, there is an empty desk here today, a shrouded reminder of a life cut short. But for the PAUL WELLSTONE I knew, the empty chair is more telling. Whether he was in this Chamber or at home in Minnesota, PAUL was on his feet, out of his chair, speaking his mind. Always moving—in thought, in language, in body—PAUL was, indeed, a man of motion and, more than that, a man of emotion. For if there is something that we all knew about PAUL, he not only believed in things, he felt them. This was why PAUL WELLSTONE was so formidable. For thought can be persuaded, changed, and abated. But a feeling? Never.

PAUL, his wife Sheila, and their daughter Marcia tragically perished in the northlands of our State. Their untimely fate was sadly shared by three loyal staff members—Tom Lapic, Will McLaughlin, and Mary McEvoy—as well as the two pilots—Captains Richard Conry and Michael Guess.

As an unexpected and new Member of this Chamber—but more, as a singular citizen of the State of Minnesota—allow me to take this moment to express my personal and heartfelt condolences to all of those families who lost their loved ones. I know I speak for all Minnesotans when I say to those families and friends: Your loss was our loss, and we are all crushingly sorry for it.

PAUL was unique, one of a kind. And yet, the essence of the man was no different from anyone in this Chamber. He wanted to make his State, and his Nation—our world—a better place. We all may differ about how to do so, and some may have disagreed with how PAUL saw it, but no one ever doubted his motives. A selfless champion for those who have no voice—the frail, the weak, the disenfranchised—PAUL'S voice was their voice. And what a voice it was.

Typical of PAUL'S self-deprecating sense of humor, he loved to relate his meeting with a distinguished senior Member of this body, Senator FRITZ HOLLINGS of South Carolina, who remarked to PAUL, "You know, Senator WELLSTONE, you remind me of another Minnesota Senator, Hubert H. Humphrey." And as PAUL began to swell with pride at being in the company of this great champion of civil rights, the senior Senator burst his bubble, "Yes, sir, just like him, you talk too much." PAUL loved this story, and he loved telling it on himself—so typical of the man.

Most of all, PAUL loved and adored his wife and his family, especially his grandchildren. He loved his friends. He loved Carleton College in Northfield, MN. He loved his students; and they knew it. Indeed, PAUL simply loved people. And he loved them simply, unabashedly.

PAUL loved Minnesota and all the people in it. From the known and recognized, to the unknown and uncared for, he loved them all—truly and deeply.

Finally, Mr. President, PAUL loved this distinguished institution. He loved and cherished the U.S. Senate, where today I, too, am honored to stand. PAUL loved his entire staff.

Let me take this opportunity to thank Senator WELLSTONE'S staff for your generous and gracious welcome and offer of support in the truly hectic days since Thursday when I arrived. That you could be so unselfish in your time of unspeakable loss and heartbreak is something I will never, ever forget. I sincerely thank you for the help you have given me.

I plan to continue the fight during my short time here on one of PAUL'S signature issues: mental-health parity. And with Senator DAYTON and Minnesota's Congressional delegation, we plan to introduce a bill to honor Sheila and PAUL WELLSTONE through a living legacy project. I hope that everyone in this Chamber will join us in this tribute.

There is a brief passage out of "Sonnets from the Portuguese," by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, that I would like to share. Her words more perfectly express the thoughts that I am so inadequately attempting to convey about our dear, departed friend, PAUL WELLSTONE:

> "Guess now who holds thee?"
> "—Death," I said.
> But there the silver answer rang:
> "Not Death—but Love."

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on October 25 the Senate and the people of Minnesota, the people of this country, and I personally suffered a terrible loss—the death of our colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE, who, as we know, died in a plane crash with his wife Sheila and daughter Marcia, three members of his staff, and the pilots.

I am sure we will all reflect back on how we were notified, how we learned of this tragedy. I was speaking to Senator DASCHLE's chief of staff, Pete Rouse, asking him how things were going. We talked quite a bit during the last month of the campaign.

He said: I have some bad news.

What?

He said: Senator WELLSTONE's plane went down in Minnesota, and there is no hope that anyone survived that crash.

I will never forget that phone call. The passing of PAUL WELLSTONE is a loss for all of us, those who knew him and those who did not. This week, most of us are returning to Washington for the first time since the tragedy, so this is our opportunity, this is my opportunity, to speak about PAUL WELLSTONE with whom I lived here for 12 years, a long time, a lot of days. I certainly am not qualified to talk about all of his accomplishments. There are professors who will write about his accomplishments in years to come. But I can talk about him as a person, how I saw him.

He represented Minnesota well; there is no question about that. Although he did not grow up in Minnesota, moving there as an adult, he embraced the state and its people. And the people of Minnesota loved him dearly and deeply. He talked often of how much he enjoyed living in Minnesota and how proud he was to represent Minnesotans and be a part of the great political legacy of the state.

My father-in-law was born in Russia. But as a boy, he immigrated to Minnesota, and he grew up in Duluth, a tough town, where he and his friends all had nicknames. My mother-in-law grew up in Minneapolis. So when I got to meet a Senator from Minnesota, of course, I was eager to share a lot of my personal reflections on my wife's family, and PAUL and I enjoyed talking about Minnesota.

The impact that PAUL WELLSTONE made and the admiration he received extended well beyond Minnesota. He and I were allies in many legislative battles, and I know many people in the State of Nevada—working families, veterans, retirees, teachers, students, health care professionals and their patients—also appreciated him. He was an articulate and compassionate public servant who fought fiercely for them. Many more Nevadans, like all Americans, are now better off because of PAUL WELLSTONE's work in the Senate, and they would be even better off had he been able to be elected to his third term, as he would have been.

Of course, here among his colleagues in the Senate he was not only well liked but respected, as has been said here today on several occasions. People might not have always or even often agreed with PAUL, but they all had great respect for him. That is why I was so impressed to see a number of his Republican colleagues from Minnesota come and stand in silence at his desk today.

I was fortunate to serve with PAUL, to benefit from his advice and his judgment, and to enjoy his friendship. I smile because I am going to be lonelier here in the Senate without PAUL.

I don't know on how many occasions I went to PAUL WELLSTONE: PAUL, do you have to do this? And he always explained why he had to do it.

I am a better Senator and I know I am a better person for having known PAUL.

He used his voice to speak passionately and courageously on behalf of the voiceless. He gave hope to the hopeless and helpless. He was a kind and gentle person.

I used to see him often in the House gym. He would run from his home to the gym every morning. When because of illness, he couldn't run anymore, without a lot of fanfare and a lot of talk, he walked. Then he decided to work out other places. He went to the gymnasium where the police officers, the Capitol Police, work out. Those of us who knew and loved PAUL saw his physical deterioration, but it was something about which he never complained.

I remember one occasion when Sheila had gone home and he was here alone. He couldn't get dressed; he was in such pain. He came here. We helped him down to the physician's office. He never complained. He was in such pain, sweat coming off his head.

He was a tough person physically, a tough person. I can vouch for that. He was a champion wrestler, high school and college. I think probably the dedication that it takes to be a wrestler, losing weight, having to exert total energy for an extended period of time, the work ethic he developed, the things he did physically and mentally and emotionally, and his determination that made him so successful on the mat also prepared him well for the successes he had as an organizer and activist, campaigner, Senator, and a person.

PAUL WELLSTONE was a fighter who always remained true to his beliefs, stood up for his principles, served the interests of the people of Minnesota and the United States.

There are many things about PAUL WELLSTONE that I remember and hold dear. I can say without any hesitation that he was my friend. I think he thought I was his friend.

I remember the first time I ever heard PAUL WELLSTONE speak. That was in 1990 when there was a public reception in Statuary Hall for the newly elected Senators. We were all there. He stood and gave a great speech. I asked: Who is this guy? He said it so well. He said things I thought about, the importance of politics and government and being involved. He spoke of his grassroots campaign.

I remember the last speech I heard him give, right there. In the years I have been in the Senate, that seat has been the place of great speeches. PAUL WELLSTONE took over Dale Bumpers' seat. They both had a similar style in many respects. They both wandered around back there with that long cord.

The last speech I heard PAUL give, he said, among other things—and this is a quote—

> You could call me a softie. I am a softie.

And he was. He believed he could help people who are less fortunate than he, someone that didn't have a Ph.D., who had been a college professor, hadn't been a U.S. Senator, who didn't have the fine loving family that he had. He could reach out to them. He felt he could do that. He was a softie.

Mr. President, I don't always go to the prayer breakfasts held every Wednesday, but I do go on occasion. I don't go every Wednesday. But I wanted to hear PAUL WELLSTONE at a Senate prayer breakfast, so I went to that prayer breakfast. It was a memorable experience for me to hear PAUL talk about his spirituality, which is something he didn't speak out about in public—except on this occasion. I will never forget that prayer breakfast, where PAUL WELLSTONE spoke of his spirituality, his faith, his deeply held principles. He was a man committed to ideas and ideals.

I also remember PAUL for the love he had for his wife Sheila. They were inseparable. In this campaign, there were a lot of comparisons made between his campaign and mine in 1986, where the opposing candidate switched parties; there were a lot of similarities. He said talk to Sheila about that, show her the ads that you ran. They were always together, never apart. Even now it is so. They had the love of their children, the surviving boys, Mark and David. One is involved in public housing and the other is a wrestling coach and teacher. Right here, a few feet in front of me, on one of those Fridays where we were trying to get everything done and get out of here, PAUL was so anxious to go. Why? Because he thought this was the time his son's wrestling team was going to be the State champions of Minnesota. PAUL WELLSTONE, BARBARA BOXER, and I were talking. I was trying to stall for time, and I asked, "How many wrestling matches have you had, PAUL?"

I also remember PAUL because of my dad. As I have said here on occasion, my father committed suicide. One reason I have been able to publicly talk about that is because of PAUL WELLSTONE. PAUL helped us to understand mental illness is not something to be ashamed of. Any time PAUL WELLSTONE publicly had a chance to talk about suicide, he talked about suicide prevention and talked about my efforts on this. He never tried to take credit for anything alone. He worked so hard on the issue mental health parity. Part of that is suicide. We have 31,000 people a year killing themselves. Because of PAUL, we are doing something about that. We passed a resolution in the Senate recognizing it as a national health problem. We have given money to research the problems of suicide, depression and mental illness. There are medical schools now studying why people kill themselves. So I will never forget PAUL WELLSTONE for a lot of reasons, not the least of which is my father.

I will also remember PAUL WELLSTONE for the things he did for the so-called little people—those who are often not noticed or are neglected. How many of us around here know the people who clean our offices? Not many of us. They come by late at night when we are gone, and when we come into the offices in the morning the trash cans are empty, the desks are cleaned off. It's easy to overlook the people who do that, who work hard to help us. PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE wanted to know who they were, so they waited and waited until somebody came to their office so they could thank them for cleaning the office. That also includes the elevator operators, doorkeepers, police officers, janitors, as I have already mentioned. He knew them by name, stopped to talk with them and listened to them.

To show the kind of guy he was with the Capitol Police, Mr. President, this man holds the record—he was suffering from multiple sclerosis and he holds the record—with all these big, physical, well-trained, young policemen—he holds the record for pushups and pullups. You can go and see who holds the record at the Capitol Police gymnasium. It is Senator PAUL WELLSTONE. He was a hell of a man, Mr. President.

He stared disease in the face; he had multiple sclerosis. Did anybody ever hear PAUL whine, complain, or feel sorry for himself? No. He took it right on the jaw, like he did a lot of punches, and he went about doing his business. Those of us who worked with him for 12 years saw how his physical condition deteriorated. How long would it have been before he had to walk with a cane? I don't know. But he persevered. That is one reason I remember PAUL WELLSTONE.

Of course, Mr. President, we all remember PAUL WELLSTONE because he stood for something. No one could ever question PAUL WELLSTONE's sense of value. I still smile when I remember saying to PAUL, "Do you have to do this?" Well, I knew the answer before I asked the question. We who hold public office are judged on the difficult votes we are called on to make. To his credit, PAUL WELLSTONE relied on his conscience—not on consultants—in such moments. I admire him so much for that.

Before entering politics, PAUL was a gifted and popular college professor. To a great extent, he remained a teacher even after entering the Senate, educating his constituents about government, and encouraging colleagues to learn more about issues and consider other perspectives, engaging us and challenging us. There are lots of times I can reflect back on when PAUL WELLSTONE, in his Socrates-like presentations, was trying to educate the Senate. He would say to me, "I am wasting my time; what good am I doing here?" I would proceed to tell him all the good he had done. He was educating me, getting me to reflect upon what he had done, just like I am sure he did at Carleton College with his students.

PAUL was a person with great compassion, who reminded us of our moral obligation to care for all human beings—I repeat, especially the most vulnerable, the hungry, the poor, the homeless, the ill, victims of abuse, and others who suffered.

PAUL WELLSTONE is irreplaceable. His life was cut short, and because of that, it is incumbent upon us in the Senate and throughout America to remember his message of hope and compassion and carry forward his efforts to secure economic and social justice for all in the best way we can. In that way, we honor the legacy of a great man, PAUL WELLSTONE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORZINE). The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada for his very articulate statement on PAUL's life. We all shared experiences in working with PAUL.

Every Sunday, the Washington Post Style Section prints a column called "Life Is Short." The column selects one individual and gives a snapshot of that individual's life. If that column focused on Senator PAUL WELLSTONE's life, the single snapshot would be a large photo album.

Senator DASCHLE has said PAUL WELLSTONE was the "soul of the Senate." I believe PAUL tried to find the soul in all of us. He challenged us, on a daily basis, to remember that every man, woman, and child in this Nation should have access to quality education, a first-rate health care system that includes mental health and prescription drug coverage, and jobs that provide decent minimum wage.

Three weeks ago, PAUL made his final appearance in the Chamber. PAUL gave a very passionate speech about the need to extend unemployment benefits and provide more help for our veterans. His closing comments were vintage PAUL. He said:

> What are people who cannot find jobs, who are out of work, who are struggling to put food on the table, supposed to do? What in the world is going on? What has happened to our humanity?

Later that day, PAUL came back to the Senate floor to give his thoughts about the 2003 Defense spending bill. He thanked Senators INOUYE and STEVENS for their inclusion of an amendment that addressed domestic violence and sexual assault which he had championed. As we all know, the issue is not only important to PAUL, it was especially important to his wife Sheila.

At the end of those remarks, PAUL said, in reference to his own provision that was not included in the final conference agreement:

> I know my colleagues did their best. We will be back.

That was PAUL—always gracious in both victory and defeat. Even more importantly, he never focused on defeat because he was constantly plotting his next move to better educate his colleagues and their staff on the issues—always the college professor.

I had the honor and the pleasure of working with PAUL on an array of issues—education, veterans, dairy, health care, and job training. These are not easy issues, but the difficulty of the issue never deterred PAUL. He always saw the glass half full rather than a half-empty glass.

In 1997 and 1998, Senators KENNEDY, DEWINE, WELLSTONE, and I worked together to pass the Workforce Investment Act, legislation that restructured our job training system. Throughout those 2 years, we had many long meetings. In every single meeting, PAUL told us about the impact various provisions would have on Minnesota. There was never a meeting, public or private, where PAUL did not mention the concerns and ideas that were on the minds of his constituents.

PAUL would also tell stories of his children. During many HELP Committee hearings on education, we would often hear about his two children who were teaching in the Minnesota public school system. He was so proud of all his children, his grandchildren, and, of course, Sheila.

PAUL was also very proud of his staff. He had great respect for their views and always remarked to his colleagues that he was very fortunate to have a very talented and devoted staff.

Three years ago at the funeral of Walter Payton, the outstanding Chicago Bears running back, who was also an extraordinary human being, the Rev. Jesse Jackson remarked that on a tombstone, there is a birthday, a small dash, and a date of passing. He said:

> The dash between those two dates is the part you control. . . . The dash determines the height and depth of how you live your life.

PAUL WELLSTONE maximized the height and depth of his dash. I was so lucky to have known PAUL, to have had an opportunity to not only work with him but to learn from him and, most importantly, to have been able to call him a good friend.

I was en route to Minnesota to campaign for PAUL when I learned of his tragic death. I instead spent time with his wonderful sons, David and Mark. I brought them the pictures of their dad celebrating the dairy program victory with Senator LEAHY and another recent victory for Minnesota as well as New England. It brought proud smiles to their faces. As I had expected, they were so much like their dad. I know they will continue on the path that PAUL and Sheila created for them.

PAUL, I will miss you, the Senate will miss you, and the country will miss you. May your commitment, energy, integrity, and passion always guide us to do our best at all times. Goodbye, PAUL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, life gives no joy like that it takes away. As always, the poet said it best. All of us in the Senate were suddenly and tragically reminded of that on a Friday morning 2½ weeks ago—a cold, gray, dreary October day. I was in a van driving between Fargo and Grand Forks, ND, when I received a call saying that an airplane had crashed in northern Minnesota and that Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, his wife Sheila, staff, and others were on the plane. To say that I and others have been deeply saddened, in fact devastated, by the loss of one of our colleagues is perhaps to even understate it.

PAUL WELLSTONE and Sheila Wellstone died as they campaigned throughout Minnesota for another term in the Senate. It was a tough campaign, a close campaign, a hard-fought campaign. And yet PAUL WELLSTONE never complained about that. He seemed to relish it.

One of the last things he told me on the floor of the Senate several weeks ago about this campaign was, with a sparkle in his eye: We are going to win this campaign. He said: BYRON, I have 4,000 volunteers—4,000 volunteers—who are going to be working election day in Minnesota for me, getting people to the polls, driving people, calling people.

That was so typical of PAUL WELLSTONE. It was always about citizen action, about people rising to the passion of an idea. That was typical PAUL WELLSTONE.

PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE were wonderful friends to many of us in the Senate, and our thoughts and prayers go to the family, the families of the pilots who lost their lives, the families of PAUL's daughter and the three staff people who were on the plane as well.

As my colleague from Minnesota, Senator DAYTON, said in what I thought was a wonderful tribute to his friend and colleague, all of us would be remiss if we did not say to PAUL's staff: PAUL would want first and foremost for us to recognize you today. PAUL attracted to his service in the Senate men and women with the burning in their soul to do good things, who cared about fairness and justice and who cared about public service.

All of us who work here know PAUL WELLSTONE had a wonderful staff, and they have been through some very difficult times, about as difficult as it can get for a Senate staff. Our thoughts and prayers go out to them and for strength as well.

Today let me for a moment remember PAUL and Sheila for their service to our country. This is a rather small community in the Senate—men and women who love this country, fellow travelers who want to make democracy work. What the American people see are some pitched battles during the day and the early evening hours in the middle of a debate in which there are different philosophies and ideas that clash on the Senate floor. What they do not see is we are colleagues and friends, first and foremost.

I think the entire Senate membership would say: We have, indeed, lost a couple of good friends, PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE. Our country has lost two tireless fighters for justice. The Senate has lost its strongest voice for those who do not have it so good in this country. And American politics has lost the true champion for the little guy.

If ever a man and wife were a team, it was PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE. They did everything together. Sheila's public service, as PAUL would be the first to tell you, was every bit as important as his. That public service was marked by a green bus, and that green bus meant in Minnesota and our part of the country citizen action, people empowerment, and something that was on the move, a mission, a campaign on the move.

It is true, as my colleague said, PAUL was different. He would not have been caught dead in Ferragamo shoes, even if he wanted them, and he did not. He was not a man to wear Brooks Brothers suits. He was short of stature and tall of ambition with a power and passion of ideas, as my colleague from Nevada just described, that would at the end stage of any debate leave him sitting at that chair with two more amendments to offer—the hour was late and patience was short. Imploring him made no difference. You could say: PAUL, PAUL, we are just out of time; can you just not offer one of these amendments? The answer was always the same: Absolutely not. I am here to offer this amendment. This amendment is important. I came here to do that work and there are people who depend on me to offer this amendment—people whose lives were changed because of this amendment.

It was always with PAUL: No. And we always turned away understanding the passion that burned in his soul to do the right thing, to do the thing he felt was important for our country.

PAUL was different in a much more significant way as well. In today's modern politics, it is so often the case that politicians with a sophisticated network of pollsters and advisers are able to evaluate exactly which way the wind is blowing, to be able to set their sail to get maximum capability from that wind. It is a constant job of tacking for some into or with that wind to find out exactly where the maximum wind will be. PAUL was not interested in sailing or winds. PAUL was only interested in the rudder. He set the rudder and he did not care where the wind was: This is the direction I am going and it does not matter whether it is a favorable wind or an unfavorable wind. This is where we are headed and this is why—very unusual in modern politics but also very refreshing.

I found it interesting that those newspapers that were not very good to his ideas in life, in death gave PAUL great credit for raising ideas, for standing by his principles, for never wavering and never causing for a moment any constituent anyplace to wonder where he stood. You knew where PAUL WELLSTONE stood.

There are two things, of a great many, that stand out in my mind. One day I sent around a memorandum to Senators saying we were going to visit a youth detention center in Maryland and I wanted to know if anyone wanted to come along. PAUL WELLSTONE called me and said: I would like to come.

The two of us, with some staff, went out to a youth detention center and spent the entire morning sitting in that youth detention center talking to kids, kids who had committed murder, kids who were drug addicted, kids who had been in the worst kind of trouble one could possibly imagine. Driving back to Capitol Hill after this visit, I once again got another glimpse of PAUL WELLSTONE's soul. He said: If someone had cared about those kids early in their lives they would not be there today. Someone needed to help those kids at the right moment, and we can do that in the Senate.

To PAUL, that visit was, how can we reach out to help people who need help at a time when they desperately need that help?

In the last couple of months, PAUL came up to me while we were in the well of the Senate, and he said: I was campaigning in Minnesota and I went to an independent auto repair shop, and the major automobile manufacturers would not give the computer codes to these independent auto repair shops. These small independents are telling me they cannot work on the new cars. They do not have the computer cards for the carburetors and all those things they have to have to work on those cars.

He said: That is unfair, and it is going to drive those folks out of business. This is going to kill the little guy.

He asked if I would hold a hearing on this in my Consumer Subcommittee. I said of course I will. We put together some information on it. The day of the hearing came and Senator WELLSTONE was to be the lead-off witness. That was not enough for Senator WELLSTONE. As was his want, in the way he did politics, the hearing room was packed. It was full of mechanics and independent repair shop owners from all across this country. I guess that hearing room holds probably 100 people, and there were 150 people there. PAUL had brought his people, the independent repair shop folks, to that hearing room as a demonstration of this problem, to say this problem ought to be fixed.

PAUL was the lead-off witness and as was typical with him, with great passion he made the case about the unfairness to the little guy, about the independent repair shops trying to make a living, and how what is happening is unfair to them.

About 3 weeks ago, right before we completed our work and left for the election, PAUL came up to me on the floor of the Senate during a vote. He was holding a sheet of paper. He was flashing this paper and saying: We won. His point was that the automobile manufacturers had reached an agreement with the independent repair shops, and that problem had gotten solved. For PAUL, it was about the little guy versus the big guy, about those who did not have the power and those who did.

It was always that he wanted to stand on the side of those who did not have the power, those who needed help. That was so much of PAUL WELLSTONE'S life.

There is much to say, and my colleagues, I am sure, will say it when we talk about his service to our country. It is sufficient now to say that one of our Senate desks is empty. The Senate has lost a wonderful friend.

I conclude by quoting Thomas Moore, if I might, and relate it to PAUL'S service:

Let fate do her worst; there are relics of joy,
Bright dreams of the past, which she cannot destroy;
Which come in the nighttime of sorrow and care,
And bring back the features that joy used to wear.
Long; long be my heart with such memories fill'd!
Like the vase, in which roses have once been distill'd
You may break, you may shatter the vase, if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang 'round it still.

PAUL WELLSTONE is no longer in the Senate, his desk is empty, but the passion of his ideas most surely will remain for years and years to come.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, today I reflect on the life of a friend and reflect on a political life. Politics is a fateful calling. The voters can end a political life in a few hours on any Tuesday. Promising public careers can be terminated abruptly. But like life itself, political life should be measured by its quality rather than its quantity. By that measure, PAUL WELLSTONE, a man small in stature, became a giant in this Senate.

This is not my desk in the Senate. My desk is the one directly in front of the desk where we honor the memory of PAUL WELLSTONE. So many times I had to leave my desk because when Senator PAUL WELLSTONE got wound up on an issue of great importance to him, you had better clear out. He had this famous desk with the long microphone cord, and he would roam all over this area, speaking with passion and commitment. I wanted to stand back a few steps to witness it because it was truly historic when he took to the Senate floor.

I do not think there were any routine Wellstone speeches. With all credit to his staff, I am sure he embellished them in the certain qualities that even the best staff person could not add. There was no routine nature about PAUL WELLSTONE in politics.

I remember when he first ran. People kind of laughed about the idea. This professor from a small college in Minnesota is going to run against an incumbent Senator?

We all know what that was about. This had to be a class project. He was going to go out and make his stand, make his speeches, and probably lose by an embarrassing margin. But then they started getting reports back from that early campaigning. This now famous green schoolbus, which I had a chance to see when I was in Minneapolis for the tribute to PAUL WELLSTONE, had a platform on the back where he would stand like Harry Truman and make his speeches.

I remember his television commercial which they replayed during tributes after he died in the plane crash. He said: You will have to listen very closely because I don't have much time. I don't have much money and I have to tell you everything. This is my home; this is where I work.

It was a classic presentation of what he was all about in just a few seconds.

At the end of the campaign after he won and surprised everyone, there is a photo of PAUL, Sheila, and Marcia when PAUL agreed to finally retire the pair of shoes he wore throughout the campaign. What a sorry pair of shoes. He was no slave to fashion, to say the least.

In his campaign in the Senate, I can recall he was admonished by a colleague to go home and change his shirt because it did not look like a Senator's shirt. He did not think of those things. Those things were so inconsequential to his view.

He thought about the important things, the really important things. He reminded us time and again of how those things are overlooked. You draw together 100 Senators across the United States, you put the national political agenda in front of us, and PAUL WELLSTONE found it hard to believe that we could miss so many important things.

Sheila was the same way. His wife Sheila, the unpaid Senator to Minnesota at his side, worked on issues such as domestic abuse, inviting all of us to come to an art center she had regularly to highlight what victims were expressing through their art in terms of domestic abuse.

We used to talk about PAUL WELLSTONE'S amendments on the floor. They were great amendments. Some of them did not get a great number of votes. We used to speak in the caucus about the so-called Wellstone amendments. We used to have competition to make sure that he got enough votes so it was not called a Wellstone amendment. And he said, I win some of these amendments. And he did. Without fail, every one of the amendments challenged every one of us to look at the national agenda and look at America from a different perspective.

We get caught up in the life of public service and forget the people that PAUL WELLSTONE never forgot. I think back to some of them. PAUL WELLSTONE did not make any bones about the fact that he opposed the Vietnam war. During the 1960s, when many of us were in college and that was a dominant issue of the time, he was opposed to that war. But you would find, as I did in his tribute in Minneapolis, the veterans groups coming out in large numbers to pay tribute to PAUL WELLSTONE. There was no separation between them. PAUL WELLSTONE opposed the war, but he did not oppose the warriors who came home. He became their champion in the Senate.

When people would bring up his own military record, or lack of it, or his own position on Vietnam, he would always be able to rally the veterans of Minnesota who would say, we are for PAUL WELLSTONE because he fought for us to make sure we were not forgotten when we came home. That is the kind of person he was.

I think of the debate on education in the Senate, the no child left behind bandwagon. I was on it. What a big bandwagon it was. It was the President, the leaders, the Democrats and the Republicans in the House and Senate, liberal and conservative alike. We would all be for no child left behind. But not PAUL WELLSTONE. PAUL WELLSTONE was the one voice saying, wait a minute, we may be going too far here. High-stakes testing for kids can destroy their lives in the future. Are we moving too fast without thinking about the children and what it could be doing to their lives? Again and again, PAUL WELLSTONE forced us all to slow down even as we were involved in some political movement that seemed to have great force behind us, to stop and think about the actual people affected, the children, the teachers, the families.

He was first and foremost a teacher himself, at Carlton College and in the Senate. Time and again, he taught us. He never taught us better than the lesson on mental health parity. PAUL WELLSTONE realized that our treatment of mental health in the United States of America in the 21st century is shameful. It is disgraceful. He told us over and over that we treat people with mental illness as if they are suffering from some curse rather than some illness. He begged us time and again to treat fairly people who suffer from mental illness.

I join with everyone here today, all the Members of the Senate who have given speeches and nice comments about PAUL WELLSTONE, all the members of our government, from the President on down, who said what a great man he was and great values he brought to public life. Members can prove it by passing this Wellstone-Domenici bill for mental health parity and do it on an expedited schedule. PAUL WELLSTONE, if he were here today, would say: Forget the speeches, forget the flowers; pass the bill, help some people. That is what government is supposed to be about. That is a challenge to us.

We ought to mark our calendar today. Here we are, November 12, thinking about the challenges this country is going to face. Instead, step back and say: Where will we be 2 or 3 months from now dealing with mental health parity? Will we have done enough? PAUL WELLSTONE led that fight in a way that was classic Wellstone.

In the debate he would know, many times, that the forces were against him, that he did not stand a chance. He would stand here with such passion and commitment and make these speeches, hour after hour, if necessary, always respectful of his opposition, always on the Senate floor, even for those who saw the world in completely different terms, but always committed to what he was fighting for.

They tell us the politics of PAUL WELLSTONE are now out of fashion. I don't believe that for a second. You ought to know that since PAUL WELLSTONE passed away, many in the Senate have been trading phone calls late at night in their homes talking about not only PAUL and the great loss of Sheila and Marcia and the three campaign workers and the two pilots, but reflecting on ourselves and why we are here. PAUL would like that. PAUL would like that his passing would cause us all to think a little bit harder about who will carry on his fight.

I have heard a lot of us in these conversations, my colleagues and myself, talking about what we need to do to make sure that voice is not silenced in the Senate, to make certain that PAUL WELLSTONE's passion and commitment live on. That is the greatest tribute of all.

For 6 years, I served in the Senate with PAUL WELLSTONE. For 2 years, he was over my shoulder at this Senate desk.

For every Member of the Senate, PAUL WELLSTONE will always be over our shoulder keeping an eye on what we do, listening to our speeches, asking us in real human terms whether we are forgetting someone in the process.

The victims who cannot afford lobbyists in Washington, DC, the poor and dispossessed who may not even have the will to vote, let alone to participate in this process, the people without the resources to be heard, who is going to speak for them? PAUL WELLSTONE did. Those who stand in tribute to his memory should make certain that voice is never silenced.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I will also say a few words about PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE. PAUL and Sheila were good friends of my wife Anne, my son John, and myself. We met shortly after they arrived in Washington for PAUL to take up his duties in the Senate. Our friendship grew over time. Friendship came easily to PAUL and to Sheila because they had a genuine interest in and a compassion for other people. So on a personal level, PAUL and Sheila will be greatly missed.

On a policy level, they will also be greatly missed in this Senate. PAUL believed strongly that government should and could help improve the lives of average people. He championed better education for our children, better access to health care, particularly mental health care, as my colleague from Illinois has described. He championed a decent wage for workers. Any issue that presented a choice between the public interest and a special interest, there was no question where PAUL stood.

Sheila was also a fierce advocate for policies in which she believed. Her focus for many years was on the problems of domestic violence, and she and PAUL helped spotlight that problem. They did much to put it on our national agenda. PAUL said what he believed. He voted his convictions, even when those convictions placed him in a small minority in the Senate. He was proud to proclaim himself a Liberal in an age where most Americans have been persuaded that liberal is a pejorative term.

The truth is that his views, when not distorted by his opponents, were very much endorsed by the majority of the Americans. His core belief was that those who are less fortunate should be helped to obtain the tools with which to succeed. That belief is shared by most in this great country. His service in the Senate was an effort to implement that belief.

When serving here in the Senate, one is always aware that the imperative to do what is right sometimes conflicts with the desire to be reelected. PAUL always chose to do what he considered right and damn the consequences. He came to the Senate with a clear intent to make a difference in the history of his nation, and he succeeded. The death of PAUL and Sheila and their daughter, their staff and pilots, was a great tragedy for our country. It was also a great tragedy for this Senate. The Senate will be a lesser place without PAUL WELLSTONE.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise today, along with my colleagues, to pay tribute to the memory of our tragically departed friend and colleague, Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, and to remember his life partner Sheila, their daughter, and the others who lost their lives in the plane crash.

We send our condolences and our prayers to the families of all of those who were involved.

Whenever Senator WELLSTONE came to the floor of the Senate to fight on behalf of our Nation's most vulnerable, to fight for economic fairness, for working men and women, to fight for quality public education and health care for all our children, can't you just hear his voice now—standing up over and over again to fight and to speak out in behalf of the people he represented—to protect our environment.

In thinking about Senator WELLSTONE, I thought of the words of Frederick Douglass in 1857 when he said:

> If there is no struggle, there is no progress. Those who profess to favor freedom and yet depreciate agitation want crops without plowing up the ground. They want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its many waters.

PAUL WELLSTONE was ready to fight for progress. And he was unafraid of the war that followed. In fact, he embraced it.

PAUL WELLSTONE believed the status quo can never be a cause but, rather, must be the constant casualty of time in any nation dedicated to equality and justice and freedom.

Did he win every battle? No. But the very fight of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE ennobled the Senate and enlightened this Nation by giving voice to the challenges that confront us.

I would like to read from a speech that Senator WELLSTONE gave to graduating students at Swarthmore College. The passion of PAUL's words reminds us of the shame of passivity, the passivity of standing back and watching millions of families slide into poverty, and our Nation's future slip away from them.

Senator WELLSTONE asked:

> How can it be that in the United States of America—today—at the peak of our economic performance—we are still being told that we cannot provide a good education for every child?
> We are still being told that we cannot provide good health care for every citizen.
> We are still being told that people can't look forward to jobs that they can support themselves and their children on.
> We're still being told that we cannot achieve the goal of having every five-year-old come to kindergarten ready to learn.
> How can it be that we are being told that we cannot do this at the peak of our economic performance?
> I say to you today that it is not right. It is not acceptable. We can do much better, and if not now, when? If we don't do this now, when will we do it as a nation?
> That is a betrayal of our heritage. The impoverishment of so many children is our national disgrace.

Senator WELLSTONE did not pull any punches. Yet he was not a cynic either. He believed that by giving wings to the nobler angels of our Nation, we could place progress in the wind.

In the same speech I was quoting from, Senator WELLSTONE closed, urging people to get involved with politics and public service and become those nobler angels whose wings would give flight to change and to justice. He said:

> I do not believe the future will belong to those who are content with the present.
> I do not believe the future will belong to the cynics, or to those who stand on the sideline.
> The future will belong to those who have passion, and to those who are willing to make the personal commitment to make our country better.
> The future will belong to those who believe in the beauty of their dreams.

We will miss PAUL WELLSTONE's leadership, his voice on this Senate floor. We will miss the beauty of his dreams of an America where the most vulnerable among us are valued, where all of our children are cherished, and where no one who gets up and goes to work in the morning goes to sleep at night in poverty.

But, PAUL, while we will miss you coming to the floor of the Senate to share those dreams, I promise you those dreams will not die.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. I wish the Presiding Officer a good afternoon.

Mr. President, I, too, would like to lend a few comments to one we fondly regarded as the "Little Giant," Senator PAUL WELLSTONE.

I, obviously, had an opportunity over the years to converse, discuss, debate, agree—occasionally disagree—with our friend who truly believed in his cause, a cause that was perhaps more liberal than my own, but a cause that was reflected on what makes the Senate so unique; that is, the cause of the balance that we have, more or less a mainstream of thought that prevails in the Senate. But in many cases it is brought about by those who have very active views, whether they be liberals or conservatives.

But PAUL WELLSTONE did represent, if you will, the pendulum in the Senate. His contribution was one of activism, of standing for the underdog, of reflecting on the needs of some we can never properly repay; specifically, the veterans of this Nation who have given so much so that we can live in the freedom of our democracy.

As I have reflected, along with Senator STEVENS and Representative YOUNG, because of the vast distances between our State of Alaska and Washington, DC, and the tribulations of long flights back and forth, and the ever-increasing pressures to make dates, particularly during campaigns, having just run a campaign myself, why, I can recall the unpleasant evening flights in bad weather, with a recognition that people expect you to be present at a given time. And it is the demands that are constant pressures to try to fulfill obligations that cause each Member of both the House and the Senate to live, perhaps, on the edge. Unfortunately, that edge results in additional exposure that is associated with accidents. And we have seen that in the passing of our good friend PAUL WELLSTONE, who, again, to me, is referred to as the "Little Giant": small in stature but significant in what he believed. And his contribution, again, I think is measurable in one sense by those who knew him but in another sense by the legacy he leaves in this body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to our colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE.

As with the loss of anyone so vital, so full of energy, and so dear to us, it is hard to believe that PAUL is really gone. But as with a brother, or a father, or a great teacher, even if they have died, they leave a part of themselves with those who carry on. They are never really gone.

I first met PAUL before either of us had been elected to the Senate. I was meeting with different people as I considered a run for the Senate, and I heard about this professor in Minnesota who was planning to run in 1990. I had a chance to visit him at his home. When we met, we laughed at the idea that the two of us or either of us, would ever have been elected to the Senate.

But then PAUL went on to run a terrific campaign, without a lot of money, but with a whole lot of energy. When he won, he helped me and others to believe that we could do the same. I will always be grateful to him for that example, as I am sure are many others across the country who were inspired by PAUL and the exceptional life that he led.

So now we know that whenever a candidate runs a scrappy populist campaign, PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

PAUL WELLSTONE believed in clean elections. PAUL was a strong, stalwart ally over the years that we served together in the Senate, working for campaign finance reform. He was an original cosponsor of the first McCain-Feingold bill—one of a handful of us, along with Senators Claiborne Pell and FRED THOMPSON and he was there all the way. Some have said that the law that we enacted this year went too far. Characteristically, PAUL thought that it did not go far enough.

PAUL WELLSTONE wrote: "The way in which money has come to dominate politics is the foremost ethical issue of politics of our time. We need to invite ordinary citizens back into American politics to work for what is right for our nation."

Whenever Americans reform our election campaigns, PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

PAUL WELLSTONE said: "I don't represent the big oil companies. I don't represent the big pharmaceutical companies. I don't represent the Enrons of this world. But you know what, they already have great representation in Washington. It's the rest of the people that need it." That's what PAUL WELLSTONE said.

So, whenever there are voices standing up for the little guy, PAUL WELLSTONE's voice will be there.

There is a role that some Senators play of leading where not many follow because they know that it is right. PAUL WELLSTONE had the courage of his convictions. He was not afraid to stand alone. Now that he is gone, there may come more times when some of us will be counted as the only vote against something.

But whenever a Senator stands alone in the well of the Senate and casts a solitary vote because that's what he or she believes, that Senator won't really be alone because PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

There is a role that some Senators play of reminding the rest of us of what is right, even when we don't necessarily like to hear it. It has been said many times, and it is nonetheless true, that like Paul Douglas, Phil Hart, and Paul Simon before him, PAUL WELLSTONE was the conscience of the Senate.

Whenever political expediency pulls us to vote one way, but our consciences pull us back the other, PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

PAUL WELLSTONE was a dear, sweet man, and a good friend to those of us who knew him. Yes, he had a puckish grin and a ready sense of humor. His passing brings a tear to our eyes.

But whenever we think of that smile of his, PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

The Bible says: "Justice, justice shall you pursue." PAUL didn't need to be told. That was who he was. PAUL WELLSTONE believed in justice with every fiber of his being.

PAUL fought for justice for children who didn't have enough to eat. He fought for environmental justice, even for the poor side of town. He fought for social justice when it came to access to health care. He fought for economic justice when it came to a fair minimum wage and the ability of working families to protect themselves under the bankruptcy law. And he fought for justice among nations, and for peace. PAUL WELLSTONE was the very embodiment of justice.

And so, PAUL WELLSTONE, here on the Senate floor, there is a hole in our hearts. We will miss you, dear friend.

But we will still look for you. For wherever it is on this Senate floor, at a political rally, or at a town hall meeting somewhere on a cold, windy day in the heartland of America whenever someone speaks for justice, PAUL WELLSTONE will be there.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, PAUL WELLSTONE was an extraordinary leader with a common touch. His dedication to the well-being of average Americans was unparalleled in Congress.

He believed all of our citizens, no matter how humble their beginnings, or difficult their plight, had an equal right to happy, healthy, and full lives. He always made the time to hear the real needs of the people, and he always took the time to speak up for them in the U.S. Senate.

For PAUL, core beliefs were not something to be compromised. He understood as well as anyone in this body the give-and-take of legislation. But we always knew his values were at the forefront of every battle, and the people of Minnesota could count on him to fight for them with every ounce of his considerable energy and ability.

PAUL and I were seatmates. His desk is right beside mine on the Senate floor. But we were more than neighbors. PAUL was our conscience, our guiding light. He turned overlooked needs and forgotten causes into real hopes for millions of Americans. For them, PAUL WELLSTONE was their champion, their Senator.

Earlier this year, Senator WELLSTONE chaired a hearing in the Labor Committee on an issue of great concern to American workers. A group of low-wage men and women were so excited by the prospect of the hearing that they took a day off from work, boarded buses, and headed for the hearing. When they arrived, they found the room full and the door barred. But Senator WELLSTONE heard about the workers who were waiting in the hallway, unable to get in. He invited them in and seated them on the dais among the Senators attending the hearing. For PAUL, this was the way it was intended to be. For him, there was no distance, no barrier between the people and their elected representatives.

Senator WELLSTONE did his homework. He knew the facts and he also knew the reality of everyday life for the people he cared for so deeply and served so well. When the Senate debated education policy, we knew PAUL understood the issues thoroughly. We also knew PAUL had spent more time visiting the public schools than any other Senator. He knew the challenges firsthand because he had taken the time to listen to parents, teachers, and schoolchildren so he could be a true voice for them in Washington.

He taught us all by his example that Americans face challenges together. He was the embodiment of e pluribus unum, that out of many peoples in America, we are one Nation. He lived every moment of every day fighting to make our Nation even stronger, ever the beacon of opportunity for all of our citizens.

PAUL, we will miss you. You and Sheila and Marcia leave an extraordinary legacy for millions of Americans to honor, to cherish, and to carry on. Your outstanding contributions to the Senate, to Minnesota, and to the Nation will always be remembered.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FEINGOLD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, it is with a very heavy heart that all of us gather in the Chamber that will miss one of our own. It was with a very heavy heart we received the news on that snowy, icy day that we had lost, while flying in northern Minnesota, a wonderful companion and colleague and, along with him, his life's companion, and part of that family—his daughter.

This freshman Senator had observed this Senator from Minnesota who had such energy and, along with it, such happiness. I can still see PAUL WELLSTONE thrusting in the air those short, little jabs, while at the same time having that wry smile on his face, as he would teach us the way we should be as Senators—advocating for those who could not advocate for themselves, for those who could not hire with unlimited resources. He was there to stand and represent those folks.

I went to Minnesota in August to do what I could for PAUL WELLSTONE in a race that, interestingly, as November 5 approached—and PAUL was so concerned about what was going to be the effect of his vote on the Iraq resolution, the fact he voted his conscience, the fact he stood up as the little giant against what was otherwise considered the tide. The fact he did that resonated among his constituents in Minnesota. We saw the result of that in the polls, for PAUL had jumped up from an even race. He was up five, six, seven points before that fateful day his life was taken from us.

I think back to that time in August I had gone out there to campaign for PAUL. It was a time of mourning in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area because a lady police officer had just had her life snuffed out in an unusual kind of murder, where it was unsuspected. I went with PAUL and Sheila that night to several events, including back to the source of that crime, at a project where so many of the community leaders had turned out. I watched PAUL as he interacted with those grieving constituents, as they all came together in a resolve to heal the wounds in that community and bring the races together, instead of dividing them, as so often might have been the case in a very unfortunate circumstance where a police officer had lost her life.

I went to what was called the "national night out"—a remembrance of what communities can do in coming together.

I went to two or three such events on that evening I visited with PAUL and Sheila. I watched the interaction of him with Minnesotans. I saw that it was the same PAUL WELLSTONE that I saw interacting with Senators in this Chamber, in our caucuses, in our luncheon meetings, in the cloakroom, and in the committee meetings. It was the same friendly, highly intelligent man, always offering that smile, getting from place to place with that limp in his gait as a result of an old wrestling injury. And he was so attractive. He was attractive to us as a friend and a colleague. He was attractive to the folks of Minnesota as their Senator.

I went to their home, a modest, very comfortable, very appropriately appointed duplex townhouse, close in so he could be where his constituents were. It was easy access for him, even though with that limp; it had a set of stairs, at least two, if not three stories. It was so comfortable as a retreat for him, made so by his lifelong companion Sheila, who was at his side throughout that campaign and who was at his side throughout his professional career, including his career in the Senate.

Then when I was in Minnesota, I talked to his kids. This is not his immediate family kids. This was the extension of PAUL WELLSTONE, the professor, the extension of PAUL WELLSTONE, the Senator, who had legions of young people, some in their middle years, who went door to door telling why those Minnesotans should vote and continue him in the Senate.

I saw their conviction as I talked to them basically to share a number of stories I had as a Congressman going door to door. A lot of those experiences we shared were quite humorous, some of the unexpected experiences when one goes knocking on doors. I explained to them, with a bit of overstatement, that western civilization depended on what they were doing, going door to door. We all had a good laugh about that.

They were committed. They were committed to PAUL WELLSTONE. They were committed for the kind of person he represented, and they were doing the job and they were very effective. Their number had multiplied many times over so that as it came to that fateful day, there were legions of some 4,000 of those young people who were canvassing Minnesota.

That says a lot about the kind of person PAUL WELLSTONE was and how his memory will live; that young people believed enough in him that they would spend all day in a thankless job of going door to door.

I remember so well the PAUL WELLSTONE we loved around here. He was not afraid to take on any foe. He was not afraid to take on any subject where he felt he could offer something of substance to the discussion, and as far as this Senator is concerned, it often made the difference because it was done with dignity, it was done with passion, it was done with energy, and his orations were done with great conviction.

That is a great example. That is a great role model for all of us. We will miss him deeply.

I remember when I came to the Minnesota airport for that memorial service. Someone met me at the gate and escorted me to the place where we were all to huddle up and then board the buses. As I walked in to that waiting room, what stared me in the face was a simple poster that said: WELLSTONE for Senate. I remember almost having my breath taken away as I realized that he was not going to be with us in body anymore. But he certainly will continue with us in spirit.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the Senate is greatly diminished with the passing of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE. As we see the bouquet of flowers on his desk, we can see PAUL in action, speaking out, speaking up indefatigable on the issues of concern to him.

He undertook a very difficult campaign back in 1990 against the odds, against a popular incumbent Senator. He was able to mobilize students, activists, people who believed in what he believed in because he was always a man with a cause. All the time he had a point. He did not mind being a dissenter.

People who may be listening to this session of the Senate do not know, but there is a little card at the desk on each side, Republicans and Democrats. When the Senators come in and vote, there is a check. It is not easy, when, say, there are 50 members of the party and 49 checks are on one side, to vote against the 49, to have your name stand out in marked contrast as a dissenter, but PAUL WELLSTONE did not mind that a bit.

I believe in the history of our country the dissenters are vitally important, sometimes more important than the majority. Oliver Wendell Holmes, a Supreme Court Justice, was a prime example. He did not mind speaking out in dissent. And then he got another Supreme Court Justice, Louis Brandeis, to join him. So then instead of 1 to 8, it was 2 to 7. The brainpower of the 2 was characteristically better than the 7. For that matter, the brainpower of that one, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, was greater than the 8 on many occasions.

Plessy v. Ferguson was a decision establishing the principle of separate but equal, having segregation in America, in a decision shortly before the turn of the 20th century, I believe in 1896. John Marshall Harlan was the one dissenter. That dissent became a clarion call for Brown v. Board of Education. Similarly, I think the dissents that Senator WELLSTONE registered have the potential to become a majority point of view.

It was said earlier today, and I think with real meaning, that the legislation to establish parity for mental illness with physical illness would be an appropriate tribute for Senator PAUL WELLSTONE. That legislation came within a hair's breadth of being passed in the spring of 2001 on an appropriations bill.

Technically, we are not supposed to legislate on an appropriations bill, but that rule is honored and then breached very often, maybe not more often than it is observed but it is breached very frequently.

We had passed it through the Labor, Health, Human Services and Education Subcommittee which I had chaired. It was a health bill. Senator DOMENICI was the principal champion on the Republican side, and Senator WELLSTONE was the principal champion on the Democratic side. I was long a cosponsor of the matter. In chairing the conference, we pushed very hard. It came within one vote on the House side—we had the Senate—of getting that legislation passed.

It ought to be passed as a tribute to Senator WELLSTONE. It also ought to be passed for the benefit of the people who suffer from mental illness, which is every bit as debilitating as a physical illness.

On October 25, I was campaigning, as I think most people were. I had just come from a political rally in Reading, PA, where Vice President CHENEY had spoken for Congressman GEKAS who was running in a hotly contested election against Congressman TIM HOLDEN, two incumbents pitted against one another. I turned on the radio at about 1:30 eastern time and was shocked to hear the news that Senator WELLSTONE's plane had gone down. It brought memories of the plane that went down on April 3, 1991, with Senator John Heinz, a vibrant, young Senator who had great potential, as did Senator PAUL WELLSTONE.

Flying small planes is an occupational hazard and everybody in this Chamber, all 100 of us, as well as the 435 Members in the other Chamber, and many other legislators and governmental officials, climb into small airplanes every other day. We all hold our breath as to whether we will be successful on the flight. Regrettably, we fly in bad weather, which sometimes we should not do but there is always a big crowd waiting and always some reason to finish.

It was a great tragedy. PAUL's wife Sheila was with him in the plane. One seldom saw PAUL in the Halls of Congress without Sheila. She was not on the floor of the Senate, but she was with him constantly, holding hands, a very devoted couple. Their daughter Marcia was with them, also devoted in the campaign, a brilliant young woman at the age of 33.

Senator WELLSTONE will be sorely missed in the Senate. There are many PAUL WELLSTONE stories. I will mention one. I was managing the appropriations bill for Labor, Health, Human Services and Education. Senator WELLSTONE was in the Chamber bright and early. We started at 9:30. He had an amendment. Sometimes it is hard to get amendments up onto the floor. His amendment provided that no Member of Congress should have a health insurance policy at Government expense that was superior to what every other American had available to him or her.

When that amendment was brought up, it was through the distinguished senior Senator from Minnesota, who was smiling broadly. It was a very extraordinary amendment to make. It is pretty hard to make an amendment like that stick because it would have made President Clinton's national health insurance policy look entrepreneurial to the nth degree. It did not pass, even though the Democrats controlled the House and the Senate. Senator Mitchell, the majority leader in 1993, was a major proponent of health care, but the Clinton plan with its bureaucracy went down to defeat. To have a requirement that no Member of Congress could have a health plan that was superior in any way to what the Government provided for every citizen was really an extraordinary idea, to characterize it very mildly.

I did not have to debate Senator WELLSTONE for very long before there was an avalanche of Senators who came to the Chamber. He really struck a nerve, and he struck a nerve because many people think that Senators and Members of the House have health insurance which is paid for by the Government, which is not true. We pay for the health service which we have, but we also have additional health service policies, Blue Cross and Blue Shield. To have legislation limiting what a Member could have to that which every other citizen would have at Government expense would be a great inducement to pass a widespread health insurance benefit, and perhaps we ought to do that. That was Senator WELLSTONE's idea. He debated it with fervor and intensity. It was an extraordinary debate. I do not think he got too many votes for his plan, but that did not diminish it in any way. That is the great quality of a dissenter. This Chamber will not be the same without Senator WELLSTONE.

In the absence of any other Senator on the floor, I ask unanimous consent that my comments on homeland security be given as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. SPECTER are printed in today's RECORD under "Morning Business.")

Mr. SPECTER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking all of our colleagues who have already spoken here on the Senate floor this afternoon in tribute to our dear friend, PAUL WELLSTONE. I join in the sentiments and would like to extend my sympathy and my prayers to the entire WELLSTONE family and the families and friends of the crew and staff members who also lost their loved ones just a few short weeks ago.

PAUL WELLSTONE, his wife Sheila, and their daughter Marcia, left quite a legacy. These are family who were working so closely together to help PAUL in his reelection bid. So as we pay tribute to PAUL today we must also, I believe, remember the dedication and the love of his wife and his daughter—his entire family. Each one of us understands our elections are many times a family effort. We see our spouses, we see our daughters and sons go out and campaign and spend time with us and spend time in other parts of our States. So I think we all can relate to this. In a sense, it makes this tragedy even harder for all of us to bear, to think this was not just a loss of PAUL, but also of his wife and his daughter.

The great English poet Alfred Tennyson wrote of a dear friend who died suddenly:

> God's finger touched him, and he slept.

Recently God's hand touched our friend PAUL WELLSTONE. Now he sleeps and now we mourn. The Senate will really never be the same without PAUL WELLSTONE. Not only did we lose a colleague, but we also lost a friend, a good man, an ethical man, a leader, a true champion—a champion of the causes and the issues he believed in so passionately.

As many of my colleagues have expressed already, PAUL had a kind of drive and passion and spirit that was really unequaled in this body. But we will also miss his kindness, his resolve, and his unbelievable energy—energy he brought to every single task he undertook. Whatever it was, PAUL did it with sincerity and he did it with great passion. PAUL got things done. He was effective. That effectiveness came because of his energy, because of his drive, because of his determination, and it came because he understood what he believed in. He understood what he cared about. He understood what was important.

It also came about because he could get along with people from both sides of the aisle. He really transcended politics in that respect. He knew people. He understood them. It was evident he cared about them. You never had any doubt when PAUL WELLSTONE asked you how you were doing, how you were feeling, how your wife was, that he actually meant it. He actually cared.

Arthur Ashe, the famous athlete, who also died too young, once said: "True heroism is remarkably sober, very undramatic. It is not the urge to surpass all others at whatever cost, but the urge to serve others at whatever cost."

That was PAUL WELLSTONE. That was his mission. No cost was too great in his eyes when it came to protecting the lives of those in this society who could not protect themselves—as he said, "the little people", the poor people, the people who needed someone to help them. He worked so hard and so tirelessly and with such commitment to protect children, the elderly, the mentally ill. I had the privilege of working closely with PAUL on a number of the legislative initiatives he cared so much about—the kind of initiatives that were intended to protect and improve peoples' lives, like job training—the bill he and I spent an awful lot of time working on—and mental health courts bills.

PAUL also cared deeply about the future of America's children. He wanted to ensure that every single child in this country received a quality education.

He was instrumental in making sure that our transition to teaching initiative was included in last year's education reform law. And, in fact, at the time of PAUL's death, he and I were getting ready to introduce a bill to expand the childcare loan forgiveness program to include preschool teachers. I intend to go forward and introduce that bill tomorrow. I know that is what PAUL would have wanted. And, in his memory, I would like to rename that bill "The Paul Wellstone Early Educator Loan Forgiveness Program." This legislation is just one of so many examples of what PAUL stood for and cared so passionately about.

It wasn't too long ago that this Senate lost another friend and colleague. That man was a dear friend of mine. That man was Senator Paul Coverdell. I was recently looking back at the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at some of those firery and empassioned speeches that PAUL WELLSTONE used to give on this Senate floor, and I came across a speech he gave in tribute to Senator Coverdell following his death.

I was really struck by his remarks, because what he said in those few words about Senator Coverdell really capture today what we in this Senate think about PAUL WELLSTONE.

I would like to take just a moment to read to my colleagues what PAUL WELLSTONE said on this floor on July 19, 2000:

> Mr. President, I want to speak about my colleague, Senator Coverdell. I know other Senators have. I absolutely have nothing rehearsed. There are many Senators who will speak about Senator Coverdell probably in a more profound and moving way than I can.
> There is one moment I want to remember about Senator Coverdell because this small story tells a large story. We had had a major debate about the Colombia aid package. Senator Coverdell and I were in a debate. We did not agree. It was a pretty good debate back and forth. I know from time to time during the debate I would reach over and touch his hand and say something to the effect: I just cannot believe you said this; this is wrong—something like that.
> At the end of the debate, I said, because I believed it and believe it: Senator Coverdell is a really good Senator.
> He smiled and touched my hand and said: Senator Wellstone is a really good Senator.

I do not know if the latter part is true, but the point is that is the way he was. That is the kind of Senator he was.

That is also the kind of Senator Paul Wellstone was.

PAUL WELLSTONE in that tribute went on to say this about our friend, Senator Coverdell:

> We talk about civility. He was just a beautiful person. I really enjoyed him. We need a lot of Senators like Senator Coverdell: Paul, you are wrong on the issues, but you are a really good person.
> The Senate has lost a wonderful person and a wonderful Senator, and the United States of America has lost a wonderful person and a wonderful Senator.

To PAUL WELLSTONE today, I say that you, too, were a wonderful person. You were a wonderful Senator.

Today on this floor, we honor what PAUL WELLSTONE stood for, what he believed in, and what he accomplished here in this Senate. As a public servant, PAUL touched the lives of his family, his friends and colleagues in the Senate, his constituents in his home State of Minnesota, and the lives of millions of people throughout the United States.

I will not forget PAUL WELLSTONE—none of us will. He is deeply missed and will always be remembered.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as we have reconvened today, there is a void in this Chamber. The untimely passing of our friend and colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE, brings a sadness to the entire Senate family.

We are also touched by the loss of PAUL's wife Sheila, his daughter Marcia, members of his campaign staff: Will McLaughlin, Tom Lapic, and Mary McEvoy, and the two pilots: Captains Richard Conry and Michael Guess.

When I heard Senator WELLSTONE's plane had gone down in Minnesota, it was difficult for me to convey my thoughts. I thought of the countless hours I have spent, as a Senator now for 34 years, in small planes, flying around my State on campaigns and on official business.

I recalled the day in December of 1978 when the plane carrying my wife Ann and myself and five friends, coming from Juneau to Anchorage, crashed at the Anchorage Airport. The time that followed was a difficult one for my family. The death of a spouse, a colleague, a loved one, or a friend is never easy, but to lose that person in an accident, particularly one you survive, is worse because you will always know you never said goodbye.

It was an ironic twist when I discovered PAUL WELLSTONE's plane crashed in the same city, Eveleth, MN, where Alaska Congressman Nick Begich was born. As the Senate knows, Representative Begich and the House majority leader, Hale Boggs, were killed when the airplane in which they were flying was lost over Alaska in 1972.

It is safe to say—and I think this is no surprise to anyone—that PAUL WELLSTONE and I did not see eye to eye on much, but I respected PAUL for fighting for what he believed and for his personal toughness that never let physical problems slow him down.

We spent much time together on the subway going back and forth and became great friends. As a matter of fact, PAUL and his wife came over to our home. Catherine and I were pleased to have dinner with him and Sheila on a personal basis.

I admired PAUL's commitment to his causes, particularly to his dedication to mental and physical health parity. As a young boy, I helped raise a cousin who was challenged by mental retardation, and I know the difficulties faced by those in that community. Senator WELLSTONE's compassion and determination has made a difference in many families across our Nation, many lives of people such as my cousin.

Likewise, Senator WELLSTONE's wife Sheila was a great advocate. Her work on behalf of domestic abuse victims helped many women and children begin life anew, with the hope and encouragement that came from Sheila's work.

Catherine and I cannot put into words the sympathy and sorrow we feel for PAUL's family for the loss of their parents, their siblings, and their grandparents.

Mr. President, grief is a process that helps heal the heart. We will always miss PAUL, but we honor his memory by keeping after our business, as he did—testing our ideas on the campaign trail and here on the Senate floor. My friend, PAUL WELLSTONE, would want it that way.

Thank you very much, Mr. President.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President,

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea,
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark;
For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

Mr. President, one of our number has gone from our midst.

I know that by now he has seen his Pilot face to face because PAUL WELLSTONE has crossed the bar. He was not tall; yet mere feet and inches are no measure of a human heart. He could not be cool or aloof, for he knew that it is passion and commitment that drive human progress. He was not without infirmity, but the limitations of the flesh never hold down a robust and tenacious spirit.

PAUL WELLSTONE fairly burned with exuberance for life and for the causes that he cared about. We all heard PAUL WELLSTONE as he spoke about those causes that he cared so much about. He always spoke with passion. A visit to his office is illustrative. Over the entrance to his private office is a huge enlargement of a snapshot of his former, now deceased, chief of staff, Mike Epstein. Most of us remember Mike Epstein, who used to be seen back here on the bench to my left as he sat listening to PAUL and waiting with PAUL. PAUL WELLSTONE did not forget. He did not forget Mike Epstein.

Once inside PAUL'S office, over the doorway three large photos can be seen of the faces of battered women. PAUL WELLSTONE often spoke of those battered women in our population. He did not forget.

PAUL was a man of causes. He was a teacher. He was a man who stayed true to the things in which he believed. I can almost see him back there now beside the flowers that have so thoughtfully been placed on his desk as a token of our remembrance of him. I often heard him use a metaphor. He called it an old Jewish proverb. He would use it again and again, in speech after speech. He would say, "You can't dance at two weddings at the same time." Senator DON NICKLES is on the floor, and he remembers this and has indicated so by a smile. I never quite knew what PAUL WELLSTONE meant when he said that you can't dance at two weddings at the same time. I never tried it, but I never was at two weddings at the same time.

When he said, "You can't dance at two weddings at the same time," he meant that one must not be false. That is the key. One must not be false. He meant that one cannot be all things to all people. He was thinking of the words of Shakespeare, who said: To thine own self be true. Thy can't now then be false to any man.

He meant that one cannot say one thing and then do another. And he meant that one cannot say the same thing to two different people and mean two different things. It is a fundamental lesson and has special application to those of us who toil in the ruined fields of what passes for politics today. You cannot dance at two weddings at the same time.

PAUL WELLSTONE died tragically, but he lived heroically. He ran uphill against the odds and enjoyed and gloried in the experience. He was unique, he was priceless, and he was quite irreplaceable.

I shall miss him, and we all shall miss his courage.

I was most endeared to PAUL WELLSTONE in the last days of his life. One day as we stood in the room together—we Democrats—and discussed the resolution concerning the Iraq war—which may come and which in my present thinking is likely to come—we stood over in the corner room there and the majority leader was there. My Democratic colleagues—most of them—were there; PAUL WELLSTONE was there. We discussed the Iraq resolution. I remember PAUL WELLSTONE as he stood and said to us, his Democratic colleagues:

> You all do what you must, but I am going to vote against the resolution. But don't worry about me. I will explain it to my people. I think I am doing the right thing, and I believe my people will feel also that it is right. But if they don't, they will vote. However that vote comes, whatever that decision is, I will live with it.

I thought that took a great deal of courage. Here was a Senator who was running for reelection and he had already reached a decision in his mind that he was going to take a stand, and that was going to be a principled stand. His future in politics could go one way or another; but regardless PAUL WELLSTONE was going to take that position. He was going to go to the people with it. He was willing to debate it with the people, and he felt that in the final analysis the people would uphold him in the position he had taken.

There were not any ifs, ands, or buts. That was a position he took right over in that room, in the corner, near the elevator on this floor. That, more than anything I saw in PAUL WELLSTONE'S life when he was here in our midst for 12 years, that, more than anything else, impressed me. I thought: Oh, if all Senators were like that. If all public officials were like that, who would take a principled stand, state the reasons for that stand to the electorate, and let them make their choice. Of course, he wanted to come back to the Senate, but he knew very well that particular stand, in the climate in which we find ourselves, might mean he would not be reelected. And in the minds of a lot of people, the likelihood would be perhaps he would not be reelected. He took that stand. That told me something about that man I had never seen before in him.

That is the kind of courage that is found in men and women who are not only willing but are proud to stand up for their convictions and win or lose. They are determined to do it that way because they feel that is for the best interest of their country. That is the way PAUL WELLSTONE felt. But that, more than anything else, watching him and listening to him on that occasion and knowing he was heading out of here in a very close election, which at that point he probably was a little behind—and I think he was. But he went. He made that decision. He voted that way. He went to the people and, from what I can understand, he was winning. His points were going up. He was going up. So the people, even though some of them—many of them—may not have agreed with PAUL, admired a man of conviction. That is the kind of man they wanted in this body.

I will always remember PAUL WELLSTONE for that demonstration of conviction, that demonstration of integrity, that demonstration of courage, that demonstration of character. So his spirit, as long as I am here, will always permeate this Chamber.

I never was close to PAUL WELLSTONE. I cannot say I am close to a great many Senators here. That is not their fault. We are all busy people. But that drew me close to PAUL WELLSTONE.

We owe a great debt to the people of his beloved Minnesota and his wonderful family for sending him to serve with us for a time. I fully believe if PAUL WELLSTONE had lived, he would have won that race. That Senator we would have had back.

I went to that memorial service. I went to Minnesota. I went there when Hubert Humphrey died, and I went to the memorial service for PAUL WELLSTONE. I was at that dreg gathering. I was struck by the size of that tremendous gathering of people singing songs, speaking. I wondered about this man, what kind of hold he must have had on the hearts of the people of Minnesota to draw a huge audience like that in a memorial service.

I also believe in my heart that the memorial service veered off on a path that probably was not intended, and I felt badly about some of the things that happened there—about the treatment, not only impolitic, but the discourteous treatment that was accorded to the minority leader, Mr. LOTT. I did not know about the treatment by which he had been embarrassed. I did not know about that until after it was over. But I felt as time went on that I was in a strange meeting, and I believe that but for the veering off course by that meeting Walter Mondale would have been elected. In any event, that is in the past and cannot be revisited.

We will all miss PAUL WELLSTONE. I do not think that he would have wanted things to happen as they did in that particular meeting, but that being said, I think PAUL WELLSTONE'S spirit will live on.

I regret the strange twist of fate that took his wife and his daughter and the members of his staff to their untimely ends. But as to PAUL, we owe him a great debt. I think I can best say his spirit will live on by repeating the words of Thomas Moore:

> Let fate do her worst, there are relics of joy,
> Bright dreams of the past that she cannot destroy,
> That come in the night-time of sorrow and care,
> And bring back the features that joy used to wear.
> Long be my heart with such memories filled,
> Like the vase in which roses have once been distilled,
> You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will,
> But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, it is a sad occasion that we see flowers on the desk of PAUL WELLSTONE memorializing his service to this country and to the Senate.

PAUL WELLSTONE served very ably in the Senate for 12 years. I had the pleasure of working with him, and I had the pleasure of opposing him on many occasions. Many times, I would always say in the heat of the battle that PAUL WELLSTONE had intensity, he had passion, and he had conviction. As Senator BYRD mentioned, those are qualities and traits that are very much needed in the Senate.

October 25, when PAUL WELLSTONE was killed along with his wife Sheila and his daughter Marcia, in addition to three staff members and a couple of pilots, was a real tragedy to the Senate family. Unfortunately, we have lost a lot of Senators through airplane crashes. Many of us have been in planes under questionable circumstances. It is a tragedy we hate to see. I remember receiving the phone call and the words were "oh, no," when it was confirmed.

As many of our colleagues, I went to Minnesota for the memorial service on October 29 to express our condolences and sympathy on the loss of a colleague. We wanted to show support to his family, friends and constituents and say that, yes, he was a valuable Member of the Senate and we hated to lose him. To lose him in such a tragic and unexpected way is really a loss for the entire country.

I remember very well when Senator WELLSTONE made one of his last speeches. It was a tribute to Senator HELMS. Philosophically, they were probably as opposed as they could be, but they were always gentlemen and they always conducted themselves as Senators. Like Senator HELMS, every time we had a debate with Senator WELLSTONE that we disagreed on we always would shake hands, win or lose, and we did both. We won some battles, we lost some battles, but we were always friends and we were all colleagues.

I remember PAUL WELLSTONE being inducted to the National Wrestling Hall of Fame in Stillwater, OK—an outstanding American and a great tribute. This happened in the year 2000, but he was in the class of 2001, a class that is very unique.

Our colleague, Senator John Chafee, also deceased, was inducted into the National Wrestling Hall of Fame, as well as the current Speaker of the House, DENNIS HASTERT. They were a very special class of competitors who competed not only on the wrestling mat but also on the floor of the Senate and in the House of Representatives.

PAUL WELLSTONE earned our respect and our gratitude. We miss him, and we wish to communicate to his family, his friends, his associates, and his staff members, that we respected PAUL WELLSTONE. We appreciate his service to this country, to his State, and to the Senate. PAUL WELLSTONE will be missed by all of us who had the pleasure of calling him our colleague.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAYTON). The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I join with my colleagues in taking these few moments to pay tribute to an extraordinary man and a great Senator. It is hard to come back to the Senate floor this afternoon and not be overcome by a sense of loss because this desk behind me, with the flowers, will never again serve as the launching pad for one of PAUL WELLSTONE's memorable and impassioned speeches.

Every American who shared PAUL's determination to make our country all that it should be, all that it can be, all that PAUL thought it must be, felt that same sense of loss. The Americans who only knew PAUL WELLSTONE through tuning into C-SPAN or seeing the evening news, watching that energy flow, those arms flail about, that pacing up and down, may not have known the man but they too saw, as we his colleagues saw, that deep abiding love of our country. That is what motivated PAUL WELLSTONE. He would come on to this floor, sometimes bursting through those doors, having to speak out, making it clear that there was some injustice that had to be righted, some problem that had to be solved, in order for us all to be the best we could be.

That wrestling spirit that never let go really was with him in every encounter. He was a bear hugger. He was a caring, loving man, as well as a great advocate.

His determination to improve our Nation, our education system, our health care system, our employment system, to strengthen civil and human rights and provide opportunities to those who live on the outskirts of American life, was unparalleled. Every one of us who knew him, and the millions who did not, were heartbroken by his untimely death.

I had someone say to me that the voice for the voiceless has been silenced. That is not only a tribute to PAUL but it can also be heard as a rebuke to us. Was there only one among us who spoke for the voiceless, who hurt for those who were hurting, who carried the pain of injustice and exclusion under which so many suffered? One hopes that is not the case, but the only way to prove it is not is to ensure that our voices are heard loudly and clearly.

This floor will seem empty without his words of conviction unless we fill it with our own. The ideals he represented and his steadfast belief that we, the people, through our government, acting together, can be a positive force, literally to change the future for those who might otherwise be left in despair, that commitment motivated every aspect of his daily life.

Our Senate family and the people of Minnesota not only lost Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, but we lost a great advocate in Sheila Wellstone and we lost a great teacher in Marcia Wellstone. His family shared his passion and his drive for justice. His staff were with him every step of the way and some tragically even gave their lives in service. Our thoughts and prayers are certainly with all those, along with the Wellstone family, who lost family members, friends, and colleagues.

Before coming to the Senate, I had the great pleasure of working with both PAUL and Sheila Wellstone. I admired Sheila greatly. Just as her husband, she was made of steel. That little package of energy that propelled her down these corridors and throughout the State of Minnesota looking for ways to help and to shed the spotlight she could bring into the darkest corners of human misery set her apart. She especially became a champion of those women and children who were victims of domestic violence. The stories she heard from women all over Minnesota and America did not stay her property; she told them to anyone. She would come to the White House and button hole me or the President. She would go anywhere to see anyone to make sure that someone whose small cry for help that she heard in St. Paul or Margie would be heard in Washington as well. She believed that the idea of violence-free families should be a reality in every home in our Nation.

She and PAUL, together, believed the diseases, the illnesses of the mind, should no longer be relegated to some back room where they would be brushed aside, ignored because of the stigma, the embarrassment attached to them historically. She encouraged PAUL to join forces with Senator DOMENICI to transform each of their families' experiences into a national campaign to improve the lives of the mentally ill.

Sheila and PAUL were also instrumental in bringing to international awareness the horrific problem of trafficking in human beings, the modern form of slavery by which young women, young girls, are literally sold into bondage, into the sex trade, into domestic servitude. Sheila and PAUL WELLSTONE were absolutely committed that this practice of degradation would end.

When each of us heard the news that the plane carrying PAUL and Sheila and Marcia went down, time seemed to stop. Many did not want to believe it. We kept asking our staff and others how it could be true. How could this have happened? Horrible events, tragedies of this magnitude, have a way of stopping time. But then we have to return. The clocks have to start moving again. We have to continue our journey into the future. But if we remember what that moment in time felt like when we realized our friend, our colleague, a great Senator, would no longer join us for our debates, then perhaps that tragedy can change the tone and landscape of our politics and our debates. Perhaps PAUL's example in life, his legacy in death, will compel all to look inward, to ask ourselves what are we doing today with the same energy, the same good humor, the same fighting spirit that PAUL WELLSTONE embodied to make life a little better for the people we represent, to give voice to the voiceless.

Over the past weeks I have thought a lot about PAUL WELLSTONE. I remember so many incidents and so many of his triumphs. He was there day in and day out. No issue was too small that it did not have his commitment behind it if he thought it would make a difference in someone's life. The Senate passed expanding insurance coverage for the mentally ill. I hope Senator DOMENICI's heartfelt plea and his longtime commitment will help finally to pass his and PAUL's dream into law.

We increased access to child care for the working poor because PAUL WELLSTONE knew what it meant to worry about your children while at work because you did not know the conditions they would be in, whether they would receive the quality of care they should.

One of my favorite PAUL WELLSTONE moments was that PAUL and I were at a hearing he was chairing of the Subcommittee on Employment and Training. We had been receiving reports about a sharp increase in the numbers of unreported deaths and injuries among immigrant workers—many of them illegal, who found their way to our country and were put to work, despite the laws against it, for the cheap labor they provided—who were not given the protection or the support or the respect they should have for the dangerous jobs they were performing.

One of my State's newspapers, NewsDay, ran a powerful investigative report about the conditions in which immigrant workers labored in New York. PAUL read it and contacted me right away. He wanted us to work together to find out what we could do to stop people from dying, literally dying, in New York and around America.

Many who go to hearings around here know that not many people, except the paid lobbyists for the various industries affected, show up for the committee hearings. The lobbyists fill the chairs. They take the notes. They rush out to make the cell phone calls to report to their superiors and employers what is going on. But unfortunately, except on rare occasions, other people do not come.

On that day, to our surprise, hundreds of workers flooded the halls of the Dirksen Building trying to get into our hearing, trying to tell their stories. Unfortunately, we had no idea this would draw such a crowd. The room the hearing was being held in was not big enough to accommodate everyone waiting.

PAUL and I conferred, and PAUL said: I can't believe it. There are all these people outside. Some of them came from miles away. You can see his arms, as you hear those words, going back and forth. What are we going to do?

Before I could answer, he got up, and in that bow-legged wrestler's stance and walk he had, he walked down from the platform, through the crowd, threw open the doors, told the Capitol Police that everyone was coming in and that there would be room. They could sit on the floor, they could sit in the Senators' chairs because he and I were the only Senators there. He would not keep the very people we were having the hearing about out of the hearing room.

That was PAUL. He was a people's Senator. Everyone was welcome. Every door was open. It was an unusual hearing, but it was a memorable one. Afterwards, he greeted each and every person who was there.

It was this passion that got him up and fighting every day, even when he was in such pain, as some of us can remember, seeing him in pain on this floor, remembering how last year the pain was so intense he literally dropped to the floor of the Senate. He later learned that he was not just contending with the aches and pains of a Hall of Fame wrestling career but that he had multiple sclerosis. That did not stop him either.

For any of us who inquired how he was doing, he brushed it off. He was not interested in any way or concerned about his own health. He wanted to talk to you about what we were going to do about unemployment insurance, what we were going to do about education, how we could turn our backs on all these children who would not get the resources they needed.

During the debate on the education bill, PAUL was the only member of our Education Committee to vote against it. We knew why. He warned that focusing our education system solely on improvements in standardized tests without a major increase in Federal funding was wrong. I agreed with that. I said so at the time in our committee. I will vote for this bill, but only if we have the funding.

Here we are, a year later. We got the funding for 1 year and then the administration came in and no more funding. PAUL was right, as the distinguished Senator from West Virginia knows. Trust, but verify, when it comes to such promises.

Senator WELLSTONE always stood by his beliefs. His last big fight, as Senator BYRD has so eloquently reminded us, was over two big issues: Certainly Iraq, what should be done, what will be done, what our obligations as Senators are to hold this administration accountable; and, here at home, the fight for unemployment benefits to be extended. For the life of me and for PAUL WELLSTONE, with whom I spoke about this at length time and time again, it made no sense. How could we turn our backs on people who were out of work through no fault of their own, who needed a little bit of a helping hand? He would come to the floor, he would make that case, and we wouldn't go anywhere with it. We couldn't get our colleagues to support extending unemployment insurance one more time.

Along with what I hope will be a lasting legacy of mental health parity, I truly request our colleagues and the administration to extend unemployment insurance, PAUL WELLSTONE's last domestic battle, for people who will otherwise have nowhere to turn when those benefits are gone.

I want to say also a word about Senator WELLSTONE's staff, because he certainly loved and respected his staff. As Senator BYRD has mentioned, his staff was a loyal, hard-working group who often accompanied Senator WELLSTONE to the floor and sat there watching him, getting energy from his excitement and passion. I want to name some of the names of those men and women who helped him do the work we honor today. Colin McGinnis, his chief of staff, and Brian Ahlberg, his legislative director, are two extraordinary public servants. My staff has enjoyed the privilege of working with them.

My staff and I have also had the opportunity to work with Marge Baker, who led Senator WELLSTONE's efforts on the Subcommittee on Employment and Training, with Jill Morningstar, who was his legislative assistant on education and women's issues, with Rachel Gregg, who led his efforts to assist the working poor, as well as Patti Unruh, Ellen Gerrity, and Richard McKeon, who made up his team of health care advisers.

I offer my condolences to each of his extraordinary staff members and I want them to know how much we appreciate the work they did for PAUL.

> I don't represent the pharmaceutical companies, I don't represent the big oil companies, I don't represent the big health insurance industry, I don't represent the big financial institutions. But you know what, I represent the people of Minnesota.

That may be his most fitting tribute—the honor, the ability, the results he brought to the way he represented the people of Minnesota. He did it with passion and principle. We join in saluting his life and his service and we challenge ourselves to remember the reasons why so many are mourning him today. Each of us, try to live up to the standard PAUL WELLSTONE set.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I compliment the Senator from New York for her gracious and most appropriate words with regard to the service of the Senator from Minnesota, who was such a special person.

I rise to add my words of respect and praise and thanksgiving for the life and leadership of my friend and colleague and, in fact, political hero. PAUL WELLSTONE was a good man who did his very best to do good things—very simply, good things for others. With his wife Sheila, their lives were about service, service and advocacy for others. In fact—I think the Presiding Officer probably knows this—they may well have been the most unselfish people I ever observed. The drive was not to power. It was not to popularity. It certainly was not to wealth. It was to service—service to those without a voice. PAUL WELLSTONE really did believe all men and women are created equal and therefore should be treated accordingly.

As a friend, PAUL was always supportive and full of counsel for a fellow progressive—or should I say liberal. While our paths to the Senate could not have been more different, our paths in the Senate were much alike. He was a pathfinder for me and for many others because of his personal passion and principle with which he was so secure—it was deep in his soul. It gave him vision. His words and deeds were an example for all who seek to lead. As he so often implored, our actions cannot be separate from our words. All men and women are created equal, and he believed our Nation must act, also, accordingly. He fought for that every day on this floor.

We have heard about his principled fight for mental health parity. We have heard about his fight to make sure education was something other than high stakes testing, and to make sure welfare reform was about something other than reducing the numbers on rolls, but was really about reducing poverty levels; on labor rights and defending the right to organize, defending the right of working men and women to have access to the American promise on an equal basis with those who are granted more; and on women's rights, which we have heard so much about, and domestic abuse, in which he carried the words and deeds of his wife so ably; on veterans' care and the homelessness problems of our Vietnam vets. On these and many other issues he really was a man who spoke for those without a voice.

PAUL's passion and vision will be deeply missed. For those honored to have shared his life, it is now our responsibility to pursue his vision. His commitment to equality and justice must not be lost and, with God's will, it will not.

To this challenge, earlier today I heard Senator STABENOW cite great words from Frederick Douglass that bear repeating. When you think about PAUL WELLSTONE you think about how he handled himself in this world. Those words are:

> If there is no struggle, there is no progress. Those who profess to prefer freedom and yet deprecate agitation want crops without plowing up the ground. They want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its many waters.

PAUL WELLSTONE led his struggle for freedom with thunder and lightning—his struggle for progress. We will miss him. We will miss his struggle. We must take it up.

All of us pray for his family and the families of the others lost on that tragic day of the crash. Our hearts are saddened. And we, as Senator CLINTON has so ably articulated, commend his loyal and dedicated staff, and those thousands of volunteers who made his voice multiples of what it otherwise would be, through their activism and organization. We say thank you for all of them. Our love goes out. We respect them for what they have done, and their service. We hope they will not turn away from the effort and the fight. We thank them all. They mourn. We mourn. But we must not quit. We will not quit. Our deeds must match his deeds in the days and years ahead.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute today to two dear friends, PAUL and Sheila Wellstone. The October 25 plane crash in northern Minnesota which took their lives was an incalculable tragedy. It deprived Minnesota of a brilliant Senator. It deprived my wife Barbara and me of two very dear friends. It deprived the poor and disadvantaged everywhere in this country of a most committed, eloquent, and passionate champion.

If there is one word that I heard perhaps more than any other in the tributes that have been paid to PAUL WELLSTONE, it would be the word "passionate."

Compounding the tragedy, the crash claimed the lives of PAUL and Sheila's daughter, Marcia; three members of his staff: Will McLaughlin, Tom Lapic, and Mary McEvoy; and the plane's two pilots, Captains Richard Conroy and Michael Guess.

Our hearts go out to PAUL's sons and grandchildren, and to all of the families of those whose lives were lost. We think about what might have been. We are reminded of just how ephemeral and precious life is.

It is said that an obituary tells you what a person did and a eulogy tells you who a person was. I would like to talk about who PAUL was.

PAUL WELLSTONE was the patron Senator of lost causes. By "lost," I don't mean wrong. In fact, most of his causes were right. But many of them were at the moment unpopular.

PAUL WELLSTONE devoted his energies to fighting for the disenfranchised and demoralized, the lonely, and the isolated. He saw his mission in the Senate and in life as comforting the afflicted and, when necessary, afflicting the comfortable. In social justice circles, it is called "speaking truth to power."

PAUL knew what it is like to be the underdog. He literally wrestled his way into the University of North Carolina on an athletic scholarship. He overcame learning disabilities to earn a Ph.D. from that distinguished university. The civil rights movement inspired him to become active in politics. In 1990, he ran a seemingly quixotic campaign against an incumbent Senator who outspent him by more than seven to one. And PAUL won. And he won again in 1996.

I think PAUL beat the odds because he gave hope to so many people who have been left behind. PAUL was a friendly and warm person who learned and remembered everybody's name because he genuinely cared about them.

More recently, PAUL battled hip and back injuries and publicly announced that he had multiple sclerosis. When he made that announcement, he said—with characteristic wit and pluck—"I have a strong mind—although there are some who might disagree with that—I have a strong body. I have a strong heart, I have a strong soul." And that he did.

PAUL knew what it was like to be an underdog. So he devoted his life to fighting for the underdog. At Minnesota's Carleton College, where he was a professor, he protested the college's investments in companies doing business with pro-apartheid South Africa. He intervened on behalf of many farmers facing foreclosure. He joined the picket lines at a meat-packing plant. And when Carleton College's custodians went on strike, he taught his classes off-campus because he wasn't going to cross that picket line.

PAUL brought his unabashed idealism to the Senate. He voted against the gulf war in 1991. He voted against the welfare bill in 1996. He led a lonely fight against the bankruptcy bill, saying that it would enrich big credit card companies at the expense of ordinary people suffering "brutal economic circumstances." And the list goes on.

One of his last votes that he cast was for the more multilateral approach relative to our situation in Iraq. During that debate, he argued as follows: "Acting now on our own might be a sign of our power. Acting sensibly and in a measured way, in concert with our allies with bipartisan congressional support, would be a sign of our strength."

PAUL often found himself in small minorities. He was, however, able to move the Senate on occasion through sheer conviction. For instance, he teamed with Senator DOMENICI to require health insurance companies to provide more equitable coverage and benefits to people suffering from mental illness. It was the right thing to do. It was the fair thing to do. And he prevailed.

Life deals everyone setbacks and defeats. And PAUL had more than his share, especially in the Senate. But he never became the least bit cynical as many people do when they suffer life's disappointments. He kept coming back cheerful and committed as ever. He was absolutely guileless. And I think that was the source of his popularity, which extended to people who vehemently disagreed with the policies that he advocated. Everyone admired the fact that he spoke from the heart, and he voted based on his sincere beliefs—not from political expediency. He believed in the power of ideas and causes, and in the power of government to help people. He was a formidable adversary. And he had that unique gift of being able to disagree without being disagreeable.

T.S. Eliot wrote to a friend: "We fight for lost causes because we know that our defeat and dismay may be the preface to our successors' victory, though that victory itself will be temporary; we fight rather to keep something alive than in the expectation that anything will triumph."

That wistful statement, to me, captures some of PAUL WELLSTONE's approach to his duty. With indefatigable goodwill and cheer and sincerity, PAUL always bounced back, always carried on, and always stood on principle—never on expediency. He wasn't afraid to be in the minority, even a minority of one.

A friend of PAUL's, Bill Holm, wrote a touching tribute that appeared in the New York Times the day after PAUL died. I am going to put that column in the RECORD following my remarks, but I wish to quote from it briefly to underscore some of what the column says.

Bill Holm wrote, "Whatever PAUL's height, he was one of the largest men I ever met. He filled rooms when he entered them. Size in a public man is an interior, not an exterior, quality. . . . He thought himself an athlete . . . and I suspect he saw his whole political life in that metaphor. He wrestled with the power of big money, military adventurism and penny-pinching against the poor. He meant to fight fair, but he meant to win."

The great suffragette Anna Howard Shaw remarked, "it does not make so much difference perhaps as to the number of days we live as it does to the manner in which we live the days we do live." She could have been saying that about PAUL WELLSTONE.

PAUL fought the good fight—usually against long odds. I think, because he was a wrestler, he knew it was always possible to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat. Sometimes you can be behind on points but suddenly pin your opponent seconds before the match is over. So he never gave up. He had an infectious optimism. That is why he was such an inspiration.

He certainly lived his life with gusto. He showed that gusto in the way he consumed my wife's stuffed cabbage. We still have some in the freezer which we had preserved for the next dinner we were going to have with the Wellstones.

PAUL WELLSTONE may have stood 5 feet 5 inches tall, but he had the heart of a giant. As we mourn his passing, we celebrate his life. What a gift he gave to us all.

I ask unanimous consent that Bill Holm's column, appearing in the October 26, 2002, edition of the New York Times, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A LIBERAL WITH A WRESTLER'S STANCE

(By Bill Holm)

MINNEOTA, MINN.—Paul Wellstone was an unlikely politician in a place like Minnesota—land of walleyes, cornfields and phlegmatic Scandinavians. He was an urban Jew, son of immigrants, a college professor at the fanciest of Minnesota's private colleges. And, probably worst of all for his nontalkative constituents, he was a passionate orator, a skilled rouser of rabble over issues he loved and an unapologetic populist liberal.

How did this man, who was killed yesterday in a plane crash in northern Minnesota, ever manage a triumphantly successful political career in which even many Republicans and conservative Christians quietly scribbled the Wellstone X on their ballots, hoping their neighbors wouldn't catch them behaving like lefties?

When I gave readings of poetry and essays, I often shared a podium with Senator Wellstone at various rural conventions and political gatherings. It was a remarkable experience, and I learned very well to proceed rather than follow him. He worked a house as well as Hubert Humphrey ever did.

I remember a Farmers Union convention in St. Paul: Paul Wellstone, a pugnacious 5-foot-5, stood at the dais between the Farmers Union chairman and me, both 6-foot-5 Scandinavians.

"It's nice to join my Norwegian cousins here in St. Paul," he said. He then proceeded in 20 minutes to bring the audience cheering to its feet. If this had been a monarchy, the farmers would have crowned him.

I was next, with a few small and sensitive rural poems. I had a sinking feeling that a master had bested me.

Whatever Paul's height, he was one of the largest men I ever met. He filled rooms when he entered them. Size in a public man is an interior, not an exterior quality. Paul charmed—and sometimes persuaded—even those hostile to his unashamed liberal ideas by listening with great courtesy and attention to unfriendly questions. He answered without dissembling, without backing down from his own principles, but with a civil regard for the dignity of the questioner.

And he had the politician's great gift: an amazing memory for names. I saw him once pluck a vote with this gift. He answered questions for 45 minutes in a room full of ordinary citizens whom he'd never seen before. He began hs last answer this way: "Your question reminds me of Mary's concern." Mary, in the back row, was 45 minutes ago. Mary, likely a rock-ribbed Republican, blushed a little and smiled. One more vote.

Even those who continued to disagree with Paul did not question the sincerity of his idealism. He was sometimes attacked for naïveté (as in his brave vote against authorizing the president to go to war with Iraq), but never for dishonesty. He voted, as he spoke, from the heart.

It's often forgotten that Paul, nearing 60 with a bad back and a respectable batch of grandchildren whom he treasured, began his rise in the world with a college wrestling scholarship. His working-class parents had no money for school, so wrestling earned him a doctorate.

He preserved a wrestler's sensibility in both his academic and political life. In 1998 I met Paul at a reception at the Governor's Mansion just before Jesse Ventura, a professional wrestler by trade, first occupied that house. How curious, I told Paul, that the two most interesting politicians in Minnesota at the moment should both be wrestlers. He replied with a wry smile: "But I'm a real one."

He thought himself an athlete, not an entertainer, and I suspect he saw his whole political life in that metaphor. He wrestled with the power of big money, military adventurism and penny-pinching against the poor. He meant to fight fair, but he meant to win.

Not only Minnesota, but the whole country will feel the absence of his voice and his bravely combative spirit. We say with Walt Whitman: Salud, Camerado. We look for you again under our boot-soles.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, liberal? Worse, The London Economist called Senator WELLSTONE the most "left wing" Senator in the U.S. Senate. Yet, as the most conservative Senator, I found myself time and again fighting at his side.

The year started with the Bush seduction of Senator TED KENNEDY on education. Senator KENNEDY looked at the amount—$7 billion. President Bush looked at the thrust—prove that public education was a failure so that private education could be financed by the Government. Testing. Somehow the billions being spent by the States on testing was not enough. A Federal test was necessary.

Failing schools would be closed. Failing students would be tutored. But most likely, the student failing for the lack of a competent teacher could find no competent tutor. For all this testing, the education bill provided no help for the student to pass the test. And for this, Senator WELLSTONE ranted and raved. But nobody listened. Senator WELLSTONE was liberal, but as a conservative I knew he was right. We both voted no.

Next was the Bush tax cut. No doubt Senator WELLSTONE, the liberal, was the target for this initiative. For the purpose of Voodoo II, or Bush's Reaganomics, was to eliminate the resources of Government so that without the money there would be no programs. But in reality, programs persevered, with a horrific debt, and the devastating waste of interest costs. Senator WELLSTONE, the liberal, was for programs. I, the conservative, was for putting Government on a pay-as-you-go path. We both voted no.

Then there was jobs. Fast Track—this was a device that Presidents use to control trade agreements. With it, the agreement submitted by the President could not be amended. Congress was required to vote it up or down, and, of course, no agreement was ever submitted until the White House had the vote fixed.

To get NAFTA approved, President Clinton bought the vote with numerous favors not related to the agreement, such as defense contracts, cultural centers, and golf rounds in California and Arkansas. One could readily see that the intent was to create jobs south of the border. Sure enough, we lost 700,000 textile jobs alone. So, when fast track expired, we refused to renew it for President Clinton. Again, Senator WELLSTONE and I both opposed giving fast track authority to President Bush.

"Liberal." "Conservative." Wrong references. Adlai Stevenson used to say it's not whether one is liberal or one is conservative, but whether one is headed in the right direction.

Adam Nagourney of the New York Times writes of the "homogenization" of American politics. Politics has changed. Triangulation has taken over so that every party compromises, or triangulates, the other party's issues. Both are for tax cuts. Both are for saving Social Security. Both are for defense. Both are for the war with Iraq. Both are for homeland security. Both are against corporate corruption. Worse, money locks in this triangulation so that we are back to George Wallace's, "There's not a dime's bit of difference between the parties."

But there is a fundamental difference. The Republicans know to campaign. The Democrats know to govern. PAUL WELLSTONE came to Washington to govern. He could see the crying needs of the country: schools, health care, jobs, infrastructure, et cetera. And he was determined to do something to provide for these needs. But with the Democrats in control by only one vote, we abandoned governing. The needs of the country were abandoned and both parties went into high gear to campaign, with money controlling the issues. Y2K, free trade, corporate reform—money controlled with a refusal to even cancel the principal corruption: stock options. The Congress danced around the fire of intelligence failures, terrorism insurance, seaport security, rail security, energy policy, pension reform, prescription drugs—but no governing.

PAUL WELLSTONE was a fighter. The shortest fellow in the Congress, most of us couldn't touch his shoes. Today, there are no fighters in Washington, just campaigners.

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, the tragic death of our colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE of Minnesota, was such a sudden shock to all of us. It was hard to believe he had died. PAUL was so full of life, and full of energy and enthusiasm. It was so incongruous, so unbelievable, that his life could be needed so abruptly.

But, it was, and we continue to grieve and to miss him.

PAUL and I were friends. We also collaborated on legislation to help farmers and to find a cure for Parkinson's Disease and Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy.

We often talked about our strategy for accelerating the research that is so important to the effort to conquer these threats to human life.

He traveled to my State to see for himself the plight of the poor in the Mississippi Delta. He was sincerely interested in helping alleviate the burdens and problems faced by the poor people who lived in the Delta. I told him about the initiatives we had started and let him know I shared his concerns and that we were trying some new approaches such as the Delta Regional Initiative.

Senator WELLSTONE will always be appreciated for the efforts he made to help those who needed help the most.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, the Senate has been a unique institution since its inception. We take great pride in our deliberative nature. Debate may take time, but it is time well spent. It is always better to pursue the right—rather than the rushed—course of action. This style of governance has served the American people well for more than two centuries.

This does not mean the Senate is not a dynamic body. It is full of the same vibrancy that marks this great experiment called American democracy. For within this Chamber have echoed some of the most lively and spirited debates in our Nation's history. And outside this Chamber as well—in committee rooms and caucus meetings and other public forums.

On Friday the Senate lost one of its most animated Members in PAUL WELLSTONE. He was a proverbial "true believer." Conviction was not something about which he simply spoke at opportune moments; he showed it time and again with his unabated enthusiasm for being a United States Senator. PAUL WELLSTONE's beliefs rose from a deep and impenetrable well of principle.

Indeed, PAUL was a proud and unabashed voice for liberalism. His votes often landed him not only on the other side of Republicans, but on the other side of his fellow Democrats, as well. He was a man who simply did not blink in the face of political pressure. He stared it down without regard to price. Even if you did not agree with him, you admired him and the courage he so frequently displayed.

I saw this first hand on the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee. There PAUL and I served together on the Subcommittee on Public Health and the Subcommittee on Children and Families. We shared a common concern for the health of women and children and the mentally ill. He spoke out often on their behalf. He fought hard for them. And his passion for their well-being will be missed.

PAUL WELLSTONE was one of a kind. We were blessed to have him, his wife, Sheila, and his daughter, Marcia, as members of the Senate family. And the people of Minnesota and the United States were blessed to have him in their service. May we keep PAUL and Sheila's sons and grandchildren and the families of all those who lost loved ones in our thoughts and prayers in the coming weeks.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, several days after this terrible tragedy, the loss of our beloved colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE, his wife Sheila, his daughter Marcia, three loyal members of his staff and two pilots, we still remain in a state of shocked disbelief.

We have lost a unique and gifted man, who embodied not only the independent spirit of his home state, but one that resides at the very heart of the American soul.

A few years ago, when speaking on this floor about the loss of his legislative director, PAUL claimed that "sometimes the only realists are the dreamers. . . ."

In many ways he could have been referring to himself, the cerebral political science professor willing to stand alone, when necessary, for what he believed.

He had the common touch, and was an impassioned speaker, noted as much for his big heart as for his sharp mind.

Elected as the only new Senator in 1990, PAUL's crusading voice would not have had the same impact in the House of Representatives as it did in this Chamber.

Only in the Senate could he have helped to lead the successful opposition, in 1991, to an energy bill that would have opened the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil exploration, or five years later force a vote on a minimum wage increase.

For two terms he fought tirelessly for increased funding for education at every level, healthcare that was accessible and affordable for all Americans, sweeping campaign finance reform, and farm legislation that sought to protect the small farmers.

While he was, on the one hand, an ideological liberal, willing to speak with his conscience, PAUL was also able to work with Republican colleagues on many occasions, and he was responsible for passing important bipartisan legislation, most notably the expanded insurance coverage for mental illnesses, with Senator DOMENICI.

But PAUL WELLSTONE's commitment to social justice did not stop at our borders. He was an outspoken champion of the poor and the powerless around the world, in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

I remember when, back in 1996, I voiced concern over the plight of women and girls under the reactionary rule of the Taliban, PAUL was one of the few who was receptive to the need for the United States to respond to such violations.

In 1999, PAUL and I introduced the "International Trafficking of Women and Children Victim Protection Act," which established an interagency task force to monitor and combat trafficking, provided assistance to other countries that met minimum international standards, and withheld U.S. non-humanitarian assistance to countries that failed to meet these standards.

To his eternal credit, it is worth noting that PAUL had originally introduced his own bill, which contained much tougher criminal provisions and stronger protections for victims.

He was a leading advocate for Tibetan autonomy, able to work closely with his ideological nemesis, JESSE HELMS. In fact, the last time I worked with PAUL was in cosponsoring an act to safeguard the cultural, religious, and ethnic identity of the Tibetan people and to encourage further dialog between the Dalai Lama and the Chinese Government.

We must not forget that the world has also lost Sheila, PAUL's wonderful wife of almost 40 years, and a passionate campaigner against domestic violence, and for the need to create violence-free families. Hers was a noble cause, a critical fight, that must be continued.

Minnesota has produced some of America's most eloquent, committed, and honorable leaders. Hubert Humphrey, Harold Stassen, Eugene McCarthy, and Walter Mondale come quickly to mind.

Even if he had not met such a tragic and untimely end, PAUL WELLSTONE would have surely earned his place among this distinguished group. The fact that he has left us so abruptly, and left all of us so sad, will not diminish his achievements, nor weaken his message.

To quote PAUL:

> I still believe that government can be a force of good in people's lives.

We in the Senate should take these words to heart, just as we were truly honored to have had him among us. We are all the better to have known him and worked with him. He will be sorely missed.

Mr. DAYTON. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. STABENOW). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. DAYTON. Madam President, it has been a very moving afternoon in the Chamber listening to my colleagues speak so eloquently about my good friend, the senior Senator from Minnesota. The words of my colleagues were very moving. It was touching to hear of their respect and their affection and their admiration for PAUL WELLSTONE.

I spoke earlier this afternoon about the Senator, my dear friend, and because others were waiting to speak I abbreviated my remarks. I wanted to close by noting, as others have so well, that PAUL's remarkable achievements were not his alone.

He was one of those people who, in his greatness, was able to attract great people to his side. He had extraordinarily dedicated men and women who worked for him, worked with him, gave of their time and their energy, their hearts and their souls to his work: Colin McGinnis and his staff here in Washington; Connie Lewis, Minnesota State director, and her staff in Minnesota were always with PAUL and Sheila and extraordinarily dedicated.

Of course, if you wanted to make a difference in Washington, if you wanted to try to move mountains and you were young and idealistic, who better to work for than PAUL WELLSTONE?

Many of his former students at Carleton College in Northfield, MN, went on to be his key staff aides. I used to tease PAUL and say that is what he was doing during his time there; he was recruiting the best and the brightest to work on his campaigns and organize the State and to work in Washington and in Minnesota on behalf of the many causes he championed—Jeff Blodgett, who was managing his campaign for the third time and doing so with great skill, and according to the last published polls, with very successful results, and others in Minnesota who gave up their careers, family life, and set it aside to one more time bring the man they loved and in whom they believed to victory.

Kari Moe, who was involved with Senator WELLSTONE's Washington office, was his chief of staff for years before. They are incredibly dedicated people each in their own right.

Tom Lapic tragically was on the plane with PAUL and lost his life in service to his friend and his country. Tom was the deputy Minnesota director. Several hundred friends and family came to his memorial service a week after his death. He was a man who touched people deeply, as did PAUL. His wife Trudy and others shared their recollections, the wonderful qualities Tom had that complemented PAUL, his calmness, virtually unflappable under any circumstances. Like PAUL, he was astute and eloquent, and he and PAUL collaborated on many of the words that PAUL used in speeches. Tom was always by PAUL'S side offering his guidance and perspective.

Will McLaughlin was on PAUL'S campaign staff. He was just starting his political career at the age of 23 in Minnesota. But everybody could see he was destined to be a star, a Governor or a Senator, something special someday. He already had been elected President of his fraternity at the University of Minnesota. Politics was in Will's blood or maybe even in his genetic code. His father Mike McLaughlin was a long time Fourth District chair of the Minnesota Democratic Party, and he collaborated with the greats of the previous generation—Hubert Humphrey, Fritz Mondale, Eugene McCarthy, Joe Karth, Bruce Vento. Will's mother Judy McLaughlin was a close associate of the former speaker of the Minnesota House of Representatives. He will be missed by his mother Judy and his siblings and his friends and those in Minnesota who never had a chance to get to know him.

Thousands of Minnesotans knew Mary McEvoy who was on the plane as staff in name but really as a friend of PAUL'S and Sheila's. She was one of Sheila Wellstone's very closest friends. Sheila flew with PAUL because he loathed it, and Mary flew with Sheila because she loathed it. It was beyond tragedy, beyond words that Mary had taken a leave of absence from the University of Minnesota where she was a full professor, where she chaired the department, where she had her own very distinguished career in her field, so she could help her friend Sheila and her friend PAUL during their time of need. She had a service where over 1,500 Minnesotans, friends, and family came to pay their respects. She was associate chair of the DFL Party. She was a leader. She was a colleague. She was a mother of three beautiful children, and she had her husband Jamie. She will be terribly missed by all of us in the life of Minnesota.

Of course, the linchpin of PAUL'S staff, his unpaid and most important staff person was his wife Sheila who, unlike some campaign and political spouses, was beloved by PAUL'S staff and gratefully welcomed to the office for her ability to run interference when necessary with her husband and his life and his schemes.

I remember once it was said it took a lot of money to keep Mahatma Gandhi in poverty because of the people around him necessary to help him carry out his mission. It took a lot of really remarkable and talented people to keep PAUL WELLSTONE on the brink of disorganization. He had so much energy and was doing so many things, often simultaneously. Sheila was the linchpin and a formidable political activist in her own right. She was born and raised in the coal country of West Virginia, a hard-scrabble upbringing. She and PAUL were married when they were 19 years old. For 39 years they were each other's best friend, colleagues, mates, spouses.

Many talk about and preach family values. That was a wonderful marriage and a wonderful family. They had three children of whom they were enormously proud. Marcia Wellstone, tragically on the plane, was a future political star in her own right. She loved campaigning, loved being out with the people of Minnesota. She was a wonderful teacher in the White Bear School District, beloved by her students, liked by her colleagues. She also leaves a gap with her family and friends that can never be filled.

They had two sons who fortunately were not on the plane that day, David and Mark, of whom PAUL and Sheila were also enormously proud. I hope and I trust they will, in this time of terrible loss and grief, be consoled a little by the words that were expressed today, by the words that have been expressed by people all over the country. They had extraordinary parents, very hard parents to lose, but ones who will be with them in spirit always and gave them the best upbringing that any two fine men could wish for.

PAUL was a family man from the beginning. That was always foremost in his priorities. I remember not more than 6 weeks ago I happened to come to the Senate Chamber one afternoon, just around the lunch hour. Much to my surprise, the Senate was in recess. There was PAUL with his 7-year-old grandson named Joshua, Marcia's child, who was evidently on an outing that afternoon with his grandfather.

PAUL was showing him around the empty Chamber and pointing out where his desk was, as well as others. I think PAUL was convinced that he had Josh quite impressed with this great Chamber and all it represents to all of us until Josh looked up at him kind of wistfully and said: Grandpa, are we going to go someplace soon? You promised that we were going to go someplace this afternoon.

For once, PAUL seemed almost at a loss for words. He looked up at the ceiling and then looked forlornly at me, looked over to Josh and said: This is someplace.

I close by saying, yes, PAUL, this is some place that you reached, without any of the advantages some of us have enjoyed, and Sheila Wellstone with none at all. They met at age 19. He came to Northfield, MN, built a career as a college professor, she as a housewife raising their children. To come to some place like this is a phenomenal American success story.

I recounted earlier today about how PAUL was elected in 1990. He ran an extraordinary campaign, a David versus Goliath, come from nowhere, miraculous victory that is a tribute to the kind of indefatigable courage and willingness to follow his dream and bring people along with him. He stood for what he believed in and won by doing so. That should be in every political textbook in this country for decades to come.

He served in the Senate for 12 years and made those stands again and again. Whether they were popular, whether he had the votes or not, he knew usually with great insight whether he was going to be successful. He knew when he lost he had no alternative but to stand behind what he believed in, to stand with his conscience and his convictions. He trusted in the people of Minnesota to give him the opportunity to serve, which they did twice, and he was going back to seek their support for a third term.

As others have pointed out, he was facing one of the most difficult votes of his career, as some would say, at an inopportune time, which was the resolution to authorize the use of force in Iraq by the President, at his discretion. PAUL began his Senate career with that kind of vote with the Persian Gulf resolution and some believe because of his stands over the years that if he were to oppose a popular President, if he were to express a different perspective and, as Senator LEVIN, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, pointed out, vote for an alternative resolution, one that committed the United States to multilateral action with other countries of the world, that he would pay a political price for that in Minnesota.

PAUL never really agonized about his decision in this matter because compromising his convictions was not something PAUL ever considered doing. In fact, in my 2 years in the Senate, the one time I saw PAUL angry was when a staff person—not his own staff, he did not know who made the comment—was reported in the Washington Post as saying the Senate Democratic Caucus was trying to find some alternative resolution to provide cover for PAUL WELLSTONE who was facing a difficult reelection. PAUL was furious that anyone would accuse him of looking for cover from a tough vote. He said in one of our meetings that is what he had to take back to the people of Minnesota, that they knew he would never seek cover to avoid a tough decision or a tough vote; he would do what he believed was right and he was willing to go back to the Minnesota electorate and take their judgment.

I believe if he had been able to bring that to the Tuesday election that judgment would again have been in the affirmative. That is PAUL WELLSTONE's legacy to all of us. That is his legacy to the country. Whether one would agree with everything PAUL believed is not the point. There are those who can have sincere convictions on the other side of the issue. That is the greatness of our country and our democracy, that we can have those disagreements, honest, different points of view, and we are a better institution and we are a better country for our ability, through our political process, to embrace and incorporate those differences.

He stood for what he believed in, would risk everything, his political career, his opportunity to serve, everything he believed and everything he wanted, on a matter of principle. He would do so willingly, courageously, and emphatically. That is something I will take with me throughout the rest of my life, and I would commend it to everyone else in this body and across this country.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, in her capacity as the Senator from Michigan, suggests the absence of a quorum.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF SENATE DOCUMENT

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that tributes to PAUL WELLSTONE, the late Senator from Minnesota, be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I also ask that Members have until 12 noon, Tuesday, December 3, to submit such tributes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE SAFETY OF THE TRANS-ALASKA OIL PIPELINE

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, I am not sure of what the remainder of the Senate schedule might be for this week, but my own tenure in this body is somewhat limited as a consequence of my election to the Governorship in the State of Alaska. So with the permission of the Presiding Officer—and I have checked with the Parliamentarian—we have the opportunity to address matters in our short remaining time.

I would like to share with my colleagues an earthquake that occurred in my State of Alaska just a little over a week ago. It registered 7.9 on the Richter Scale, which is a very high earthquake.

My wife and I happened to be at mass during the earthquake, and not only did the chandeliers move from side to side, but the crucifix, hanging by a brass chain, began to move very dramatically, and it was almost as if the sign of the cross was moving across the agenda.

It happened to be a Korean service in a Catholic Church in Anchorage, and I must say, the magnitude of the earthquake was matched by the magnitude of the Korean priest who did not break stride in his sermon. On the other hand, it was in Korean, and my Korean is a little rusty. But no one moved from the church. Heads went down. And I admired the priest.

My purpose in bringing this matter up is to share with you a recognition of concern that has been expressed in this body for some time; and that is the safety of the Trans-Alaska oil pipeline which covers some 800 miles from the North Slope of Prudhoe Bay to the city of Valdez where the oil is shipped in U.S. tankers and moved down the west coast.

The significance of this earthquake along this 800-mile pipeline was that no damage was done in spite of the 7.9 magnitude. Dealing with the potential for earthquakes in the design was a consideration some 30 years ago, that the line itself should be designed to withstand an 8.0 magnitude earthquake. I want my colleagues to know that the line held a 7.9 tremor quite nicely. As a matter of fact, immediately after the quake rocked interior Alaska, the pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez was shut down as a precaution and inspected.

The massive quake did do some damage. There were a few supports which were quickly repaired. The line slowly was refilled and put back into service. But the significance was that there were no breaks. In fact, the damage was minimal for the size of the quake which did destroy some roads, damage some bridges, other structures. But the best news is not one cup of oil was spilled, despite the magnitude of the quake—not one single cupful.

There are those who claim the line has been poorly maintained; those who say it is dangerously old, beyond its prime. I hope they will reconsider, recognizing what happened under a real test.

What can they say? The line performed as it was designed and engineered to perform. It is quite timely as this comes at a time when we have in the House and Senate conference the issue of opening up ANWR to oil exploration. It has been a significant issue among the environmentalists. It has pitted Republican against Democrat and Republican against Republican, Democrat against Democrat. As we contemplate action in Iraq, we should reflect on the realization that we have done a pretty good job of producing energy here at home and, given the opportunity, we can do much better if we are fortunate enough to get an energy bill and get ANWR included in that.

This comes at a time when Alaskans' dreams of opening the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil exploration are being rekindled by huge Republican gains nationally in Tuesday's elections.

The GOP is in control of the House and the Senate, and Democrats who are beholden to environmentalists and have blocked ANWR will have a more difficult time turning their backs on U.S. energy independence and national security.

I hope as I leave this body in the next few days that my State of Alaska will get a fair hearing on the ANWR issue because people in my State for years have been saying oil exploration and development can be done and in an environmentally safe and responsible manner. Prudhoe Bay and other North Slope oilfields' records provide the best proof that the assertion is true that we can develop these resources safely here at home. I think Sunday's earthquake was further evidence.

HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. SPECTER. The issue of homeland security, I believe, is one of great urgency. I believe that September 11, 2001, could have been prevented had we had all of the so-called dots on the board about warnings which had been received. I do not agree with CIA Director George Tenet that another September 11 is imminent. CIA Director Tenet made that statement about a month ago.

We had a lot of warning signals about 9/11. There was an FBI report in July of 2001 about a suspicious man taking flight training in Phoenix, that he had a big picture of Osama bin Laden in his apartment, which never got to headquarters. That warning was mired in FBI bureaucracy.

There was information that two al-Qaida members from Kuala Lumpur were planning to come to the United States; that it was known to the CIA but never told to the FBI or the INS, the Immigration and Naturalization Service. They came in unimpeded and were two of the pilots on the suicide missions on September 11.

Then there was the effort by the Minneapolis office of the FBI to secure a warrant under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act for Zacarias Moussaoui which had the wrong standard. Had the FBI gotten into Moussaoui's computer, there was a treasure trove of information about potential attack.

Then there was the warning to the National Security Agency on September 10 about something to happen the next day. It was not translated until September 12, but it was too late. Then an al-Qaida man named Murak confessed in 1996 of plans by al-Qaida to fly a plane loaded with explosives into the CIA headquarters. We already had the attack on the Trade Center in 1993. Osama bin Laden was under indictment for killing Americans in Mogadishu in 1993, and under indictment for the Embassy bombings in Africa in 1998. Osama bin Laden was on record as declaring a worldwide jihad against the United States.

We had a lot of warnings, and had all of those dots been put on the board, I think there was a veritable blueprint and I said as much when FBI Director Mueller came to testify before the Judiciary Committee last June.

We had the homeland security bill on the floor for a full month. We started debating it on September 3. We did not finish until October 1, and it was never ever passed. When President Bush came to Pennsylvania back in late October, I urged the President to call a special session of Congress to pass homeland security. It seems to me that is our job.

The President is emphatic that the first thing he does every day is to review the intelligence briefings. There is grave concern that there could be another attack. I am glad that the President is insistent that Congress pass homeland security before we go out of this lame duck session. While it is important to pass homeland security, it is important that it be enacted with the appropriate provisions. One provision that I have discussed at some length is to have the Secretary be able to direct the intelligence agencies which will all be under one umbrella. The idea to have the intelligence agencies under one umbrella, I think, has been generally agreed upon. This is not a new idea; it has been proposed for a long time.

I was chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee in 1995 and 1996. I saw the turf wars between the CIA and the FBI, the NSA and Defense Intelligence, et cetera. Legislation was introduced by this Senator to bring everything under one umbrella of the Central Intelligence Agency, and that legislation has languished. Mine was not the only idea; it has been proposed by others over the years. The turf battles have precluded it. Now, with an Office of Homeland Security, we have a chance to get it under one umbrella.

It is vital the Secretary be able to direct these analytical departments to work together. Otherwise, the turf battles will go on. I am not saying the CIA Director should lose control over his agents around the world or the FBI Director should lose control over FBI agents in the United States or abroad, or any other Department should lose control over their agents. But when you pull the analysis and bring all the analysts under one umbrella, there is the point that there has to be direction so all the dots are placed on one screen.

The language is very simple. It is:

> On behalf of the Secretary, subject to disapproval by the President, to direct the agencies described under subsection (f)(2) to provide intelligence information, analysis of intelligence information, and such other intelligence-regulated information, as the Assistant Secretary for Information Analysis determines necessary.

That is the operative language. The other parts of the bill contain an enumeration of all of the agencies which will be under one umbrella for analysis.

There has been considerable argument and disagreement over labor-management provisions. This has been discussed at some length by this Senator and others in colloquies. Part of the controversy arose because of initial confusion as to whether the two paragraphs added by the amendment by Senator NELSON of Nebraska—that is the other Senator NELSON, Mr. President; may the RECORD show that Senator BILL NELSON is presiding at the moment—whether they were in addition to or in place of. And if they were in place of, that would have eliminated the President's national security waiver which is indispensable and should not be eliminated.

In colloquy with Senator LIEBERMAN, it was agreed to that these provisions would be in addition to. So that asked that collective bargaining in current law would stand, which provides in subsection A:

> (A) the agency or subdivision has a primary function intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative or national security work, and
> (B) the provisions of this chapter cannot be applied to that agency or subdivision in a manner consistent with national security requirements and considerations.

Then the Nelson amendment would have added the language:

(1) the mission and responsibilities of the agency or subdivision materially change; and

(2) a majority of such employees within such agency or subdivision have—as their primary duty—intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

I believe that language would be satisfactory to all parties.

Then with respect to the flexibility which the President has sought as to the other five chapters, that format would be followed so that, in essence, where we have intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work, there would be the flexibility for a national security waiver as determined by the President.

Now I have just come from a meeting with Republican leadership with the President, and there has been work over the past weekend on this issue. As yet, we do not know precisely what provisions have been agreed to. It is my hope that the language which I had suggested in September and which has been before all of the Senators who were working on the final analysis, plus this language, will be incorporated in the final bill. I will be in touch with the officials in the administration yet this afternoon to try to see to it that these provisions which are agreeable to all sides—both labor and management, to solve the labor-management controversy—can be made part of the bill, and that the language which would give the Secretary the authority to direct the analysis sections will also be included in the bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the language giving the Secretary of Homeland Defense authority to direct the analytical agencies be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks along with the language both as to collective bargaining and the flexibility in the other five divisions of labor-management.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 24, strike line 4 and insert the following:

(19) On behalf of the Secretary, subject to disapproval by the President, to direct the agencies described under subsection (f)(2) to provide intelligence information, analyses of intelligence information, and such other intelligence-related information as the Assistant Secretary for Information Analysis determines necessary.

(20) To perform such other duties relating to

(A) the agency or subdivision has as a primary function intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative, or national security work, and

(B) the provision of this chapter [5 USCS §§7101 et. seq.] cannot be applied to that agency or subdivision in a matter of consistent with national security requirements and considerations.

In addition to the requirements of sub-sections (A) and (B) the President may issue an order excluding any agency or subdivision thereof from coverage under this chapter [5 USCS §§7101 et seq.] if the President determines that—

(1) the mission and responsibilities of the agency or subdivision materially change; and

(2) a majority of such employees within such agency or subdivision have—as their primary duty—intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

Notwithstanding any other provision, the authority of the President under Section 9701 on establishment of a human resources management system shall require that the President determines that:

(A) the agency or subdivision has as a primary function intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative, or national security work, and

(B) the provisions of chapter 43, 51, 53, 71, 75 or 77 cannot be applied to that agency or subdivision in a matter consistent with national security requirements and considerations.

In addition to the requirements of sub-sections (A) and (B) the President may issue an order providing for waiver of the provisions of chapters 43, 51, 53, 71, 75 or 77 if the President determines that—

(1) the mission and responsibilities of the agency or subdivision materially change; and

(2) a majority of such employees within such agency or subdivisions have—as their primary duty—intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF BRIGADIER GENERAL VORLEY (MIKE) REXROAD

Mr. THURMOND. Madam President, I rise to pay tribute to Brigadier General Vorley (Mike) Rexroad, USAF (Retired), who died on October 12, 2002, after a life of distinguished service to the Military Health System, the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USUHS), and our Nation.

Vorley (Mike) Rexroad, a native West Virginian born on April 6, 1915, earned his Bachelor of Arts Degree from Glenville State College, Glenville, West Virginia in 1938 and his Masters in American Government at the University of New Mexico in 1948. Mike Rexroad joined the Army Air Corps on December 9, 1941, and began 61 years of service to his Nation and dedication to military medicine. In 1944, following both air flight and commando training, Lieutenant Rexroad was assigned to the British 14th Army Headquarters in Burma. At the conclusion of World War II in 1945, Captain Rexroad led the first American task force into the prisoner of war camp in Thailand. His task force included physicians and medical corpsmen; it was during this emotion-packed time when Mike Rexroad developed his sincere appreciation for military medicine.

After his release from active duty, Mike Rexroad accepted a faculty appointment at New York University, NY, however, in June of 1950, with the onset of the Korean War, Rexroad was called to active duty by the Air Force and assigned to the Office of Special Investigations/Counterintelligence.

When the war ended, Major Rexroad was selected to head one of the debriefing and interview teams for some 500 Air Force prisoners of war following their release from the North Korean prison camps. This experience reinforced Mike Rexroad's appreciation of military medicine's critical requirements for continuity and leadership. From 1955 through 1976, Mike Rexroad served as a professional staff member on Capitol Hill; he first served on the staff of Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico who was the chairman of the Subcommittee for the Department of Defense. Next he was selected by Senator John C. Stennis of Mississippi to serve as the senior staff member for the Subcommittee on Military Construction; and, continued to serve in that capacity for Senator Alan Bible of Nevada. From 1965 to 1976, he was appointed by Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, Majority Leader of the Senate and chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction, to serve as the senior staff member for the subcommittee.

Following his service in both World War II and the Korean War, his review of the medical capabilities during the Vietnam War for the U.S. Senate, and 20 years as a senior member of Senate Committee Staffs, Mike Rexroad became dedicated to preserving the lessons learned in military medicine; he concurred with Congressman F. Edward Hebert's philosophy that America needed an academic home for military medicine. In the early 1970s, Rexroad prepared documentation and memoranda for presentation to the Senate Appropriations Committee to justify the establishment of USUHS and the need for continuity and leadership in military medicine. Following the passage of Public Law 92-426, the Uniformed Services Health Professions Revitalization Act of 1972, the senior administration of USUHS worked directly with Mike Rexroad to coordinate the construction requirements for USUHS.

In 1977, when closure threatened USUHS, the now-retired Mike Rexroad again volunteered to raise Congressional support for the University. At that time, no funding had been appropriated for USUHS. On March 21, 1977 due to Rexroad's intervention, the Chairman of the Select Committee on Aging, Congressman Claude Pepper, testified on behalf of USUHS and strongly endorsed the continuation of the University; the Members of the House of Representatives voted to retain USUHS with of vote of 264 to 142. The Honorable David Packard, first chairman of the USUHS Board of Regents, succinctly described Mike Rexroad's vital role in two letters to Rexroad dated July 12, 1976 and May 10, 1977: "It is no exaggeration to say that without your assistance USUHS could and would not have been established (1976). Without your help, it is questionable whether the school would have continued to enjoy the support of the Congress (1977).” From 1993 through 1997, Rexroad was once more called upon to raise congressional support for the University. In May of 1996, the Members of the House of Representatives once more voted on the retention of USUHS. This time, with the tremendous support and coordination of the military retired associations, the vote to retain USUHS was 343 to 82. By November of 1997, the Secretary of Defense determined that USUHS should remain open; on December 11, 2000, the Honorable William S. Cohen, the Secretary of Defense, awarded the Joint Meritorious Unit Award to the University; and, on March 22, 2001, the Honorable Donald Rumsfeld, Secretary of Defense, wrote the following to the Chair of the USUHS Board of Regents:

> The Department takes great pride in the fact that the USUHS graduates have become the backbone for our Military Health System. The training they receive in combat and peacetime medicine is essential to providing superior force health protection and improving the quality of life for our service members, retirees, and families. All of us in the Office of the Secretary of Defense place great emphasis on the retention of quality physicians in the military. The USUHS ensures those goals are met.” In addition, the Association of American Medical Colleges Reporter pointed out in the December issues of both 1998 and 2001, that USUHS is the one medical school where students have been, and continue to be, trained in the medical response to weapons of mass destruction (WMD). “Today, while the other medical schools are in the process of initiating programs and training in WMD, USUHS has been providing such education since its first School of Medicine (SOM) Class of 1980; 3,265 SOM graduates and 157 advanced practice nurses have now had this training. The USUHS SOM graduates currently represent 22 percent of the physicians on active duty in the Military Health System; thus ensuring continuity and leadership for military medicine.

During his many years of support for USUHS, Mike Rexroad constantly acted upon his personal knowledge of what can go wrong when continuity and leadership are not ensured for military medicine. USUHS became a part of his overall commitment to the preservation of the hard-won knowledge of the battlefield, the absolute priorities of preventive medicine, the tremendous achievements of uniformed research, and the need for an academic home for military medicine. At the USUHS Commencement Exercises on May 15, 1998, Mike Rexroad received the Doctor of Medical Humanities, Honoris Causa; the honorary degree recognized his unfailing, consistent, and dynamic advocacy for USUHS and military medicine. Through his 87th year, there was no request from his military medical family for which he did not volunteer his time and effort; he played an essential role in making continuity and leadership a reality for military medicine.

Brigadier General Vorley (Mike) Rexroad USAF, (Retired), was an extremely gifted, resourceful, and dedicated American. The citizens of our Nation have immeasurably benefitted by his splendid record of accomplishments and commitment to military medicine. I extend my deepest sympathy to his wife, Ruth Cutlip Rexroad, formerly of New Mexico; his son, Michael David Rexroad, a state prosecuting attorney in Howard County, Maryland; his daughter-in-law, Linda; and, his two grandchildren, Michael and Laurie, on their great loss.

THE GREAT LAKES LEGACY ACT

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, I want to thank all of my colleagues in the Senate, Senator DEWINE, Senator STABENOW, Senator VOINOVICH, Senator CLINTON, Senator DURBIN, Senator DAYTON, and Senator WELLSTONE, as well as Representative VERN EHLERS for their leadership in passing the Great Lakes Legacy Act which is now on its way to the President. I want to thank Chairman JEFFORDS and the Environment and Public Works Committee. I also want to thank the Lake Michigan Federation, Sierra Club, the Northeast-Midwest Institute, the Great Lakes Commission, and the Council of Great Lakes Industry for their contributions to the successes of this bill.

I am particularly pleased that H.R. 1070 includes several of the legislative improvements contained in my companion legislation, S. 2544. As a result of the Senate amendments, H.R. 1070 now authorizes the Great Lakes National Program Office to carry out a public information program to provide information about the contaminated sediments and activities to cleanup the site. The Great Lakes National Program Office is reauthorized and may receive up to $25 million per year which is $14 million higher than the expired authorization. H.R. 1070 also responds to the GAO report released in May by requiring the EPA to submit a report to Congress on the actions, time periods, and resources which are necessary to fulfill the duties of the EPA relating to oversight of Remedial Action Plans at Areas of Concern. Lastly, the legislation has the flexibility to allow both cash and in-kind contributions to be used to meet the non-Federal cost-share requirement.

The Great Lakes Legacy Act is needed to address a problem that has been plaguing the Great Lakes for many decades. The region's industrial past unfortunately created a legacy of contaminated sediments, PCBs, heavy metals and other toxic substances in the lakes and tributaries that feed into the Great Lakes.

These pollutants, which are degrading the health of both humans and wildlife, settled at the bottom of the tributaries and harbors where they were dumped and contaminated the sediment or material on the bottom. Contaminated sediment is a major environmental problem in our region, and it is critical that some of these concentrated deposits of contaminated sediment be addressed now, because the longer we wait to cleanup the contamination, the longer we will see fish advisories in the Great Lakes. Cleanup delays also mean a greater likelihood that the sediment will be transported into the open waters of the Great Lakes where cleanup is virtually impossible.

We have taken steps under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement to limit the amount of toxic pollutants entering the Great Lakes ecosystem, and some progress has been made in removing contaminated sediments from our regional waters. Based on information that was gathered in 1999 by the EPA, over 1.7 million cubic yards of contaminated sediment have been removed or treated at a cost of over $300 million at the 32 Areas of Concern in the Great Lakes.

However, the General Accounting Office and others have reported that cleanup progress has been slow. With this legislation, EPA can aggressively deal with contaminants that were deposited into the sediments decades ago.

This bill authorizes up to $50 million per year to EPA's Great Lakes National Program Office in order to cleanup contaminated Areas of Concern. This includes monitoring and evaluating sites, cleaning up contaminated sediment or preventing further contamination. Projects identified in a Remedial Action Plan would be given priority for this funding. The EPA is required to submit to Congress a report on the actions, time and resources necessary to fulfill the duties of the EPA relating to oversight of Remedial Action Plans at Areas of Concern. Under this legislation, funding will be made available for innovative research to improve our cleanup technology. Additionally, this legislation allows EPA to give money to local groups, States, or tribal groups for outreach and education efforts.

Again, I am very pleased that the Congress has taken this critical step for the Great Lakes, and I look forward to the President signing this legislation.

Mr. DEWINE. Madam President, I am pleased to join my colleague from Michigan and fellow Great Lakes Task Force Co-Chair, Senator LEVIN, in announcing that the Great Lakes Legacy has passed Congress. This legislation is vital in our efforts to address the slow progress in restoring the Areas of Concern, AOC, throughout the Great Lakes.

In 1987, the United States and Canada made a commitment under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement to cleanup AOCs, but as the General Accounting Office and others have reported, cleanup has been slow. The EPA reported in 1999 that over 1.7 million cubic yards of contaminated sediment have been removed or treated at 32 Areas of Concern in the Great Lakes, all at a cost of over $300 million. However, none of the 26 AOCs that are entirely in the United States have been restored to their beneficial use, approximately half of the sites have abandoned the remedial action planning process agreed to under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, and the EPA does not know how long cleanup will take nor how expensive cleanup will be.

The cleanup of these Areas of Concern is important both to human health, as well as the health of the ecosystem. With the legislation Congress recently passed, the EPA can aggressively deal with contaminants that were deposited into the sediments decades ago. Our bill authorizes up to $50 million per year to the EPA's Great Lakes National Program Office to cleanup contaminated AOCs. This includes monitoring and evaluating sites, cleaning up contaminated sediment, or preventing further contamination.

Under our bill, the EPA will be required to submit to Congress a report on the actions, time, and resources necessary to fulfill the duties of the EPA relating to oversight of Remedial Action Plans at Areas of Concern. Furthermore, funding will be made available for innovative research to improve our cleanup technology. Additionally, this legislation allows EPA to give money to local organizations, States, or tribal groups for outreach and education efforts.

In closing, I want to thank Senators LEVIN, VOINOVICH, STABENOW, CLINTON, DURBIN, DAYTON, and WELLSTONE, as well as Representative VERN EHLERS and the other co-sponsors in the House for their leadership. I also wish to thank the Lake Michigan Federation, the Sierra Club, the Northeast-Midwest Institute, the Great Lakes Commission, and the Council of Great Lakes Industry for their contributions to drafting and passing this bill. It will have a lasting, positive impact on the future of our Great Lakes.

REMEDIAL ALTERNATIVES

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, I want to thank my friend and chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee for his leadership on restoring some of the Nation's great waters. H.R. 1070, the Great Lakes Legacy Act, will allow the TPA to fund cleanup of contaminated sediments at Areas of Concern in the Great Lakes. Because this contamination poses a significant human health risk, it is important that before cleanup may begin at an Area of Concern using funds under this act, there must be consideration of remedial alternatives and their short and long-term effects on human health and the environment.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I agree with my colleague from Michigan, and the bill requires the EPA to review the short-term and long-term effects of the proposed cleanup strategy before the project may be carried out.

Mr. LEVIN. Is my colleague aware that the current Remedial Action Plan process and the PA's Contaminated Sediment Management Strategy both consider an evaluation of the heath risks posed by contaminated sites and the cleanup alternatives and that many Remedial Action Plans already include such an evaluation of the health risks?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I am aware that the current Remedial Action Plan and other processes consider an evaluation of the effects of cleanup alternatives and that many Remedial Action Plans already include such an evaluation. Additional evaluation is not required when the Remedial Action Plan has already evaluated the short and long term effects of remedial alternatives on human health and the environment.

Mr. LEVIN. Would my colleague agree that the evaluation that must be conducted under this bill is not meant to be a redundant task upon the EPA?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I agree.

BAKERS CREEK TRAGEDY

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I have sought recognition today to honor the forty U.S. soldiers who tragically perished in Bakers Creek, Queensland, Australia on June 14, 1943. Their deaths came as a result of the crash of a B–17C Flying Fortress, which proved to be the worst aviation disaster of the Southwest Pacific theater during World War II. More soldiers died on that plane from my home State of Pennsylvania—six—than from any other State. These six were as follows: Pvt. James E. Finney; T/Sgt. Alfred H. Frezza; Sgt. Donald B. Kyper; Pfc. Frank S. Penksa; Sgt. Anthony Rudnick; and Cpl. Raymond H. Smith.

I understand that members of the Bakers Creek Memorial Association, USA, based in Orrtanna, PA, have located the families of Pvt. Finney, T/Sgt. Frezza, and Sgt. Kyper. However, the Association continues to search for the relatives of Pfc. Penska, Sgt. Rudnick, and Cpl. Smith to notify them of the specifics surrounding their loved ones' deaths. Only recently has the Air Force officially recognized this tragedy.

The aircraft that crashed had been operated by the United States Army Air Force 46th Transport Carrier Squadron, 317th Troop Carrier Group, 5th Air Force Division. The plane was one of the many B–17 bomber aircraft that had been removed from combat status and converted into transport aircraft. Shortly after takeoff from the Mackay airport in Bakers Creek, the B–17 lost altitude, fell to the earth in a slow and steady bank, and crashed in a ball of flames. The forty lost onboard included six crew members and thirty-five soldiers returning to their posts after being on leave in Australia.

Next June will mark the 60th anniversary of the Bakers Creek crash. I understand that Major General, Retired, Robert H. Appleby, former Commander of the Pennsylvania Army National Guard, plans to lead a contingent of victims' families to Australia in observance of the anniversary. I applaud the members of the Bakers Creek Memorial Association, USA, including General Appleby and Mr. Robert S. Cutler, for undertaking this and other initiatives which keep the memory of the fallen heroes of Bakers Creek alive and well.

THANKING AREA LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, I rise today to commend the Maryland, Virginia, and Federal law enforcement agencies on the capture and arrest of the snipers who terrorized our region. For the citizens of Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia, life slowly returned to normal after the 23 days of sniper shootings in October, but life will never return to normal for the families of the victims who were killed, and those who are still recovering from their injuries. I would like to extend my sympathies to those families and to say that our hearts go out to them in this difficult time.

Thanks to the hard work and dedication of the police forces in our region, the sniper attacks were stopped before they could do more harm. An unprecedented level of cooperation and coordination among the different jurisdictions involved, as well as among the Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, led to the capture of the two individuals now charged in the sniper attacks. The task force created during the sniper attacks did an excellent and effective job of sharing information, working together, and putting the safety of our citizens first. I thank all of the men and women who worked so tirelessly to apprehend the suspects and commend them for a job well done.

The Federal Government also played an important role in the investigation. The FBI provided support to State and local police forces in conducting the manhunt, the ATF helped track and research the guns and bullets used by the snipers, and the Department of Defense provided planes to monitor the region from the air. On October 8, I wrote a letter to Attorney General Ashcroft stating my support for Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose's request for Federal aid in the investigation, and I am extremely grateful that Federal aid was granted.

While it is impossible to thank all of those involved, I would like to acknowledge by name the resolve, extraordinary dedication and performance of Montgomery County, Maryland

Police Chief Charles Moose and County Executive Doug Duncan, FBI Special Agent Gary Bald, and ATF agent Mike Bouchard, who became the public face of the crisis and the investigation for people all across the country. Their leadership, calm determination, and obvious skill in the most trying and tragic of circumstances, without precedent in our area, helped inform and assure the public that everything possible was being done.

Now that this multistate manhunt is over, the States involved must deal with the financial costs of the investigation. In order to assist area States in paying for these costs, I joined with Senators MIKULSKI, WARNER and ALLEN in a letter to the Department of Justice requesting Federal reimbursement for the enormous costs of the investigation. I am confident that these suspects will be brought to justice and that this may provide some small measure of comfort for those who lost loved ones in these attacks.

The 23 days in October were a trying time for our area and the uncertainty of the sniper attacks unnerved residents of the region. The weight of this concern has been lifted, thanks to the hard work of our area law enforcement agencies. But for the families of those killed in the attacks, their loss will never be remedied and for them the weight will never be lifted.

We must move forward and reflect on the lessons learned from these tragic attacks. All jurisdictions involved, as well as the expanding number of jurisdictions in which these two suspects allegedly committed crimes, must now focus on preparedness. We have learned how effective the coordination of law enforcement agencies can be, and we must plan for such coordination in the future. And we in Congress can take steps to help States improve preparedness, coordinate law enforcement agencies, and use tools such as ballistic fingerprinting to prevent this from ever happening again.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred June 5, 2001 in El Monte, CA. Three Latino men were accused of a hate crime after beating an African-American teen at a party and using racial epithets. The victim, who was dancing with a Latina woman at the time of the attack, suffered cuts to the mouth; a friend who came to his aid received abrasions to the face. One of the assailants fired a gun into the air before fleeing the party.

I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

RECOGNIZING THE 227TH BIRTHDAY OF THE UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS

Mr. LUGAR. Madam President, on November 10th, we honored the 227th birthday of the U.S. Marine Corps. For more than two centuries, the U.S. Marine Corps has exemplified the highest virtues of commitment, service, and sacrifice. From the Barbary Coast to the far reaches of the Pacific, in the jungles of Vietnam and across the vast expanse of the Arabian desert, America's Marines have lived up to their motto: "Semper Fidelis."

Through the long march of our history, the U.S. Marine Corps has built a proud tradition. The smallest of the four service branches, they have typically been the "tip of the spear" of American military might. U.S. Marines have been among the first troops dispatched to international crises over the past century. Always apace with world dynamics, they have expanded their expertise to encompass the entire spectrum of conflict from humanitarian assistance to major theater war. Amphibious Forces have demonstrated—in times of crisis and frequently on very short notice—that they possess a capable and formidable "package" of ships and Marines to meet the threat across the full spectrum of modern conflict.

Our Marines have protected America's interests, struggled against foes that meant harm to our national security and that of our allies, and remained at the forefront of our Nation's efforts to maintain global peace and stability. From Lebanon to Bangladesh to Somalia, Marines restored and maintained order, aided people in distress, provided protection for the weak, and upheld the values that have come to define our country on the world stage. Many also made the ultimate sacrifice in the service of their country, and we honor their memory.

America's Amphibious Forces remain the force of choice in responding to crises in this uncertain world. When, in the early part of this year, this nation resolved to liberate Afghanistan from an oppressive regime and take action upon terrorist aggressors, it was again the United States Marine Corps who got the call—and responded valiantly. Despite Afghanistan's isolation, the first sustained U.S. military operation ashore was conducted by the 15th and 26th Marine Expeditionary Units, an expeditionary force that was deployed, organized and launched from the USS Peleliu and USS Bataan Amphibious Ready Groups. These two MEU's seized and established the first in-country staging base (Rhino, nearly 400 nautical miles inland), secured the Kandahar airport (another 200 miles) and established a base from which quick-reaction operations could be conducted to further track down Taliban and al-Qaida forces.

Amphibious ships with embarked Marine forces are one of the most formidable power projection capabilities in the world and represent our Nation's only sustainable forcible-entry capability. In peace and in war, their value has been ever-present.

Always faithful, our Marines are men and women of greatness. Tough and dedicated, they are truly the best America has to offer. For 227 years, they have stood for all that is great about this Nation. Their values, sense of courage and steadfast character remain timeless and valuable commodities for an age in which our Nation faces considerable new threats.

Today, not unlike 227 years ago, the importance of our Marine Corps is immutable. The razor-sharp readiness of the U.S. Marine Corps reassures our friends and warns our enemies, promising swift action, decisive victories and a firm adherence to tradition.

As our U.S. Marine Corps celebrates another anniversary of its proud birth on November 10th, 1775 in Philadelphia's Tun Tavern, I stand with my colleagues in the Senate in saluting all who have worn the eagle, globe and anchor, and to their families who also serve by supporting them.

RECOGNIZING OUR NATION'S VETERANS

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, we convene again today after a national holiday set aside to honor one of America's greatest treasures, its veterans.

This important holiday, originally called Armistice Day, began as a commemoration of the historic ending of World War I at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1918. Armistice Day became primarily a day of remembrance for those who served during World War I; indeed, Americans hoped World War I would be "the war to end all wars."

Then, during World War II, 16 million Americans again answered the call to service on behalf of our Nation. After the war ended, Americans saw the need to honor all those who served in the United States Armed Forces, during times of war and peace, and through all periods of our history. On June 1, 1954, Armistice Day became Veterans Day.

I know that many of my colleagues joined me yesterday in taking the Veterans Day holiday to celebrate the soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen who wore this Nation's uniform and served honorably. That is a start, but we must do more.

As the crisis with Iraq heightens, it is especially appropriate to make certain that we keep the promise of care and support made to young men and women who made great sacrifices on behalf of this Nation. We must remember the pledge of Abraham Lincoln, "to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan." As Chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I have fought hard for improvements in benefits and services for our Nation's veterans. We have made progress in fulfilling Abraham Lincoln's pledge this year, but we must never waiver in our commitment to provide our veterans with benefits and services that reflect their changing needs.

For example, our Nation's rapidly aging veterans have a critical need for long-term care. There can be no doubt that such care requires great resources, but it is our responsibility to answer the call to provide a continuum of quality health care for veterans, as they once answered the call to preserve our freedoms.

I am honored to represent the State of West Virginia, which has one of the highest veteran populations per capita of any State. The service of the over 202,000 living West Virginia veterans inspires me each day in my role as Chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, where I have the privilege to serve not only the veterans of West Virginia, but those living throughout this Nation.

America's 25 million living veterans deserve to be honored and respected every day, and not merely on the national holiday set aside for the commemoration of their service. It would be shameful if veterans were made to feel forgotten every day except for this one day each year. There should be no ambivalence toward those who have served our Nation in the armed forces.

I urge my colleagues to join me, not only to remember the sacrifices of our veterans, but to renew our commitment to them and to keep the promises that we made to them in the spirit of Abraham Lincoln. The men and women who served this Nation deserve no less.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to our Nation's devoted Veterans. It is these men and women, past and present, who embody the ideals of freedom, liberty and justice, which are the foundation of our great Nation.

Veterans Day is a time to recognize those Americans who gave what President Abraham Lincoln once called "the last full measure of devotion." While we reflect on the deeds of these heroes and stand grateful for their service and sacrifice, we must also ponder the ongoing actions of our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines.

Ours is a great Nation of free people who call our finest men and women to stand guard and protect the liberty that all Americans enjoy. To this end, all of those who have donned the uniform of our Armed Forces have consciously given a piece of themselves. Whether during peacetime or a time of conflict; at home or abroad; in the active component, the reserves or the national guard; their service has been characterized by selflessness and a sense of a greater purpose.

Throughout our history, they have answered the call. Whether that call to service sent them to a distant land full of turmoil, or to the flight line at a base in the Midwest, they have served with dignity and honor.

I am proud that my home State of Texas has a rich tradition of military leadership. Our young men and women have signed up to serve their Nation and are stationed throughout the United States and in all corners of the globe. More Marines join the Corps from Texas per capita than any other State. And we are home to more Army and Air Force bases than any State.

As these men and women have sacrificed, so too has a far less recognized segment of our Veteran population—their spouses. For each displaced serviceman, there is often a husband or wife left behind. These silent patriots have kissed their loved ones goodbye and sent them off to serve this country. They diligently run their households while their mate provides security at an airport in another part of the country or serves on a foreign base halfway around the globe. They have often put their career on hold and patiently moved the family to the next in a long series of new bases and new communities. Whatever accolades we bestow upon our Veterans, we must also remember the parallel sacrifice of their heroic spouses.

Today our troops are answering the call to duty in locations around the world. The war on terrorism is being waged by America's finest, from Afghanistan to the Philippines. Soldiers in South Korea continue to keep watch on the communist regime to their North. Air Force pilots continue to patrol the skies over Iraq as the world contemplates the future of the region. Reservists and National Guardsmen continue to serve, at the expense of their civilian vocations, on extended active duty for a year or more. Some of our military patriots continue to serve well beyond the date they were to leave active service because the Nation continues to need their expertise.

On this Veterans Day, we express our heartfelt gratitude to our Nation's veterans and to their spouses. We have incurred a debt to them that can never be fully repaid. Today we remember those who have gone before and honor tomorrow's veterans who serve our country today.

SUPPORTING LEGISLATION TO PROVIDE MORE BANKRUPTCY JUDGES FOR MARYLAND

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, I rise today in strong support of legislation to provide more bankruptcy judges for several States, including three additional bankruptcy judgeships for my own State of Maryland. This legislation was introduced by Senator BIDEN and is being cosponsored by Senators CARPER, EDWARDS, FEINSTEIN, and SCHUMER.

This bill represents a significant step forward in our efforts to strengthen Maryland's Federal bankruptcy court. I have long been involved in this effort, and I commend Senator BIDEN for his efforts in this area. We have been working for several years to get these additional judgeships approved, yet no legislation has been passed that would authorize them. With such inaction, the problem facing Maryland's sitting bankruptcy judges has grown, and Maryland has remained without the additional judgeships it so desperately needs to make our bankruptcy system work.

Maryland's four sitting bankruptcy judges continue to show remarkable dedication given the extraordinary burdens placed upon them. However, additional judgeships remain essential to the fair and timely administration of the bankruptcy code for all of the businesses and individuals that come before the Maryland District.

Since 1992, we have been requesting additional judgeships for the District of Maryland; thus far none has been approved. In 1992, there were approximately 15,000 bankruptcy filings in the District of Maryland. From 1998 to 2001, there were over 30,000 bankruptcy filings per year in Maryland. The caseload has doubled for the sitting bankruptcy judges in the past 10 years, and they still do their work with only 4 sitting bankruptcy judges. This dire need for additional judgeships in Maryland has yet to be remedied by the Congress.

This legislation provides three additional judgeships for Maryland. These three additional judgeships would help reduce the overwhelming workload of the four sitting bankruptcy judges. However, a September 2002 recommendation from the U.S. Judicial Conference calls for the creation of four additional judgeships in our State. And while the District of Maryland will be pleased to get three additional judges, the recommendation of the Judicial Conference for four additional bankruptcy judgeships demonstrates just how critical the situation is. As of June 30, 2002, the national weighted filing average for bankruptcy judges was 1,641. The weighted filing per judge for Maryland's 4 bankruptcy judges was 3,030 almost twice the national average.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support S. 3074, which would provide much needed help on the bankruptcy courts in Maryland and across the Nation.

INTENT OF TAA HEALTH INSURANCE TAX CREDIT PROVISIONS

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, as I have said on numerous occasions, I am extremely pleased with the health care provisions in the Trade Act of 2002. The advanceable, refundable 65 percent tax credit toward the purchase of health insurance premiums for TAA workers and PBGC retirees represents a monumental precedent. It is an important precedent for Democrats because, for the first time, the federal government will extend assistance for health coverage to laid-off workers. And the provisions are also important for Republicans and others who believe that the best way to help the uninsured is through tax credits for the purchase of health insurance. This program is an important test case, if you will, to determine whether this approach is viable and workable.

It is the viability and workability of the tax credit that I wish to address today.

Our negotiations on the Trade Act health credits were really a continuation of discussions that started around this time last year—during the debate over economic stimulus. Democrats had proposed including a 75 percent subsidy for COBRA premiums coupled with Medicaid expansions as part of our economic stimulus package. Republicans initially proposed a limited block grant for health care assistance and later altered their package to include individual tax credits for health insurance.

It goes without saying that Republicans preferred a tax credit approach rather than a subsidy approach, and the Democrats expressed a strong preference for group-based insurance over individual insurance.

The resulting compromise that was reached as part of the trade deal truly was a delicately-crafted bipartisan effort. Democrats moved from a premium subsidy to a tax credit, dropped the Medicaid expansion, and yielded on the issue of requiring those eligible for COBRA to purchase only COBRA coverage. Republicans got their tax credit, but it does not allow new individual market policies to be purchased with the tax credit except for those who had such coverage while they were working.

The health insurance options available to TAA workers and PBGC retirees include COBRA and state-based COBRA, as well as:

state high risk pools;

state employee benefit plans—or comparable programs established by a state;

direct purchasing arrangements between states and insurers;

a state-operated health plan;

coverage purchased through a private purchasing pool; and coverage under a spouse's employer group plan.

In other words, eligible workers and retirees will be given a wide range of health insurance choices—depending on which options their state has adopted. Having a number of choices is important to Republicans and will be appreciated by TAA workers and PBGC retirees as well.

I understand that some might try to read the legislative language regarding these options in a way that would allow broader access to insurance purchased in the individual market. That was not our intention. As I mentioned above, the Senate bill and conference report explicitly agreed to include individual health insurance as qualified health insurance, but only for individuals who had such coverage for one month prior to separation from employment. We did not intend to allow states to enter into arrangements with individual insurers through the state-based coverage options.

The second point I would like to make addresses the insurance protection provisions—guaranteed issue, a bar against pre-existing condition limitations, and premium and benefit protections. This language was part of the Senate bill, only we applied the protections to all of the state pooling options.

The conference report required workers to have had three months of previous health care coverage in order for these important protections to apply. The language is vague, however, and does not specify when the three months of aggregate coverage had to occur. I'd like to clarify here that this coverage should occur for three months prior to employment separation necessary to attain eligibility for assistance under this law.

A more narrow reading of the three-month coverage requirement would disqualify those who have had lapses of coverage between the loss of job-based or retiree coverage and application or eligibility determination for assistance under this program. After all, the goal of the health provisions was to ensure access to coverage and to prevent the loss of health coverage.

On that same point, the language on premium protections could be read to allow insurers to charge different rates to individuals participating in the TAA program. That was not our intention. The Senate language was intended to mean that TAA workers, as a group, should be charged the same premiums when states choose to enroll these individuals in existing insurance arrangements—for example in state employee health plans. Individual workers should not be charged higher premiums based on their health status in these plans.

And, if a State elects to create a new insurance pooling arrangement—in which case it is not possible to compare premiums for TAA workers to anyone else—we had intended that States would not allow premium rating on an individual basis but rather as a group.

To make my views known to the agencies that will administer the new tax credit, last week I sent letters to the Treasury Department, the Department of Labor, and the Department of Health and Human services regarding congressional intent in the TAA health insurance tax credit.

It is my sincere hope that we can bring the same willingness to work together and compromise to other important health care issues.

I ask unanimous consent that letters I previously referred to be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

October 17, 2002.

PAUL H. O'NEILL,
Secretary, U.S. Department of Treasury, 1500 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY O'NEILL: In a few short weeks, the health insurance assistance provisions of the Trade Act of 2002 will take effect. The passage and enactment of the historical Act was the result of a delicately-crafted bipartisan effort. I was proud to play a role in this significant achievement, and I will continue to work with you to ensure its successful implementation and operation. To that end, I am writing to ensure that the Act's critically-important health insurance protections are implemented consistent with the intent and the letter of the law.

As you know, for many of the supporters of the Trade Act, the health assistance was the single most important factor in overcoming concerns about the effects of enhanced trade negotiating authority on American jobs. These provisions were designed to assure American workers that the potential loss of work does not equal the loss of health coverage. Protecting health coverage is especially important now. We recently learned that an additional 1.4 million Americans became uninsured in 2001. Successful implementation of this new law can make a difference in preventing additional workers and their families from losing health coverage.

As you implement this law, there are three issues that I particularly want to emphasize. First, members of the Conference Committee explicitly agreed to include individual health insurance as qualified health insurance, but only for those qualifying individuals who had such coverage for one month prior to separation from employment (see section (35)(e)(1)(J)). We did not intend to allow states to enter into arrangements with individual insurers through the state-based coverage options, and I believe that this objective is clear in the conference report. Any other interpretation of the law would be a violation of the intent of its authors.

Second, for those without access to employer-based coverage, we included strong consumer protections. To prevent discriminatory premiums and substandard benefits, we linked the premiums and benefits offered to qualifying individuals to those of "similarly situated individuals" (see sections (35)(e)(2)(A)(iii and iv)). In plain English, this means that individuals eligible for this tax credit should neither be charged premiums or offered benefits that apply only to this group nor pay higher premiums based on their own health status or history.

In addition, the law provides guaranteed issue to qualifying individuals (see section (35)(e)(2)(A)(i)). "Guaranteed issue" has the same meaning in this law that it has in state regulation of insurance. Specifically, to be qualified health insurance, each plan must ensure access to each qualified individual who meets the other criteria for this coverage. It does not mean that an issuer of health insurance can accept some but not all qualifying individuals so long as there is an alternative that accepts the denied individuals (e.g., a high-risk pool).

Third, since the goal of this provision is preventing loss of health coverage, the Conference Committee agreed that eligible individuals must also have been previously insured for three months (see section (35)(e)(3)(B)). The law does not specify when this aggregate of three months of creditable coverage had to occur. To clarify, we intended that this coverage should occur for three months prior to employment separation necessary to attain eligibility for assistance under this law (e.g., termination due to trade in the case of displaced workers eligible for trade adjustment assistance and retirement in the case of Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC) eligible individuals). The three-month coverage requirement should not disqualify those who had or have lapses of coverage between the loss of job-based or retiree coverage and application or eligibility determination for assistance to this program. Indeed, these individuals have a special need for access to affordable health insurance and should not be penalized due to delays in passing, implementing, and operating this law.

I make these clarifications to underscore their importance in successfully implementing the health provisions of the Trade Act. I know that the President shares our mutual commitment to make this an effective program that preserves health insurance for this set of American workers and retirees. I look forward toward a continued collaboration in implementing, monitoring, and, if successful, expanding these important health policies.

Sincerely,

MAX BAUCUS.

COMPLIANCE OF IMMIGRATION LAWS PROVISION OF THE CYBER SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I would like to engage in a brief colloquy with the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator ORRIN HATCH, regarding H.R. 3394, the Cyber Security Research and Development Act, which was passed by the Senate in October and is set for consideration by the House of Representatives today. Section 16 of the bill is intended to ensure that Federal grants and fellowships for cyber security research and development are not awarded to individuals violating the terms of his or her immigration status, individuals from States sponsoring terrorism, or institutions that are not in compliance with appropriate record keeping requirements for immigrant students.

Mr. HATCH. Section 16 of H.R. 3394 would ensure that the authorized funding in the bill for research purposes does not support individuals in violation of U.S. immigration laws. The intent of this section is to prevent any funding, directly or indirectly, of any individual who may pose a threat to our national security, or of any higher education institution, nonprofit institution, or consortia thereof that is not in compliance with the immigration laws. This section does not provide any new or additional authority to the Immigration and Naturalization Service or any other federal agency.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The ranking member is correct. Our intent with this provision is not to create new immigration laws or grant new authority. Rather, this provision merely makes compliance with existing immigration laws a requirement for grant eligibility. We also recognize that this section cannot take effect until regulations are issued under 8 U.S.C. 1372(c)(1).

Mr. HATCH. I agree with the chairman of the Commerce Committee. I also want to thank him, Senator ALLEN and Senator WYDEN for working with me to include these provisions in the act.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank Senator HATCH. Section 16 will ensure that our national security is protected while increasing critical research and development cyber-security programs.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

IN HONOR OF SAFE KIDS

• Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I want to commend the Children's Hospital, of the Greenville, SC, Hospital System, for being honored by the National SAFE KIDS campaign as the best of the best in the Nation.

Today, the No. 1 killer of children ages 14 and under is unintentional injury. Whether it is caused by children not wearing a helmet when riding a bike, or accidentally swallowing poison, or not buckling seat belts, or playing with matches—the National SAFE KIDS movement is taking every measure possible to educate American families to prevent such injuries.

There are some 370 local SAFE KIDS coalitions in America and abroad working on this issue, and for Greenville to be named the 2002 SAFE KIDS Coalition of the Year is quite an honor. Greenville also was recognized for having the best national SAFE KIDS week in the Nation. Each year, Greenville hosts the event at a local mall, bringing together 800 volunteers to reach 5,000 children.

I thank Greenville's Linda Brees, Musette Stern, Kathy Harper, and their network of community volunteers for making the safety of children a No. 1 priority in my home state.•

IN MEMORY OF RUSS PETERSON

• Mr. LUGAR. Madam President, I have recently received news that Mr. Russ Peterson, a fellow Hoosier and an outstanding American, has passed away. I rise today to offer my condolences to the Peterson family and share with my colleagues a few words regarding his lifetime of service and achievement.

Mr. Peterson embodied all of the characteristics of an outstanding leader. He served as President of Porter Advertising, a firm based in Richmond, Indiana. Mr. Peterson was a remarkable community business leader whose vision and determination created jobs and generated economic growth across Indiana. He also served, nationally, in leadership positions for the Outdoor Advertising Association of America.

While his entrepreneurial achievements are impressive, I admire his countless contributions to the community of Richmond, Indiana. He was a music afficionado and enthusiast, who used his talents and leadership positions to encourage and support local performance arts and music. In addition, he was a performer and sang in the Central United Methodist Church choir, a local symphony chorus, various operas, and even a barbershop quartet many years ago.

Mr. President, I am pleased to have this opportunity to pay tribute to the life of Russ Peterson. I express my most solemn condolences to his wife of nearly 50 years, Joan Porter Peterson, and his entire family.•

IN MEMORY OF FRANCES HUMPHREY HOWARD

• Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, last month our extended Senate family suffered a great loss with the passing of Frances Humphrey Howard. I know her brother, our former colleague from Minnesota, Hubert Humphrey, would appreciate this body recognizing the important role she played.

Frances Howard was always a trend setter. When few women went to college, she graduated with a master's degree. She worked for Eleanor Roosevelt. She was a foreign service officer for the State Department at a time when mostly men were in the foreign service. She worked for the National Institutes of Health as a liaison officer, developing programs for medical libraries. She sat on the board of several companies involved with the arts and social activism. And when her colleagues retired at 65, Frances worked until she was 85.

Senator Humphrey adored his younger sister, and for good reason. He would not have been the warrior he was without his chief supporter, chief confidant, and chief campaigner. All of the important bills Senator Humphrey sponsored on civil rights, on Medicare, on the Peace Corps, and on the Food Stamp program were influenced by her concern for minorities, the elderly, the sick, and the hungry. She was a great advocate for laws that make a real difference in the lives of the neediest in this country.

Frances' role was behind the scenes, but today, instead of always quitting her good job to help Senator Humphrey in his campaigns, she'd have run herself—and won. If Hubert were here we might be listening to all the stories, but they can be summed up in one sentence: During her sixty years as an activist in Washington, Frances Humphrey Howard truly made a difference.

I know all of my colleagues, and especially our spouses, will miss Frances. My wife, Peatsy, joins me in extending our gratitude for her untiring efforts and our deepest sympathy to her children, Anne and William, and to the entire Humphrey family.●

TRIBUTE TO BARBARA SNELLING

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Madam President, today I congratulate and thank the Honorable Barbara W. Snelling from Shelburne, VT on her lifetime of service to Vermont citizens, young and old.

Back in Vermont, Barbara is being honored by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce as the 2002 Citizen of the Year. In my home state, the Snelling name is synonymous with public service, commitment to community, personal integrity and leadership.

Barbara ran for public office in 1991, shortly after the untimely death of her husband, Gov. Richard A. Snelling. Her list of achievements is long: two-term Lieutenant Governor; two-term State Senator; president of a consulting firm for 14 years; trustee for her alma mater, Radcliffe College; and current member of the United States Peace Institute, an appointment made by former President Clinton. She has also held seemingly endless titles in her community, from Girl Scout Troop leader to United Way Board member.

Her life work is a testament to the meaning of public service that few individuals are capable of achieving. Barbara's endless devotion and commitment to the people of Vermont uniquely qualifies her as a key advisor to her daughter, Diane Snelling, who now serves as a Vermont State Senator.

Barbara has become a symbol of the strength in spirit and courage to overcome adversity. In 1996, during her bid for Governor, she suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and lapsed into a coma. Her determination and drive led to a miraculous recovery.

In her work at the Vermont State House, Barbara used the legislative process for the benefit of all and detriment to none. Each day, Barbara works tirelessly for Vermont, and for this we must all thank her. We owe a great deal to this courageous and determined stateswoman.

Congratulations, Barbara. Your leadership and grace are legendary to the people of Vermont. We are all extremely proud of you and your accomplishments.●

60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

● Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam President, today I congratulate George and Gertrude Lewis on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary. They have been residents of Oregon for most of their lives, first in Medford and now in Lake Oswego.

George Lewis was born May 8, 1920 in Takilma, OR. Gertrude Lewis was born July 22, 1920 in Lambert, MT.

George and Gertrude met in the fall of 1939 when they were both pursuing undergraduate studies at the University of Washington in Seattle, WA. They began dating in the spring of 1941 and were married November 11, 1942. November 11, 2002 marks their 60th wedding anniversary.

George joined the Army Air Force, and he left to join allied forces in Europe in February of 1943. On April 5, 1943, his plane was shot down and he became a Prisoner of War until he was liberated on May 8, 1945. He has received a Purple Heart for his service to his country.

George and Gertrude's first child, Diane, was born on October 13, 1943 while George was still a POW. He didn't meet his daughter until he returned from the war in 1945. They then moved to Medford, OR, where George worked for United Airlines as a passenger agent. On April 22, 1946, their second child Stephen was born.

In 1950, George and Gertrude opened their own business, Rogue Valley Travel, a travel agency in Medford, OR. They ran the company together until they sold it and retired in 1980. Gertrude remembers that one of the best times of their lives was in 1952 when they were able to afford their first trip to New York City and Europe, where they visited London and Paris. Since that time, they have traveled all over the world, to Europe, Asia, Africa and more. George's and Gertrude's grandchildren will always remember a map kept in the garage in their home in Medford with pins of all the cities they had been to.

In 1999, George and Gertrude moved to Lake Oswego, OR, where they live today.

Their two children, six grandchildren and two great grandchildren, are proud to help them celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary and work to live by the great example they have set.●

TRIBUTE TO DR. STANLEY F. TODD SR.

● Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to my friend and hero, the late Dr. Stanley E. Todd Sr. I would also like to extend my most heartfelt condolences to his daughter Becky Todd York, his son Stanley E. Todd Jr., his twin sister Hazel Bush, and his grandchildren.

As a World War II veteran, Dr. Todd possessed a great deal of courage and patriotism that deserves to be recognized and commended. He served as a nose gunner on a B–24 bomber, an endeavor that nearly cost him his life. At one point during his time in the service, Dr. Todd's plane was shot down over Austria and he became a German prisoner of war.

Though the trials Dr. Todd endured contributed to the person he became, he did not let his harrowing experiences have an adverse affect on his life. Instead, he learned never to take a single moment for granted, a paradigm that rings true and serves as an example to all of us he leaves behind.

After completing his service in the military and marrying Esta Newman, Dr. Todd enrolled in the University of Louisville School of Dentistry. He practiced dentistry in Richmond, Ky., for 33 years. Also in Richmond, Dr. Todd helped found the Richmond Health and Rehabilitation Center, a facility that has provided care to residents since 1968.

Even after retiring in 1982, Dr. Todd continued to maintain an active lifestyle. He served Richmond as a city commissioner and also as chairman of the Richmond Housing Authority. Additionally, he was a former chairman of the board of the Kentucky Heart Association, and served on the board of the Kentucky River Foothills Development Corporation. An elder of Richmond's First Christian church, Dr. Todd provided missionary dental work in Haiti and helped found a local clothing bank. He was also instrumental in the organization of Richmond Little League baseball, and the founding of Stanton Woodcraft in Richmond.

I am certain that the legacy that Dr. Stanley E. Todd Sr., left behind will continue on. Indeed, he possessed a tremendous personal story that serves as a testament to the strength of his spirit and his faith and God. His faith, valor and strength of character should serve as an inspiration to us all. On behalf of myself and my colleagues in the Senate, I offer my deepest condolences to Dr. Todd's friends and loved ones, and express my gratitude for all he contributed to the Commonwealth of Kentucky and to our great Nation.●

TRIBUTE TO TED POSNER

● Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I rise today to thank Ted Posner, who has worked for me for a year-and-a-half as Trade Counsel for the Senate Finance Committee.

Ted joined my staff in April 2001 after working for 2 years for Congressman SANDY LEVIN, who is the Ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Subcommittee on International Trade. There, Ted established himself as a nuts-and-bolts expert on trade laws. He earned the respect not only of his colleagues in the House and Senate, but also in the business community, and in the environmental and labor communities.

Perhaps Ted's biggest achievement in the House was his work to help pass permanent Normal Trade Relations for China. Most people are aware of the strong efforts of the House Democrats to forge a compromise that would help pass this important legislation. But few recognize the behind-the-scenes efforts of staff. Ted's work on this issue was tireless, and all who support trade with China owe Ted their gratitude.

Here in the Senate, Ted has continued his outstanding work—and helped us pass the most comprehensive trade bill in more than 14 years. The Trade Act of 2002, as most people know, included not only Trade Promotion Authority and Trade Adjustment Assistance, but also an extension and expansion of the Andean Trade Preference Act and the Generalized System of Preferences.

Ted worked on most of these issues, but his work on the Andean trade bill and the provisions in TPA dealing with investor-state dispute settlement deserve particular mention. Especially on the issue of investment, Ted deserves great praise. This is a complicated and divisive issue. And Ted worked with all parties to come up with ideas that could win bipartisan support.

Like many staff on Capitol Hill, Ted is an extraordinarily hard worker. But the consistent thread in all of Ted's work that separates him from so many is that he constantly strives for perfection. That is something that is rare, and it is something that has earned him my great respect.

Now Ted is moving on to the office of the U.S. Trade Representative, where he will be Associate General Counsel. I have no doubt that Ted will be a great litigator, and I have full confidence in his representing the United States at the World Trade Organization.

I thank Ted for his efforts and wish him good luck in the future.●

IN RECOGNITION OF MRS. SISEL KLURMAN

• Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I rise today to congratulate and recognize Mrs. Sisel Klurman for being honored by the Florida Friends of Bar-Ilan University and setting the standards for "Women and Entrepreneurship: From Adversity to Achievement."

Bar-Ilan, Israel's largest university, is a leading academic institution with over 30,000 students and extensive disciplines. Mrs. Klurman is a founder of the Rabbi Emanuel Rackman International Center for Women and has been a benefactor to the University. Her affiliation with Bar-Ilan University is based on the University's philosophy that blends its unique formula of tradition with modern technologies and scholarship.

Mrs. Klurman was raised with a true love and appreciation for her Jewish culture and tradition by her parents and grandparents. In 1944 she and her husband, Shmuel Aba, opened a way to safely smuggle Holocaust survivors from Poland to Chernowitz and, ultimately, to Israel. During the next few years, Sisel and Sam worked intensely with underground organizations fighting for the liberation of Israel and working with new immigrants. Their drive and inspiration led them to focus on perpetuating the importance of Jewish identity and education. They began to support many causes, with broad outreach, in support of Jewish education.

Today, Mrs. Klurman supports Jewish education, health and welfare throughout the United States and Israel. She serves on may national boards, including Bar-Ilan University.

As a businesswomen, Mrs. Klurman is President of Ganot Corporation, a real estate and development company, and president of AG Holdings, Inc., operators of nursing and rehabilitation centers. Founded by her late husband, both companies have flourished under her leadership.

With all of her accomplishments and achievements, Mrs. Klurman is most proud of her family. Her four daughters, six grandchildren and their spouses, and five great grandchildren bring her endless pride and joy.

Mrs. Klurman has proven that adversity can embody accomplishment. Her drive, commitment and leadership are a motivation to all women.●

COMMENDING MR. OTOK BEN-HVAR

• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to commend and honor New Hampshire resident Mr. Otok Ben-Hvar for his achievement in serving his country and spreading the message of patriotism and unity in the United States and throughout the world.

As a retired U.S. Army, 82nd Airborne Division paratrooper, Mr. Ben-Hvar has served as an ambassador of American goodwill for more than 25 years. He has traveled throughout the world to deliver toys and trinkets to poor, young children, many of whom are victims of war. During the Balkan War, Mr. Ben-Hvar spent months in Bosnia and Croatia delivering toys, food, clothing and medical supplies to those in need. His tireless effort, while on the front lines of battle, earned him status as the first American to receive honorary citizenship in Croatia. He has been nicknamed "America's Santa to the World," and I can think of no more appropriate title to match his kind and heroic deeds.

Mr. Ben-Hvar has returned to embark on a mission to plant America's first National Tree. Collecting and using the native soil of every American state, territory and commonwealth, as well as Washington, D.C., Mr. Ben-Hvar planted and nurtured the seed of his 'American Tree'. Since its planning in 1999. Mr. Ben-Hvar has escorted the tree, a sugar maple, to each of the states and territories from whence its soil came—a trip of 103,928 miles, taking close to three years.

The tree brings with it a great message of national harmony, and has been treasured by those who see it. This gesture of patriotism and unity from Mr. Ben-Hvar truly deserves to be honored—which is why I am sharing his effort with the Senate today, and asking the President to respond to his request to have the tree permanently planted on the White House lawn. This tree will stand as a testament to the great strength and character of our nation.

My home state of New Hampshire is renowned for its forested beauty. However, Mr. Ben-Hvar's tree indeed belongs to the entire United States. It is my distinct honor to represent Mr. Otok Ben-Hvar in the United States Senate and to recognize him now for his tribute to our country.●

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations and a treaty which were referred to the appropriate committees.

NOTICE STATING THAT THE EMERGENCY DECLARED WITH RESPECT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF IRAN ON NOVEMBER 14, 1979 IS TO CONTINUE BEYOND NOVEMBER 14, 2002—PM 118

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the Iran emergency declared by Executive Order 12170 on November 14, 1979, is to continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on November 13, 2001, (66 FR 59666).

Our relations with Iran have not yet returned to normal, and the process of implementing the January 19, 1981, agreements with Iran is still underway. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared on November 14, 1979, with respect to Iran, beyond November 14, 2002.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 12, 2002.

REPORT RELATIVE TO THE CONTINUATION OF THE EMERGENCY REGARDING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION—PM 119

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems declared by Executive Order 12938 on November 14, 1994, as amended, is to continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on November 13, 2001 (66 FR 56965).

The proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the means of delivering them continues to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States. Therefore, I have determined the national emergency previously declared must continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 6, 2002.

PERIODIC REPORT RELATIVE TO THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO IRAN WHICH WAS DECLARED IN EXECUTIVE ORDER NO. 12170—PM 120

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit herewith a 6-month periodic report prepared by my Administration on the national emergency with respect to Iran that was declared in Executive Order 12170 of November 14, 1979.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 12, 2002.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 1:04 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 5603. An Act to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to suspend the tax-exempt status of designated terrorist organizations, and for other purposes.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 155—AFFIRMING THE IMPORTANCE OF A NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER AND FASTING, AND EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT NOVEMBER 27, 2002, SHOULD BE DESIGNATED AS A NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER AND FASTING.

Mr. SANTORUM (for himself and Mr. BROWNBACK) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 155

Whereas the President has sought the support of the international community in responding to the threat of terrorism, violent extremist organizations, and states that permit or host organizations that are opposed to democratic ideals;

Whereas a united stance against terrorism and terrorist regimes will likely lead to an increased threat to the armed forces and law enforcement personnel of those states that oppose these regimes of terror and that take an active role in rooting out these enemy forces;

Whereas Congress has aided and supported a united response to acts of terrorism and violence inflicted upon the United States, our allies, and peaceful individuals all over the world;

Whereas President Abraham Lincoln, at the outbreak of the Civil War, proclaimed that the last Thursday in September 1861 should be designated as a day of humility, prayer, and fasting for all people of the Nation;

Whereas it is appropriate and fitting to seek guidance, direction, and focus from God in times of conflict and in periods of turmoil;

Whereas it is through prayer, self-reflection, and fasting that we can better examine those elements of our lives that can benefit from God's wisdom and love;

Whereas prayer to God and the admission of human limitations and frailties begins the process of becoming both stronger and closer to God;

Whereas becoming closer to God helps provide direction, purpose, and conviction in those daily actions and decisions we must take;

Whereas our Nation, tested by civil war, military conflicts, and world wars, has always benefited from the grace and benevolence bestowed by God; and

Whereas dangers and threats to our Nation persist and in this time of peril, it is appropriate that the people of the United States, leaders and citizens alike, seek guidance, strength, and resolve through prayer and fasting: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) November 27, 2002, should be designated as a day for humility, prayer, and fasting for all people of the United States; and

(2) all people of the United States should—

(A) observe this day as a day of prayer and fasting;

(B) seek guidance from God to achieve greater understanding of our own failings;

(C) learn how we can do better in our everyday activities; and

(D) gain resolve in how to confront those challenges which we must confront.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 107–18

Mr. REID. Madam President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following treaty transmitted to the Senate on November 12, 2002, by the President of the United States: Inter-American Convention Against Terrorism, Treaty Document No. 107–18.

I further ask unanimous consent that the treaty be considered as having been read the first time; that it be referred, with accompanying papers, to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed; and that the President's message be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith, the Inter-American Convention Against Terrorism, adopted at the Thirty-Second Regular Session of the OAS General Assembly meeting in Bridgetown, Barbados, on June 3, 2002, and opened for signature on that date. At that time it was signed by 30 of the 33 members attending the meeting, including the United States. It has subsequently been signed by another two member states, leaving only two states that have not yet signed. In addition, I transmit herewith, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State.

The negotiation of the inter-American Convention Against Terrorism (the "Convention") was a direct response to the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001. At that time, the OAS was meeting in Lima, Peru, to adopt a Democratic Charter uniting all 34 democracies in the hemisphere. The OAS member states expressed their strong commitment to assist the United States in preventing such incidents from occurring again anywhere in our hemisphere. Within 10 days, the foreign ministers of the OAS member states, meeting in Washington, D.C., endorsed the idea of drafting a regional convention against terrorism. Argentina, Peru, Chile, and Mexico played particularly important roles in the development and negotiation of the Convention.

The Convention will advance important United States Government interests and enhance hemispheric security by improving regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism. The forms of enhanced cooperation include exchanges of information, exchanges of experience and training, technical cooperation, and mutual legal assistance. The Convention is consistent with, and builds upon previous counterterrorism instruments and U.N. Security Council Resolution 1373, which mandates certain measures to combat terrorism.

The Convention provides for regional use of a variety of legal tools that have proven effective against terrorism and transnational organized crime in recent years. Since fighting terrorist financing has been identified as an essential part of the fight against terrorism, the Convention addresses crucial financial regulatory, as well as criminal law, aspects. Existing Federal authority is sufficient to discharge the obligations of the United States under this Convention, and therefore no implementing legislation will be required.

In particular, the Convention mandates the establishment of financial intelligence units for the collection, analysis, and dissemination of terrorist financing information and the establishment and enhancement of channels of communication between law enforcement authorities for secure and rapid exchange of information concerning all aspects of terrorist offenses; the exchange of information to improve border and customs control measures to detect and prevent movement of terrorists and terrorist-related materials; and technical cooperation and training programs.

The Convention also provides measures relating to the denial of refugee or asylum status. In addition, the Convention provides that terrorist acts may not be considered "political" offenses for which extradition or mutual legal assistance requests can be denied, and provides for other mechanisms to facilitate mutual legal assistance in criminal matters.

In sum, the Convention is in the interests of the United States and represents an important step in the fight against terrorism. I therefore recommend that the Senate give prompt and favorable consideration to the Convention, subject to the understandings that are described in the accompanying report of the Department of State, and give its advice and consent to ratification.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 12, 2002.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, November 12, 2002

The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

WASHINGTON, DC,
November 12, 2002.

I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN ABNEY CULBERSON to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD) for 5 minutes.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR PAUL AND SHEILA WELLSTONE

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Senator PAUL WELLSTONE and his wife, Sheila Wellstone. As we all know, the Wellstones perished in a tragic plane crash, along with their daughter Marcia, three staff members and two pilots on October 25, 2002.

It has been 18 days since that terrible day, and I am still overwhelmed by sadness at the tragic death of our dear friends whose plane went down in a northern Minnesota wetland near Eveleth.

I continue to join all Minnesotans in mourning our great loss. Minnesota has lost two compassionate and caring public servants. Both PAUL and Sheila will be sorely missed by all of us who knew and loved them.

As the Wellstones' son, David, said, "The words that come to mind about my dad are integrity, passion, fairness and intensity. When the going got rough, there was no one else you wanted in your corner." And about his mother, Sheila, David Wellstone said, "The words that come to mind are selfless, caring, loving, tenacious, proud and strong. She gave of herself like you would not believe."

Mr. Speaker, we all know that nobody fought harder or with greater passion for the underdog than PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE. Senator WELLSTONE dedicated his life to serving others, and he was a tireless advocate for people in need. PAUL WELLSTONE was a person of absolute integrity and was often willing to "go it alone" to stand up for what he believed was right.

Sheila Wellstone was a true champion for battered women and their families, and I was privileged to work with her on many important causes like the Violence Against Women Act and securing funding for Cornerstone, an emergency shelter for women and their children who are victims of domestic violence in the Twin Cities of Minnesota.

Senator WELLSTONE's best friend, Rick Kahn of Minnetonka, tells how PAUL used to say to him, "It is not enough to cling to principles, no matter how noble they may be, unless we are truly willing to risk everything."

While Senator WELLSTONE and I had our disagreements on many policy issues, there is no disagreeing that I lost my partner in the fight for people with chemical addiction. I will always, always be grateful to Senator WELLSTONE for his tireless and principled efforts to provide chemical dependency treatment for more Americans, and PAUL WELLSTONE was the Senate sponsor of our legislation to provide parity for chemical dependency treatment.

Even though we encountered strenuous resistance from special interests, Senator WELLSTONE was always truly willing to risk everything for our cause to help people with addiction. He was absolutely relentless in his efforts to push for parity, both for people with chemical addiction, and those suffering from mental illness. PAUL would call me frequently, and usually late at night, to breathlessly relay his progress in securing another cosponsor for our bill or to ask for advice; or usually to give advice. I came to absolutely cherish those late night phone calls from my friend.

As William Cope Moyers, vice president of the Hazelden Foundation in Minnesota, the world-renowned treatment center for chemically dependent people, put it, "Senator WELLSTONE was a passionate champion of what we do at Hazelden, and his loss is immeasurable."

Not only did we lose two deeply committed champions for battered women and people with addiction, and so many other Americans, I lost two of my dearest friends in that plane crash. I have been asked many times since the crash to share personal stories about the Wellstones. It has been absolutely heart warming to share personal memories about PAUL and Sheila with people throughout Minnesota.

And as we all know, in this body as well as the other body, PAUL WELLSTONE took his job very seriously, but he never, ever took himself too seriously. He had a great ability to poke fun at himself and bring people together. Even when he had policy disagreements with people, he always disagreed in an agreeable way, flashing that contagious Wellstone smile and slapping the person on the back in a warm, loving way.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to finish this eulogy to our departed comrade and friend.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain that request. The gentleman has been recognized for 5 minutes. The Chair would entertain a request from the gentleman to revise and extend his remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The gentleman may complete his oral thought, and conclude his remarks.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, one of my favorite recollections of PAUL was the time he was considering a campaign for President. Before he got on the airplane for our weekly commute back to Minnesota, I instructed all of the regular commuters to start humming "Hail to the Chief" as soon as PAUL got on the plane.

On cue, the passengers struck up a cord of "Hail to the Chief," and PAUL saw me sitting in the back and came right over to me and said "Ramstad, do not forget. I might be only 5 feet 5 and you are 6 feet 3, but don't ever forget I was a wrestler and you were only a basketball player."

That was PAUL WELLSTONE, always in good humor, always flashing that contagious smile that reflected his love for all people.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, PAUL WELLSTONE was a person of great courage. Who can forget Senator WELLSTONE painfully walking around the Capitol bent nearly double from the back injuries he had sustained as a wrestler and from his struggles with multiple sclerosis, but always the first to run back into the kitchen of the Senate Dining Room to thank the cooks and dishwashers for his meals.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all in this body to pause for a silent moment to pay our respects to PAUL and Sheila WELLSTONE, their daughter Marcia, and to the others who perished in that plane crash, Tom Lapic, Mary McEvoy, Will McLaughlin, Richard Conry and Michael Guess. My heart goes out to the family members left behind and to PAUL's dedicated staff. May you rest in peace, dear friends. Amen.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is ordered that the gentleman's written extension of his remarks will be included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There was no objection.

REPUBLICANS HAVE HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, the election is over and we know the results: The Republicans retained the majority in the House of Representatives and actually will now have the majority in the Senate; in fact, will control the Presidency and both Houses of Congress for quite a while.

I want to congratulate the Republican Party and the President, but I want to also point out that now that they are in charge of everything in Washington, they have a heavy responsibility, and one of the responsibilities they have is on an issue I talked about a great deal here on the floor of the House of Representatives and that is on health care reform.

There is absolutely no question that during the course of the campaign, and well before that, that I heard from my constituents about the need for a Medicare prescription drug benefit, about the fact that so many who now have health care insurance are losing their insurance and are afraid even if they have a job about whether or not that health insurance will continue to be affordable. And I also heard from a number of my constituents, and I know my colleagues did as well, about the need for HMO reform and a Patients' Bill of Rights.

I must say it disturbed me that during the course of the campaign that the Republicans, in talking about some of these issues, I think have done a spin on the issues in a fashion that was not completely honest about what their agenda was on some of these very important issues, particularly the need to provide a prescription drug benefit and the need to make sure that the costs of prescription drugs would not continue to climb.

I want to point out in particular the effort on the part of the drug manufacturers, the prescription drug manufacturers, to influence the election, to spend a tremendous amount of money trying to convince the electorate that Republicans were really going to effectively address the issue of affordable prescription drugs. I think that much of it was advertising, trying to convince the public that the Republican plan was a good one when in fact it was not.

I have a clip that was in my local newspaper by the Associated Press on Saturday, November 9, and it says, "Drugmakers Glad for GOP Wins."

"Experts say the pharmaceutical industry's heavy spending in the election paid off in a Republican Congress that will certainly be more sympathetic to its views."

There is a quote that says, "'The pharmaceutical companies spent a lot of money and they are going to be looking for a payback,' said Stephen Schondelmeyer, director of the Pharmaceutical Research in Management Economics, or PRIME."

The article continues, "Investors are also optimistic. Pharmaceutical stocks rose an average of 2.25 percent in the 2 days following the election compared with a 1.12 percent increase in the overall market, according to Morningstar.com."

The problem is that the Republicans were also funneling money into so-called senior groups that were nothing more than a front for the pharmaceutical industry. The pharmaceutical industry was the ninth largest political contributor during the 2002 election; 73 percent of the $18.1 million it doled out went to Republican candidates, according to the Center for Responsible Politics. It also reportedly funneled $16 million to two senior citizen groups that ran ads supporting Republican candidates.

There is another article in the New York Times from Sunday, October 20, that talks about United Seniors Association, a conservative group, that acknowledges it receives financing from the drug industry's major trade group, and they ran ads in various districts, mostly saying Republicans had the right answers to the prescription drug problem facing seniors.

Now I say that the Republican answer to prescription drugs is basically to privatize Medicare. They wanted to give some money to seniors on the theory that they would take that money and go out and buy drug insurance in the private market.

The Democrats talked during the campaign, and continue to talk, about the need to just expand the existing Medicare program to provide a prescription drug benefit the same way we do with doctors' bills: Pay $25 a month, get 80 percent of the costs of prescription drugs covered by the Federal Government through Medicare. There is a $100 deductible and a 20 percent copayment.

I would hate to see the Republicans take the election results as a mandate to say they should not have a Medicare prescription drug benefit and instead should move towards a private scheme. Frankly, I do not think that is what the average senior wants. I do not think that is what the average senior thinks that the Republican Party stands for.

The problem is that the Republican Party, through the pharmaceutical industry, spent so much money convincing the electorate that this is the way to go, I do not think that the public really understands what the Republican proposal for prescription drug benefit is all about.

The same is true with regard to the need for health insurance and also with HMOs, and we will get into that another time. But I am simply saying to my colleagues on the Republican side, if they want to see progress on health care reform, sit down with the Democrats and work with us because this is something that must be addressed on a bipartisan basis in the next Congress.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m. today.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 44 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord God, all religious traditions exhort disciples of faith to open their minds, their hearts, and any door with the gracious gift of hospitality. You ask Your people to be considerate to every stranger and every visitor. Bless today this House of Representatives as we welcome the newly-elected to orientation and receive again visitors from across this country and from other nations. May all who come here find in congressional Members, staff, the Capitol Police, official guides and all who work here, people of Your own making, who are gracious in manner, kind in word, generous in time, and open to every question and need of a guest.

In the midst of the primary tasks You set before this Congress, may we all find in this place a rich experience of America's great gifts of freedom, equal justice, productivity, and true happiness. Bless us here and bless America now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CULBERSON) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. CULBERSON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

COMMUNICATION FROM CASEWORK DIRECTOR/OFFICE AND SYSTEMS ADMINISTRATOR OF HON. JOHN M. McHUGH, MEMBER OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from Joann E. Humphries, Casework Director/Office and Systems Administrator of the Hon. JOHN M. MCHUGH, Member of Congress:

> NOVEMBER 7, 2002.
> Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
> Speaker, House of Representatives,
> Washington, DC.
> DEAR MR. SPEAKER: This is to formally notify you, pursuant to Rule VIII of the Rules of the House, that I have been served with a trial subpoena for testimony and documents issued by the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of New York.
> After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I have determined that compliance with the subpoenas is consistent with the precedents and privileges of the House.
> Sincerely,
> JOANN E. HUMPHRIES,
> Casework Director/
> Office and Systems Administrator.

PRAISING THE FIVE HIGGINS BROTHERS FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, with yesterday marking Veterans Day, I rise to commend the valiant service of all of the men and women who have served America in the armed forces. In particular, I want to recognize the Higgins family of Columbia, South Carolina who had 5 sons serving our Nation during World War II.

Elliott Higgins served as a Captain with Army Intelligence under General George Patton in Germany; Harold Higgins served as a Sergeant with the Army Air Corps in Europe; John Higgins served as a Corporal with the Army on stateside assignments; Patrick Higgins enlisted with the Merchant Marines in the North Atlantic; and the youngest, Ross Higgins, at age 17 joined the Navy and served in the Pacific Theater.

We should also remember the five Sullivan brothers from Iowa who died together on the USS Juneau after the Japanese torpedoed their ship. After their deaths, President Roosevelt began a policy that brothers should serve in different branches of the Armed Forces.

This enabled the 5 Higgins brothers to serve our Nation with honor, and we will always be indebted to the sacrifices made for our country by veterans and their families.

TIME FOR CONGRESS TO ADDRESS THE ECONOMY

(Mr. PALLONE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, during morning hour and once again, I want to thank or congratulate, I should say, the Republicans on their election victories last Tuesday, but I would say that now that they will control both the House and the other body, as well as the presidency, they have the obligation to address the Nation's economic woes. They cannot continue to mask the economic slump that we face.

During the last week, there was news, this is in the International Herald Tribune from November 2 to 3 of this year, and it says, "Indications that the United States may be headed for a renewed slump have piled up over the last week, with weakness spreading from manufacturing to employment to consumer spending. The bad news culminated Friday with reports of a rising jobless rate and softness in a variety of other indicators.

"The government reported that the unemployment rate rose last month to 5.7 percent from 5.6 percent the previous month.

"In yet another bit of bad news, a survey that tracks activity of corporate purchasing managers, a key gauge of manufacturing strength, showed another drop. The Institute for Supply Management said its manufacturing index fell once again."

The Republicans are in the majority now and soon in both Houses. They have to address the economy. It is their obligation to do so, Mr. Speaker.

PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

(Mr. EHLERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, as we return and we begin session once again, I want to rise and express my appreciation for this country and for this institution.

We all have experienced elections. What is interesting is that throughout the Nation, the elections have been remarkably close in many cases. I am proud of that, because I would not want to live in a country where we have a dictator that gets 99 percent of the vote in a rigged election. We are in a country where we present our ideas and ourselves to the country and to its people, and those people, on the basis of what we say and what we do, elect us. That is precisely the way the system is supposed to work. That is what the founders of this Nation wanted, and that is what they put in place 225 years ago.

In addition to that, yesterday we celebrated Veteran's Day and recognized all those who have given the supreme sacrifice and those who have sacrificed parts of their lives to the service of this country. Once again, a date to remember, a date in which we honor people in our country.

I am so proud to be an American. I am so very, very proud of our country, and I am delighted to be an American.

A TRIBUTE OF GRATITUDE TO COLONEL PETE "CLARK" BUNCE

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise on this day after Veterans Day to salute one of the many brave men and women who serve all of us in our great military. I rise today to pay tribute to and offer my personal thanks to Colonel Pete "Clark" Bunce, United States Air Force, for a job well done.

Many of us know Colonel Bunce who, for the past 2 years, has led the House Office of Legislative Liaison for the Air Force. I have had the pleasure of traveling with Pete on several occasions, and each time his professionalism and personal attention to detail were the keys to a smooth and successful CODEL.

Before coming to the Hill, Colonel Bunce was an accomplished leader and command pilot with over 3,000 hours in F–15 and A–10 fighter aircraft. He has commanded at the squadron and group levels and served overseas in Germany and Southeast Asia.

While I have relied upon Colonel Bunce's military advice, I have valued Pete's friendship even more. Pete, Mrs. Hansen and I, and I know many of my colleagues here, wish you the very best of luck in whatever your future holds, and thank you for your service to our great Nation.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today on motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Any record votes on postponed questions will be taken tomorrow.

NATIONAL SEA GRANT COLLEGE PROGRAM ACT AMENDMENTS OF 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 3389), an Act to reauthorize the National Sea Grant College Program Act, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002".

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS TO FINDINGS.

Section 202(a)(6) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1121(a)(6)) is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting ", including strong collaborations between Administration scientists and scientists at academic institutions.".

SEC. 3. REQUIREMENTS APPLICABLE TO NATIONAL SEA GRANT COLLEGE PROGRAM.

(a) Quadrennial Strategic Plan.—Section 204 (c)(1) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1123 (c)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) The Secretary, in consultation with the panel, sea grant colleges, and sea grant institutes, shall develop at least every 4 years a strategic plan that establishes priorities for the national sea grant college program, provides an appropriately balanced response to local, regional, and national needs, and is reflective of integration with the relevant portions of the strategic plans of the Department of Commerce and of the Administration.".

(b) Program Evaluation and Rating.—

(1) Evaluation and rating requirement.—Section 204(d)(3)(A) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1123(d)(3)(A)) is amended to read as follows:

"(A)(i) evaluate the performance of the programs of sea grant colleges and sea grant institutes, using the priorities, guidelines, and qualifications established by the Secretary under subsection (c), and determine which of the programs are the best managed and carry out the highest quality research, education, extension, and training activities; and

"(ii) rate the programs according to their relative performance (as determined under clause (i)) into no less than 5 categories, with each of the 2 best-performing categories containing no more than 25 percent of the programs;".

(2) Review of evaluation and rating process.—(A) After 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Commerce, acting through the Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere, shall contract with the National Academy of Sciences—

(i) to review the effectiveness of the evaluation and rating system under the amendment made by paragraph (1) in determining the relative performance of programs of sea grant colleges and sea grant institutes;

(ii) to evaluate whether the sea grant programs have improved as a result of the evaluation process; and

(iii) to make appropriate recommendations to improve the overall effectiveness of the evaluation process.

(B) The National Academy of Sciences shall submit a report to the Congress on the findings and recommendations of the panel under subparagraph (A) by not later than 4 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Allocation of Funding.—Section 204(d)(3)(B) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1123(d)(3)(B)) is amended by striking "and" after the semicolon at the end of clause (ii) and by adding at the end the following:

"(iv) encourage and promote coordination and cooperation between the research, education, and outreach programs of the Administration and those of academic institutions; and".

SEC. 4. COST SHARE.

Section 205(a) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1124(a)) is amended by striking "section 204(d)(6)" and inserting "section 204(c)(4)(F)".

SEC. 5. FELLOWSHIPS.

(a) Ensuring Equal Access.—Section 208(a) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1127(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "The Secretary shall strive to ensure equal access for minority and economically disadvantaged students to the program carried out under this subsection. Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002, and every 2 years thereafter, the Secretary shall submit a report to the Congress describing the efforts by the Secretary to ensure equal access for minority and economically disadvantaged students to the program carried out under this subsection, and the results of such efforts.".

(b) Postdoctoral Fellows.—Section 208(c) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1127(c)) is repealed.

SEC. 6. TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP FOR SEA GRANT REVIEW PANEL.

Section 209(c)(2) of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1128(c)(2)) is amended by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: "The term of office of a voting member of the panel shall be 3 years for a member appointed before the date of enactment of the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002, and 4 years for a member appointed or reappointed after the date of enactment of the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002. The Director may extend the term of office of a voting member of the panel appointed before the date of enactment of the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002 by up to 1 year.".

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 212 of the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1131) are amended to read as follows:

"(a) Authorization.—

"(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out this title—

"(A) $60,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

"(B) $75,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;

"(C) $77,500,000 for fiscal year 2005;

"(D) $80,000,000 for fiscal year 2006;

"(E) $82,500,000 for fiscal year 2007; and

"(F) $85,000,000 for fiscal year 2008.

"(2) Priority activities.—In addition to the amounts authorized under paragraph (1), there are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2008—

"(A) $5,000,000 for competitive grants for university research on the biology and control of zebra mussels and other important aquatic nonnative species;

"(B) $5,000,000 for competitive grants for university research on oyster diseases, oyster restoration, and oyster-related human health risks;

"(C) $5,000,000 for competitive grants for university research on the biology, prevention, and forecasting of harmful algal blooms, including Pfiesteria piscicida; and

"(D) $3,000,000 for competitive grants for fishery extension activities conducted by sea grant colleges or sea grant institutes to enhance, and not supplant, existing core program funding.

"(b) Limitations.—

"(1) Administration.—There may not be used for administration of programs under this title in a fiscal year more than 5 percent of the lesser of—

"(A) the amount authorized to be appropriated under this title for the fiscal year; or

"(B) the amount appropriated under this title for the fiscal year.

"(2) Use for other offices or programs.—Sums appropriated under the authority of subsection (a)(2) shall not be available for administration of this title by the National Sea Grant Office, for any other Administration or department program, or for any other administrative expenses.

"(c) Distribution of Funds.—In any fiscal year in which the appropriations made under subsection (a)(1) exceed the amounts appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for the purposes described in such subsection, the Secretary shall distribute any excess amounts (except amounts used for the administration of the sea grant program) to any combination of the following:

"(1) sea grant programs, according to their rating under section 204(d)(3)(A);

"(3) a college, university, institution, association, or alliance for activities that are necessary for it to be designated as a sea grant college or sea grant institute;

"(4) a sea grant college or sea grant institute designated after the date of enactment of the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments of 2002 but not yet evaluated under section 204(d)(3)(A).".

SEC. 8. ANNUAL REPORT ON PROGRESS IN BECOMING DESIGNATED AS SEA GRANT COLLEGES AND SEA GRANT INSTITUTES.

"(e) Annual Report on Progress.—

"(1) Report requirement.—The Secretary shall report annually to the Committee on Resources and the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, on efforts and progress made by colleges, universities, institutions, associations, and alliances to become designated under this section as sea grant colleges or sea grant institutes, including efforts and progress made by sea grant institutes in being designated as sea grant colleges.

"(2) Territories and freely associated States.—The report shall include description of—

"(A) efforts made by colleges, universities, associations, institutions, and alliances in United States territories and freely associated States to develop the expertise necessary to be designated as a sea grant institute or sea grant college;

"(B) the administrative, technical, and financial assistance provided by the Secretary to those entities seeking to be designated; and

"(C) the additional actions or activities necessary for those entities to meet the qualifications for such designation under subsection (a)(1).".

SEC. 9. COORDINATION.

Not later than February 15 of each year, the Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere and the Director of the National Science Foundation shall jointly submit to the Committees on Resources and Science of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on how the oceans and coastal research activities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, including the Coastal Ocean Program and the National Sea Grant College Program, and of the National Science Foundation will be coordinated during the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which the report is submitted. The report shall describe in detail any overlapping ocean and coastal research interests between the agencies and specify how such research interests will be pursued by the programs in a complementary manner.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present to the House H.R. 3389, the National Sea Grant College Program Act Amendments, a bill introduced last fall by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST) with 113 cosponsors. The Committee on Resources, the House Committee on Science, and the Senate Committee on Commerce have worked together to thoroughly review the Sea Grant College Program Act and thoughtfully crafted changes to strengthen and improve the authority. The bill reauthorizes Sea Grant for 5 years within the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and makes some minor improvements to the program.

Sea Grant Colleges were envisioned as the Land-Grant colleges of the sea, and in 1966, Congress established Sea Grant as an academic/industry/government partnership by passing the National Sea Grant College Act. Since then, Sea Grant colleges have developed and sponsored research that improves conservation and management of coastal and marine resources for the benefit of future generations.

Today, there are 30 Sea Grant College programs representing a network of researchers, educators, and marine advisory agents at over 300 academic institutions. Although America's inland sea, the Great Salt Lake, is not under the purview of the Sea Grant institutions, I am still a strong supporter of the Sea Grant Program, not only because of the importance of marine and coastal issues, but also because these institutions are held to the highest standards of excellence and a rigorous peer review process to ensure the quality of their research.

This bill strengthens the act by calling for an increase in collaboration between other ocean research funding entities and the National Sea Grant College Program to limit duplication of efforts and enhance related research. It increases authorization levels that have stagnated over the past number of years and ensures that the quality of research and management within the Sea Grant College system is rewarded through competitive merit-based disbursements of funds.

On June 19 of this year, we passed H.R. 3389 out of the House and sent it to the Senate. They have recently, bless their hearts, passed their version of the bill containing minor technical modifications to our bill. We concur with and support those changes.

Sea Grant is important to the country and the reauthorization of its underlying authority is necessary. We have improved the act through this process, and I urge my colleagues to vote "aye" on H.R. 3389.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, as a former Sea Grant extension agent, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 3389, a bill to reauthorize the National Sea Grant College Program Act. There is little more that I can add to the summary of the legislation provided by the chairman of the Committee on Resources, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

However, I wanted to say that this final version of H.R. 3389 reflects a fair and noncontroversial compromise between legislation passed by the House in June by a 407 to 2 vote and the companion legislation passed by the other body.

Certainly the higher authorized levels for program appropriations, revised rating and evaluation procedures, and new requirements to enhance cooperation and coordination between Federal agencies and Sea Grant programs will help ensure that the National Sea Grant Program stays on the cutting edge of applied marine research, technology transfer, education, and outreach.

Perhaps most important, Mr. Speaker, this legislation represents a clear repudiation by the Congress of the administration's ill-advised budget proposal to transfer the National Sea Grant Program from NOAA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, to the National Science Foundation.

□ 1415

While I approve and respect NSF's mission and scientists, and while I continue to support full funding for NSF, I, like many other Members, believe that the national interest is best served by keeping Sea Grant in NOAA. This legislation unequivocally reaffirms that commitment. Let us also hope that it puts this misbegotten issue to rest once and for all.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Members to support passage of this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT).

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3389, which was referred to the Committee on Science, as well as the Committee on Resources. I wanted to thank the Committee on Resources, and especially the chairman of the Subcommittee on Fisheries Conservation, Wildlife, and Oceans, my good friend, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST), for working so cooperatively with us on this measure.

I also want to acknowledge the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Environment, Technology, and Standards, who shepherded this bill through our committee.

Mr. Speaker, this bill took a little bit of work to get through the process because we were not satisfied with simply reauthorizing the program, or even with simply increasing its funding, although that is an important part of the bill. We wanted to make sure that an excellent program would become even better, and we took seriously the administration's interest in making the funding for the program more competitive, even as we rejected moving the program to the National Science Foundation.

As a result, this bill will make some changes in the Sea Grant program. The State programs will now be subject to a competitive evaluation and ranking, and new monies will be distributed based on those rankings. New money can also be used for national initiatives and for new entrants in the Sea Grant program. We hope and expect that this new approach to Sea Grant so common elsewhere in the scientific community will spur the program to new heights.

The bill includes a review of how the new evaluation system is working, so we are not just going to assume that our idea will pan out, but we will put it to the test.

I am very pleased that we were able to develop a bill that recognizes the great contributions of the Sea Grant program, retains it within NOAA, provides additional funds, and challenges it to be more competitive.

I want to thank the staff who worked so hard on this bill, particularly Eric Webster on the Committee on Science and John Rayfield on the Committee on Resources. This is a cooperative, bipartisan effort, and I urge its approval.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4½ minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I want to join in praise of the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) for his work on this bill, and for his longtime work on this committee. He has done yeoman's work, and we can be very thankful for all the good work he has done for the Congress and for the people on this particular committee over the years.

I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3389, which reauthorizes the National Sea Grant College Program. This final version of H.R. 3389 resolves the few minor differences between the House and Senate while maintaining the provisions to strengthen the merit review component of the program, and to interject more competition for additional funding.

This bill will make an important marine research and outreach program even better. The National Sea Grant Program is unique in connecting research results to coastal communities through a combination of research, extension and education. In this way, it is somewhat similar to the land grant program we developed for universities and agriculture extension many years ago. Of course, it is not as well-funded as that program, but this is a very good start.

Currently, there are 30 Sea Grant College Programs which fund and incorporate research from hundreds of universities throughout the country. I am especially proud of my home State program, the Michigan Sea Grant Program. It plays a vital role in enhancing our Nation's knowledge and understanding of Great Lakes issues.

While the administration has proposed to transfer the National Sea Grant Program from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to the National Science Foundation in its fiscal year 2003 budget proposal, we determined it was best to keep the program in NOAA. However, the administration did raise some legitimate concerns with the program which we have addressed in the final version of H.R. 3389.

First, the legislation ensures that Sea Grant will better coordinate its activities with other programs within NOAA and with NSF. To this end, the bill requires NOAA to provide a strategic plan that establishes the priorities for the National Sea Grant College Program and jointly submit a report with NSF about how the oceans and coastal research activities of both agencies will be coordinated. This will reduce duplication and should increase the overall breadth of Federal marine research.

Secondly, we acknowledge the unfair nature of how Federal funding is allocated to the State programs, which appears to be based mostly on historical averages rather than merit or need. Therefore, H.R. 3389 will require that any monies appropriated above the fiscal year 2003 levels shall be distributed to the State Sea Grant Programs on a merit review competitive basis or distributed to national strategic initiatives. This will ensure the State programs can continue their vital outreach efforts while increasing the level of competition among the State programs, and providing the National Sea Grant Office the flexibility to use some of the additional money to address national problems as they arise.

In addition, we added a review of this new evaluation system to ensure that it works as we intend it. In other words, what we are trying to do in this bill is to make certain that the peer review mechanism applies very stringently to the research that is done, but that the States will be able to continue their educational and extension programs as they have in the past.

H.R. 3389 also provides much needed increases in overall funding levels for Sea Grant. The authorization gradually increases from a total of $78 million for fiscal year 2003 to $103 million for fiscal year 2008. Included in that amount is $18 million a year specifically for research into aquatic nuisance species, harmful algae blooms, oysters, and fisheries outreach activities.

Finally, I wanted to thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST) as well as the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) for their work in introducing H.R. 3389, and thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST) for his leadership in these areas.

I am particularly pleased that our two committees, the Committee on Science and the Committee on Resources, were able to work so well together throughout this process. I look forward to working with the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST) and his staff on similar joint ventures in the next Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 3389. Our Nation's coasts, oceans, and Great Lakes will benefit from this legislation.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WU).

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3389, the bill to reauthorize the National Sea Grant College Program and to make important amendments. These vital marine research programs provide money to academic institutions to study marine ecosystems. The work made possible by the Sea Grant program has led to greater understanding of the ocean world, vitally important to our fishing communities like Astoria, Oregon, and to the long-term health of our marine ecosystems.

In Oregon, the vast majority of marine research is done out of the excellent College of Oceanic and Atmospheric Sciences at Oregon State University. With the help of funding through Sea Grant funds, OSU has been able to fund important research initiatives, including the Marine Resource Management Program, which focuses on the effective management of marine and coastal ecosystems. Research initiatives like these are important for long-term, responsible stewardship of our oceans.

To help our hard-hit fishing communities, we need to design better management strategies that allow for sustainable and economically productive fishing.

In addition, I would like to say that better understanding of our marine ecosystems and better understanding of our marine world is a fundamental need of expanding our base of knowledge about the world in which we live. Furthermore, as someone who wanted originally to be a marine biologist when I was in high school, had there been more programs like this funding for our national universities, who knows, I might have found a more constructive thing to do with my life.

Mr. Speaker, during consideration of this bill in the Committee on Science, I enjoyed working with my colleagues to keep Sea Grant and the Coastal Ocean Program, another marine research program, as two distinct programs with separate missions and scopes.

I would also like to recognize the sponsor of this bill, my good friend, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST), and thank him for his leadership on this bill.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3389.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 3389.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CYBER SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 3394) an Act to authorize funding for computer and network security research and development and research fellowship programs, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Cyber Security Research and Development Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) Revolutionary advancements in computing and communications technology have interconnected government, commercial, scientific, and educational infrastructures—including critical infrastructures for electric power, natural gas and petroleum production and distribution, telecommunications, transportation, water supply, banking and finance, and emergency and government services—in a vast, interdependent physical and electronic network.

(2) Exponential increases in interconnectivity have facilitated enhanced communications, economic growth, and the delivery of services critical to the public welfare, but have also increased the consequences of temporary or prolonged failure.

(3) A Department of Defense Joint Task Force concluded after a 1997 United States information warfare exercise that the results "clearly demonstrated our lack of preparation for a coordinated cyber and physical attack on our critical military and civilian infrastructure".

(4) Computer security technology and systems implementation lack—

(A) sufficient long term research funding;

(B) adequate coordination across Federal and State government agencies and among government, academia, and industry; and

(C) sufficient numbers of outstanding researchers in the field.

(5) Accordingly, Federal investment in computer and network security research and development must be significantly increased to—

(A) improve vulnerability assessment and technological and systems solutions;

(B) expand and improve the pool of information security professionals, including researchers, in the United States workforce; and

(C) better coordinate information sharing and collaboration among industry, government, and academic research projects.

(6) While African-Americans, Hispanics, and Native Americans constitute 25 percent of the total United States workforce and 30 percent of the college-age population, members of these minorities comprise less than 7 percent of the United States computer and information science workforce.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) Director.—The term "Director" means the Director of the National Science Foundation.

(2) Institution of higher education.—The term "institution of higher education" has the meaning given that term in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001(a)).

SEC. 4. NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION RESEARCH.

(a) Computer and Network Security Research Grants.—

(1) In general.—The Director shall award grants for basic research on innovative approaches to the structure of computer and network hardware and software that are aimed at enhancing computer security. Research areas may include—

(A) authentication, cryptography, and other secure data communications technology;

(B) computer forensics and intrusion detection;

(C) reliability of computer and network applications, middleware, operating systems, control systems, and communications infrastructure;

(D) privacy and confidentiality;

(E) network security architecture, including tools for security administration and analysis;

(F) emerging threats;

(G) vulnerability assessments and techniques for quantifying risk;

(H) remote access and wireless security; and

(I) enhancement of law enforcement ability to detect, investigate, and prosecute cyber-crimes, including those that involve piracy of intellectual property.

(2) Merit review; competition.—Grants shall be awarded under this section on a merit-reviewed competitive basis.

(3) Authorization of appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation to carry out this subsection—

(A) $35,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(B) $40,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;

(C) $46,000,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(D) $52,000,000 for fiscal year 2006; and

(E) $60,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

(b) Computer and Network Security Research Centers.—

(1) In general.—The Director shall award multiyear grants, subject to the availability of appropriations, to institutions of higher education, nonprofit research institutions, or consortia thereof to establish multidisciplinary Centers for Computer and Network Security Research. Institutions of higher education, nonprofit research institutions, or consortia thereof receiving such grants may partner with 1 or more government laboratories or for-profit institutions, or other institutions of higher education or nonprofit research institutions.

(2) Merit review; competition.—Grants shall be awarded under this subsection on a merit-reviewed competitive basis.

(3) Purpose.—The purpose of the Centers shall be to generate innovative approaches to computer and network security by conducting cutting-edge, multidisciplinary research in computer and network security, including the research areas described in subsection (a)(1).

(4) Applications.—An institution of higher education, nonprofit research institution, or consortia thereof seeking funding under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director may require. The application shall include, at a minimum, a description of—

(A) the research projects that will be undertaken by the Center and the contributions of each of the participating entities;

(B) how the Center will promote active collaboration among scientists and engineers from different disciplines, such as computer scientists, engineers, mathematicians, and social science researchers;

(C) how the Center will contribute to increasing the number and quality of computer and network security researchers and other professionals, including individuals from groups historically underrepresented in these fields; and

(D) how the center will disseminate research results quickly and widely to improve cyber security in information technology networks, products, and services.

(5) Criteria.—In evaluating the applications submitted under paragraph (4), the Director shall consider, at a minimum—

(A) the ability of the applicant to generate innovative approaches to computer and network security and effectively carry out the research program;

(B) the experience of the applicant in conducting research on computer and network security and the capacity of the applicant to foster new multidisciplinary collaborations;

(C) the capacity of the applicant to attract and provide adequate support for a diverse group of undergraduate and graduate students and postdoctoral fellows to pursue computer and network security research; and

(D) the extent to which the applicant will partner with government laboratories, for-profit entities, other institutions of higher education, or nonprofit research institutions, and the role the partners will play in the research undertaken by the Center.

(6) Annual meeting.—The Director shall convene an annual meeting of the Centers in order to foster collaboration and communication between Center participants.

(7) Authorization of appropriations.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the National Science Foundation to carry out this subsection—

(A) $12,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(B) $24,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;

(C) $36,000,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(D) $36,000,000 for fiscal year 2006; and

(E) $36,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 5. NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION COMPUTER AND NETWORK SECURITY PROGRAMS.

(a) Computer and Network Security Capacity Building Grants.—

(1) In general.—The Director shall establish a program to award grants to institutions of higher education (or consortia thereof) to establish or improve undergraduate and master's degree programs in computer and network security, to increase the number of students, including the number of students from groups historically underrepresented in these fields, who pursue undergraduate or master's degrees in fields related to computer and network security, and to provide students with experience in government or industry related to their computer and network security studies.

(2) Merit review.—Grants shall be awarded under this subsection on a merit-reviewed competitive basis.

(3) Use of funds.—Grants awarded under this subsection shall be used for activities that enhance the ability of an institution of higher education (or consortium thereof) to provide high-quality undergraduate and master's degree programs in computer and network security and to recruit and retain increased numbers of students to such programs. Activities may include—

(A) revising curriculum to better prepare undergraduate and master's degree students for careers in computer and network security;

(B) establishing degree and certificate programs in computer and network security;

(C) creating opportunities for undergraduate students to participate in computer and network security research projects;

(D) acquiring equipment necessary for student instruction in computer and network security, including the installation of testbed networks for student use;

(E) providing opportunities for faculty to work with local or Federal Government agencies, private industry, nonprofit research institutions, or other academic institutions to develop new expertise or to formulate new research directions in computer and network security;

(F) establishing collaborations with other academic institutions or academic departments that seek to establish, expand, or enhance programs in computer and network security;

(G) establishing student internships in computer and network security at government agencies or in private industry;

(H) establishing collaborations with other academic institutions to establish or enhance a web-based collection of computer and network security courseware and laboratory exercises for sharing with other institutions of higher education, including community colleges;

(I) establishing or enhancing bridge programs in computer and network security between community colleges and universities; and

(J) any other activities the Director determines will accomplish the goals of this subsection.

(4) SELECTION PROCESS.—

(A) APPLICATION.—An institution of higher education (or a consortium thereof) seeking funding under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director may require. The application shall include, at a minimum—

(i) a description of the applicant's computer and network security research and instructional capacity, and in the case of an application from a consortium of institutions of higher education, a description of the role that each member will play in implementing the proposal;

(ii) a comprehensive plan by which the institution or consortium will build instructional capacity in computer and information security;

(iii) a description of relevant collaborations with government agencies or private industry that inform the instructional program in computer and network security;

(iv) a survey of the applicant's historic student enrollment and placement data in fields related to computer and network security and a study of potential enrollment and placement for students enrolled in the proposed computer and network security program; and

(v) a plan to evaluate the success of the proposed computer and network security program, including post-graduation assessment of graduate school and job placement and retention rates as well as the relevance of the instructional program to graduate study and to the workplace.

(B) AWARDS.—(i) The Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grants are awarded under this subsection in a wide range of geographic areas and categories of institutions of higher education, including minority serving institutions.

(ii) The Director shall award grants under this subsection for a period not to exceed 5 years.

(5) ASSESSMENT REQUIRED.—The Director shall evaluate the program established under this subsection no later than 6 years after the establishment of the program. At a minimum, the Director shall evaluate the extent to which the program achieved its objectives of increasing the quality and quantity of students, including students from groups historically underrepresented in computer and network security related disciplines, pursuing undergraduate or master's degrees in computer and network security.

(6) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation to carry out this subsection—

(A) $15,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(B) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;

(C) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(D) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2006; and

(E) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

(b) SCIENTIFIC AND ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1992.—

(1) GRANTS.—The Director shall provide grants under the Scientific and Advanced Technology Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 1862i) for the purposes of section 3(a) and (b) of that Act, except that the activities supported pursuant to this subsection shall be limited to improving education in fields related to computer and network security.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation to carry out this subsection—

(A) $1,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(B) $1,250,000 for fiscal year 2004;

(C) $1,250,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(D) $1,250,000 for fiscal year 2006; and

(E) $1,250,000 for fiscal year 2007.

(c) GRADUATE TRAINEESHIPS IN COMPUTER AND NETWORK SECURITY RESEARCH.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director shall establish a program to award grants to institutions of higher education to establish traineeship programs for graduate students who pursue computer and network security research leading to a doctorate degree by providing funding and other assistance, and by providing graduate students with research experience in government or industry related to the students' computer and network security studies.

(2) MERIT REVIEW.—Grants shall be provided under this subsection on a merit-reviewed competitive basis.

(3) USE OF FUNDS.—An institution of higher education shall use grant funds for the purposes of—

(A) providing traineeships to students who are citizens, nationals, or lawfully admitted permanent resident aliens of the United States and are pursuing research in computer or network security leading to a doctorate degree;

(B) paying tuition and fees for students receiving traineeships under subparagraph (A);

(C) establishing scientific internship programs for students receiving traineeships under subparagraph (A) in computer and network security at for-profit institutions, nonprofit research institutions, or government laboratories; and

(D) other costs associated with the administration of the program.

(4) TRAINEESHIP AMOUNT.—Traineeships provided under paragraph (3)(A) shall be in the amount of $25,000 per year, or the level of the National Science Foundation Graduate Research Fellowships, whichever is greater, for up to 3 years.

(5) SELECTION PROCESS.—An institution of higher education seeking funding under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director may require. The application shall include, at a minimum, a description of—

(A) the instructional program and research opportunities in computer and network security available to graduate students at the applicant's institution; and

(B) the internship program to be established, including the opportunities that will be made available to students for internships at for-profit institutions, nonprofit research institutions, and government laboratories.

(6) REVIEW OF APPLICATIONS.—In evaluating the applications submitted under paragraph (5), the Director shall consider—

(A) the ability of the applicant to effectively carry out the proposed program;

(B) the quality of the applicant's existing research and education programs;

(C) the likelihood that the program will recruit increased numbers of students, including students from groups historically underrepresented in computer and network security related disciplines, to pursue and earn doctorate degrees in computer and network security;

(D) the nature and quality of the internship program established through collaborations with government laboratories, nonprofit research institutions, and for-profit institutions;

(E) the integration of internship opportunities into graduate students' research; and

(F) the relevance of the proposed program to current and future computer and network security needs.

(7) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation to carry out this subsection—

(A) $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(B) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;

(C) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2005;

(D) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2006; and

(E) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.

(d) GRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS PROGRAM SUPPORT.—Computer and network security shall be included among the fields of specialization supported by the National Science Foundation's Graduate Research Fellowships program under section 10 of the National Science Foundation Act of 1950 (42 U.S.C. 1869).

(e) CYBER SECURITY FACULTY DEVELOPMENT TRAINEESHIP PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director shall establish a program to award grants to institutions of higher education to establish traineeship programs to enable graduate students to pursue academic careers in cyber security upon completion of doctoral degrees.

(2) MERIT REVIEW; COMPETITION.—Grants shall be awarded under this section on a merit-reviewed competitive basis.

(3) APPLICATION.—Each institution of higher education desiring to receive a grant under this subsection shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director shall require.

(4) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds received by an institution of higher education under this paragraph shall—

(A) be made available to individuals on a merit-reviewed competitive basis and in accordance with the requirements established in paragraph (7);

(B) be in an amount that is sufficient to cover annual tuition and fees for doctoral study at an institution of higher education for the duration of the graduate traineeship, and shall include, in addition, an annual living stipend of $25,000; and

(C) be provided to individuals for a duration of no more than 5 years, the specific duration of each graduate traineeship to be determined by the institution of higher education, on a case-by-case basis.

(5) REPAYMENT.—Each graduate traineeship shall—

(A) subject to paragraph (5)(B), be subject to full repayment upon completion of the doctoral degree according to a repayment schedule established and administered by the institution of higher education;

(B) be forgiven at the rate of 20 percent of the total amount of the graduate traineeship assistance received under this section for each academic year that a recipient is employed as a full-time faculty member at an institution of higher education for a period not to exceed 5 years; and

(C) be monitored by the institution of higher education receiving a grant under this subsection to ensure compliance with this subsection.

(6) EXCEPTIONS.—The Director may provide for the partial or total waiver or suspension of any service obligation or payment by an individual under this section whenever compliance by the individual is impossible or would involve extreme hardship to the individual, or if enforcement of such obligation with respect to the individual would be unconscionable.

(7) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a graduate traineeship under this section, an individual shall—

(A) be a citizen, national, or lawfully admitted permanent resident alien of the United States;

(B) demonstrate a commitment to a career in higher education.

(8) CONSIDERATION.—In making selections for graduate traineeships under this paragraph, an institution receiving a grant under this subsection shall consider, to the extent possible, a diverse pool of applicants whose interests are of an interdisciplinary nature, encompassing the social scientific as well as the technical dimensions of cyber security.

(9) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007.

SEC. 6. CONSULTATION.

In carrying out sections 4 and 5, the Director shall consult with other Federal agencies.

SEC. 7. FOSTERING RESEARCH AND EDUCATION IN COMPUTER AND NETWORK SECURITY.

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (6);

(2) by striking "Congress." in paragraph (7) and inserting "Congress ; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(8) to take a leading role in fostering and supporting research and education activities to improve the security of networked information systems.".

SEC. 8. NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF STANDARDS AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAMS.

(a) RESEARCH PROGRAM.—The National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 271 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by moving section 22 to the end of the Act and redesignating it as section 32;

(2) by inserting after section 21 the following new section:

"SEC. 22. RESEARCH PROGRAM ON SECURITY OF COMPUTER SYSTEMS

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Director shall establish a program of assistance to institutions of higher education that enter into partnerships with for-profit entities to support research to improve the security of computer systems. The partnerships may also include government laboratories and nonprofit research institutions. The program shall—

"(1) include multidisciplinary, long-term research;

"(2) include research directed toward addressing needs identified through the activities of the Computer System Security and Privacy Advisory Board under section 20(f); and

"(3) promote the development of a robust research community working at the leading edge of knowledge in subject areas relevant to the security of computer systems by providing support for graduate students, post-doctoral researchers, and senior researchers.

"(b) FELLOWSHIPS.—

"(1) POST-DOCTORAL RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS.—The Director is authorized to establish a program to award post-doctoral research fellowships to individuals who are citizens, nationals, or lawfully admitted permanent resident aliens of the United States and are seeking research positions at institutions, including the Institute, engaged in research activities related to the security of computer systems, including the research areas described in section 4(a)(1) of the Cyber Security Research and Development Act.

"(2) SENIOR RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS.—The Director is authorized to establish a program to award senior research fellowships to individuals seeking research positions at institutions, including the Institute, engaged in research activities related to the security of computer systems, including the research areas described in section 4(a)(1) of the Cyber Security Research and Development Act. Senior research fellowships shall be made available for established researchers at institutions of higher education who seek to change research fields and pursue studies related to the security of computer systems.

"(3) ELIGIBILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible for an award under this subsection, an individual shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director may require.

"(B) STIPENDS.—Under this subsection, the Director is authorized to provide stipends for post-doctoral research fellowships at the level of the Institute's Post Doctoral Research Fellowship Program and senior research fellowships at levels consistent with support for a faculty member in a sabbatical position.

"(c) AWARDS; APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director is authorized to award grants or cooperative agreements to institutions of higher education to carry out the program established under subsection (a). No funds made available under this section shall be made available directly to any for-profit partners.

"(2) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible for an award under this section, an institution of higher education shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director may require. The application shall include, at a minimum, a description of—

"(A) the number of graduate students anticipated to participate in the research project and the level of support to be provided to each;

"(B) the number of post-doctoral research positions included under the research project and the level of support to be provided to each;

"(C) the number of individuals, if any, intending to change research fields and pursue studies related to the security of computer systems to be included under the research project and the level of support to be provided to each; and

"(D) how the for-profit entities, nonprofit research institutions, and any other partners will participate in developing and carrying out the research and education agenda of the partnership.

"(d) PROGRAM OPERATION.—

"(1) MANAGEMENT.—The program established under subsection (a) shall be managed by individuals who shall have both expertise in research related to the security of computer systems and knowledge of the vulnerabilities of existing computer systems. The Director shall designate such individuals as program managers.

"(2) MANAGERS MAY BE EMPLOYEES.—Program managers designated under paragraph (1) may be new or existing employees of the Institute or individuals on assignment at the Institute under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act of 1970, except that individuals on assignment at the Institute under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act of 1970 shall not directly manage such employees.

"(3) MANAGER RESPONSIBILITY.—Program managers designated under paragraph (1) shall be responsible for—

"(A) establishing and publicizing the broad research goals for the program;

"(B) soliciting applications for specific research projects to address the goals developed under subparagraph (A);

"(C) selecting research projects for support under the program from among applications submitted to the Institute, following consideration of—

"(i) the novelty and scientific and technical merit of the proposed projects;

"(ii) the demonstrated capabilities of the individual or individuals submitting the applications to successfully carry out the proposed research;

"(iii) the impact the proposed projects will have on increasing the number of computer security researchers;

"(iv) the nature of the participation by for-profit entities and the extent to which the proposed projects address the concerns of industry; and

"(v) other criteria determined by the Director, based on information specified for inclusion in applications under subsection (c); and

"(D) monitoring the progress of research projects supported under the program.

"(4) REPORTS.—The Director shall report to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the House of Representatives Committee on Science annually on the use and responsibility of individuals on assignment at the Institute under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act of 1970 who are performing duties under subsection (d).

"(e) REVIEW OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) PERIODIC REVIEW.—The Director shall periodically review the portfolio of research awards monitored by each program manager designated in accordance with subsection (d). In conducting those reviews, the Director shall seek the advice of the Computer System Security and Privacy Advisory Board, established under section 21, on the appropriateness of the research goals and on the quality and utility of research projects managed by program managers in accordance with subsection (d).

"(2) COMPREHENSIVE 5-YEAR REVIEW.—The Director shall also contract with the National Research Council for a comprehensive review of the program established under subsection (a) during the 5th year of the program. Such review shall include an assessment of the scientific quality of the research conducted, the relevance of the research results obtained to the goals of the program established under subsection (d)(3)(A), and the progress of the program in promoting the development of a substantial academic research community working at the leading edge of knowledge in the field. The Director shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the review under this paragraph no later than 6 years after the initiation of the program.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) COMPUTER SYSTEM.—The term 'computer system' has the meaning given that term in section 20(d)(1).

"(2) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—The term 'institution of higher education' has the meaning given that term in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001(a)).".

(b) AMENDMENT OF COMPUTER SYSTEM DEFINITION.—Section 20(d)(1)(B)(i) of National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278g–3(d)(1)(B)(i)) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) computers and computer networks;".

(c) CHECKLISTS FOR GOVERNMENT SYSTEMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall develop, and revise as necessary, a checklist setting forth settings and option selections that minimize the security risks associated with each computer hardware or software system that is, or is likely to become, widely used within the Federal government.

(2) PRIORITIES FOR DEVELOPMENT; EXCLUDED SYSTEMS.—The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology may establish priorities for the development of checklists under this paragraph on the basis of the security risks associated with the use of the system, the number of agencies that use a particular system, the usefulness of the checklist to Federal agencies that are users or potential users of the system, or such other factors as the Director determines to be appropriate. The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology may exclude from the application of paragraph (1) any computer hardware or software system for which the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology determines that the development of a checklist is inappropriate because of the infrequency of use of the system, the obsolescence of the system, or the inutility or impracticability of developing a checklist for the system.

(3) DISSEMINATION OF CHECKLISTS.—The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall make any checklist developed under this paragraph for any computer hardware or software system available to each Federal agency that is a user or potential user of the system.

(4) AGENCY USE REQUIREMENTS.—The development of a checklist under paragraph (1) for a computer hardware or software system does not—

(A) require any Federal agency to select the specific settings or options recommended by the checklist for the system;

(B) establish conditions or prerequisites for Federal agency procurement or deployment of any such system;

(C) represent an endorsement of any such system by the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology; nor

(D) preclude any Federal agency from procuring or deploying other computer hardware or software systems for which no such checklist has been developed.

(d) FEDERAL AGENCY INFORMATION SECURITY PROGRAMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In developing the agency-wide information security program required by section 3534(b) of title 44, United States Code, an agency that deploys a computer hardware or software system for which the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology has developed a checklist under subsection (c) of this section—

(A) shall include in that program an explanation of how the agency has considered such checklist in deploying that system; and

(B) may treat the explanation as if it were a portion of the agency's annual performance plan properly classified under criteria established by an Executive Order (within the meaning of section 1115(d) of title 31, United States Code).

(2) LIMITATION.—Paragraph (1) does not apply to any computer hardware or software system for which the National Institute of Standards and Technology does not have responsibility under section 20(a)(3) of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C.278g-3(a)(3)).

SEC. 9. COMPUTER SECURITY REVIEW, PUBLIC MEETINGS, AND INFORMATION.

Section 20 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278g-3) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $1,060,000 for fiscal year 2003 and $1,090,000 for fiscal year 2004 to enable the Computer System Security and Privacy Advisory Board, established by section 21, to identify emerging issues, including research needs, related to computer security, privacy, and cryptography and, as appropriate, to convene public meetings on those subjects, receive presentations, and publish reports, digests, and summaries for public distribution on those subjects.".

SEC. 10. INTRAMURAL SECURITY RESEARCH.

Section 20 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278g-3), as amended by this Act, is further amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f), and by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

"(e) INTRAMURAL SECURITY RESEARCH.—As part of the research activities conducted in accordance with subsection (b)(4), the Institute shall—

"(1) conduct a research program to address emerging technologies associated with assembling a networked computer system from components while ensuring it maintains desired security properties;

"(2) carry out research associated with improving the security of real-time computing and communications systems for use in process control; and

"(3) carry out multidisciplinary, long-term, high-risk research on ways to improve the security of computer systems.".

SEC. 11. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce for the National Institute of Standards and Technology—

(1) for activities under section 22 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act, as added by section 8 of this Act—

(A) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;
(B) $40,000,000 for fiscal year 2004;
(C) $55,000,000 for fiscal year 2005;
(D) $70,000,000 for fiscal year 2006;
(E) $85,000,000 for fiscal year 2007; and

(2) for activities under section 20(f) of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act, as added by section 10 of this Act—

(A) $6,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;
(B) $6,200,000 for fiscal year 2004;
(C) $6,400,000 for fiscal year 2005;
(D) $6,600,000 for fiscal year 2006; and
(E) $6,800,000 for fiscal year 2007.

SEC. 12. NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES STUDY ON COMPUTER AND NETWORK SECURITY IN CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURES.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 3 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall enter into an arrangement with the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study of the vulnerabilities of the Nation's network infrastructure and make recommendations for appropriate improvements. The National Research Council shall—

(1) review existing studies and associated data on the architectural, hardware, and software vulnerabilities and interdependencies in United States critical infrastructure networks;

(2) identify and assess gaps in technical capability for robust critical infrastructure network security and make recommendations for research priorities and resource requirements; and

(3) review any and all other essential elements of computer and network security, including security of industrial process controls, to be determined in the conduct of the study.

(b) REPORT.—The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall transmit a report containing the results of the study and recommendations required by subsection (a) to the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the House of Representatives Committee on Science not later than 21 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) SECURITY.—The Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall ensure that no information that is classified is included in any publicly released version of the report required by this section.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce for the National Institute of Standards and Technology for the purposes of carrying out this section, $700,000.

SEC. 13. COORDINATION OF FEDERAL CYBER SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The Director of the National Science Foundation and the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology shall coordinate the research programs authorized by this Act or pursuant to amendments made by this Act. The Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy shall work with the Director of the National Science Foundation and the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology to ensure that programs authorized by this Act or pursuant to amendments made by this Act are taken into account in any government-wide cyber security research effort.

SEC. 14. OFFICE OF SPACE COMMERCIALIZATION.

Section 8(a) of the Technology Administration Act of 1998 (15 U.S.C. 1511e(a)) is amended by inserting "the Technology Administration of" after "within".

SEC. 15. TECHNICAL CORRECTION OF NATIONAL CONSTRUCTION SAFETY TEAM ACT.

Section 2(c)(1)(d) of the National Construction Safety Team Act is amended by striking "section 8;" and inserting "section 7;".

SEC. 16. GRANT ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS AND COMPLIANCE WITH IMMIGRATION LAWS.

(a) IMMIGRATION STATUS.—No grant or fellowship may be awarded under this Act, directly or indirectly, to any individual who is in violation of the terms of his or her status as a nonimmigrant under section 101(a)(15)(F), (M), or (J) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(F), (M), or (J)).

(b) ALIENS FROM CERTAIN COUNTRIES.—No grant or fellowship may be awarded under this Act, directly or indirectly, to any alien from a country that is a state sponsor of international terrorism, as defined under section 306(b) of the Enhanced Border Security and VISA Entry Reform Act (8 U.S.C. 1735(b)), unless the Secretary of State determines, in consultation with the Attorney General and the heads of other appropriate agencies, that such alien does not pose a threat to the safety or national security of the United States.

(c) NON-COMPLYING INSTITUTIONS.—No grant or fellowship may be awarded under this Act, directly or indirectly, to any institution of higher education or non-profit institution (or consortia thereof) that has—

(1) materially failed to comply with the recordkeeping and reporting requirements to receive nonimmigrant students or exchange visitor program participants under section 101(a)(15)(F), (M), or (J) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(F), (M), or (J)), or section 641 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Responsibility Act of 1996 (8 U.S.C. 1372), as required by section 502 of the Enhanced Border Security and VISA Entry Reform Act (8 U.S.C. 1762); or

(2) been suspended or terminated pursuant to section 502(c) of the Enhanced Border Security and VISA Entry Reform Act (8 U.S.C 1762(c)).

SEC. 17. REPORT ON GRANT AND FELLOWSHIP PROGRAMS.

Within 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director, in consultation with the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, shall submit to Congress a report reviewing this Act to ensure that the programs and fellowships are being awarded under this Act to individuals and institutions of higher education who are in compliance with the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.) in order to protect our national security.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD) each will control 20 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H.R. 3394.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to bring H.R. 3394, the Cyber Security Research and Development Act, before the House again, this time for final passage.

Back in February, the House passed the bill 400 to 12, a sign of the widely recognized need for this legislation. The Senate, by unanimous consent, has now returned the bill to us entirely intact, with a few negotiated noncontroversial additions. These additions include an additional fellowship program, greater efforts to approve the security of Federal computers, language to ensure that existing rules concerning foreign students are being enforced, and a technical correction to the bill we passed in response to the collapse of the World Trade Center.

With this background, no one should be surprised that I expect this bill to be signed shortly by the President. That is as it should be. H.R. 3394 will provide a targeted solution to a serious but largely overlooked problem: cyber security.

Cyber security is a problem that is even worse than it first appears. That is because not only are our Nation's computers and networks vulnerable to attack, and not only could a cyber attack disrupt our economy and threaten public health and safety, but we simply do not know enough about how to design computers and networks to make them less vulnerable.

For too long, cyber security has just not been a research priority. The private sector was much more focused on making computers cheaper, faster, and easier to use. The market did not put a premium on security. Government similarly turned its attention elsewhere.

As a result, computers have become omnipresent. We are more and more at their mercy, without becoming any more secure. In an age of terrorism, such willful ignorance about cyber security has got to come to an end.

We received yet another reminder of that monumental fact last month when the servers that run the Internet in the United States were subject to a concerted attack from overseas.

H.R. 3394 is designed quite simply, to usher in a new era in cyber security research. Cyber security research will no longer be a backwater, but rather will become a priority at two of our premier research agencies, the National Science Foundation and the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and through them, a priority in academia and industry.

And the programs created by H.R. 3394 are designed not only to spur new thinking about how to safeguard computers and networks in both the short and long run, but to make sure that we have a cadre of experts who will devote their careers to improving cyber security. The bill includes incentives for researchers to turn their attention to cyber security, and incentives to attract students to the field at the undergraduate, graduate and post-doctoral levels.

In short, this bill is a targeted but comprehensive attempt to ensure that the Nation's best minds are focused on improving cyber security. That is what it will take to stave off a cyber attack.

I want to thank the many people inside and outside Congress who helped us bring this bill to fruition. Bill Wulf, the president of the National Academy of Engineering, is really the godfather of this bill, bringing the problem and potential solutions to our attention, and he has always been available to bounce ideas off of. Industry groups have been enormously helpful and supportive, including the Information Technology Association of America and the National Association of Manufacturers.

This bill has been a bipartisan effort from its inception. I want to thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL), the ranking member, and the other Members of the minority, including the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD), who have helped shape this bill. We have had similar partnership in the other body led by Senators WYDEN and ALLEN.

In short, H.R. 3394 is a bipartisan approach to a very real but very solvable problem. I urge its final passage, not just because it is needed, but because it will reflect the fine efforts of so many dedicated people on the staff of both the Republican and Democrat side. This bill has been bicameral, and has the private sector working in partnership with government. That is the way it should be. We are addressing a very serious problem, and trying to get ahold of it before it gets out of hand, and I am optimistic we are moving in the right direction.

Mr. Speaker, I urge final passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3394, the Cyber Security Research and Development Act. I thank the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHLERT) for his outstanding leadership on this bill, and commend the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL) for his leadership as well.

I am tremendously honored that H.R. 3316, a computer security bill that I authored along with the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), are included in today's bill.

Essentially, H.R. 3394 is the same as the version that was passed by the House back in February. This legislation will address the long-term needs to secure the Nation's information infrastructure, as well as strengthening the security of the nonclassified computer systems of our Federal agencies.

Since September 11, attention has been focused in an unprecedented way on increasing our security against terrorism. Today, security has to mean more than locking doors and installing metal detectors. In addition to physical security, virtual information systems that are vital to our Nation's security and economy must be protected. Telecommunications and computer technologies are vulnerable to attack from far away by enemies who can remain anonymous, hidden in the vast maze of the Internet.

Examples of systems that rely on computer networks include our electric power grid, rail networks and financial transaction networks. The gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA), the former chairman of the subcommittee, have had the foresight to begin hearings on this matter, even well before September 11. It is that kind of forward thinking that we need to protect our Nation's security and to secure our information infrastructure from cyber attacks.

Our vulnerability to Internet-based computer viruses, denial of service attacks, and defaced websites is well known to the general public. Such widely reported and indeed widely experienced events have increased in frequency over time. These attacks disrupt business and government activities, sometimes resulting in significant recovery costs.

While we have yet to face a catastrophic cyber attack thus far, Richard Clarke, the chair of the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board, has said that the government must make cyber security a priority or we face the possibility of what he termed a digital Pearl Harbor.

Potentially vulnerable computer systems are largely owned and operated by the private sector, but the government has an important role in supporting the research and development activities that provide the tools for protecting information systems. An essential component for ensuring improved information security is a vigorous and creative basic research effort focused on the security of networked information systems.

Witnesses at our Committee on Science hearings last year noted the anemic level of funding for research on computer and network security. Such lack of funding has resulted in the lack of a critical mass of researchers in the field and has severely limited the focus of research. The witnesses at the hearings advocated increased and sustained research funding from the Federal Government to support both expanded training and research on a long-term basis.

H.R. 3394 meets those needs. It authorizes $903 million over 5 years to create new cyber security programs within the National Science Foundation and the National Institute of Standards and Technology. Under the bill, the NSF will create new cyber security research centers, undergraduate grants, community college grants, and fellowships.

The legislation also includes language I authored pertaining to NIST. The bill requires NIST to create new program grants for partnerships between academia and industry, new post-doctoral students, and a new program to encourage senior researchers in other fields to work on computer security.

I believe the legislation before us today will provide the resources necessary to ensure the security of business networks and the safety of America's computer infrastructure. I thank the staff of the Committee on Science for their tireless work on H.R. 3394, and I urge all members to support this important measure.

Mr. Speaker, I invite the chairman of the Committee on Science to enter into a brief colloquy to ask for two brief points of clarification.

Section 16(c) forbids the NSF from awarding grants or fellowships to institutions of higher education or nonprofit institutions that materially fail to comply with record-keeping requirements under certain sections of the Immigration and Nationality Act and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Responsibility Act. This section does not have an effective date at present. Many of these record-keeping requirements have yet to be written or promulgated. Therefore, the effective date for this subsection cannot be the date of enactment. In bringing the bill forward for consideration by the House, what is the gentleman's intent concerning the effective date for this provision?

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAIRD. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Washington makes a very important point. Neither the Immigration and Naturalization Service nor the Department of State have provided final guidance to enable universities to participate in the new Student Exchange Visitor Information System, which provides tracking, monitoring, and access to accurate and current information on nonimmigration students and exchange visas.

It is not possible to be materially out of compliance with these requirements until the final guidance and an appropriate time for implementation have been provided to the university research community.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, my second question deals with Section 17 that requires the Director, 24 months after the date of enactment of this act, to submit a report to Congress reviewing this act to ensure that awards under the act are made to individuals and institutions that are in compliance with the Immigration and Nationality Act. I assume this is a simple reporting requirement similar to other reports to Congress by the NSF and that it is not meant to require the Director to enforce our Nation's immigration laws?

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would continue to yield, the gentleman is correct. Enforcement of the immigration laws is the responsibility of the INS and the State Department. Section 17 requires that NSF report to Congress on information it obtains from institutions of higher education, State and INS. This section does not require the NSF Director to commission a duplicative study to secure information that should be readily obtainable from the State Department and INS.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for that clarification, and thank the gentleman for his leadership on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) for purposes of control.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WU).

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3394, the Cyber Security Research and Development Act. We have become increasingly reliant on the Internet and computer technology. And unfortunately, with this reliance comes increased vulnerability to cyber attacks on our network systems and infrastructure. America's network infrastructure is increasingly exposed to both benign and destructive disruptions, including defacement of web sites, denial of service, virus infections throughout the computer networks, and unauthorized intrusions and sabotage of systems and networks.

Past attacks show the types of danger and potential disruption cyber attacks can have on our Nation's infrastructure. The cyber threats to this country are significant and getting more sophisticated as time goes by.

A recent survey found that 85 percent of respondents experienced computer intrusions. Moreover, Carnegie Mellon University's CERT Coordination Center, which serves as a reporting center for Internet security problems, received almost six times the number of vulnerability reports in 2001 as it did just 2 years earlier. Similarly, the number of specific incidents reported to CERT exploded from 9.589 in 1999 to 52,658 in 2001. Even more alarming is CERT's estimates that these statistics may only represent 20 percent of the incidents that actually occurred.

The Cyber Security Research and Development Act will play a major role in fostering greater research in methods to prevent future cyber attacks and design more secure networks. This legislation will harness and link the intellectual power of the National Science Foundation, the National Institute of Science and Technology, universities, and private industry to develop new computer cryptography authentication, firewalls, forensics, intrusion detection, wireless security and systems management.

In addition, this bill is designed to draw more college undergraduate and graduate students into the field of cyber security. It establishes programs to use internships, research opportunities and better equipment to engage students in this field.

America is a leader in computer hardware and software development. In order to preserve America's technologic edge and our security, we must have a continuous pipeline of new students in computer science and research.

I strongly support this legislation and I am proud to support this important bill as it moved through the Committee on Science and again as it passed the House earlier this February. I commend the leadership of the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD), Senator WYDEN from Oregon, and the chairman of the Committee on Science, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), for their leadership in moving this bill. I am confident that the Federal investment for long-term projects outlined in this legislation will enhance the security of our cyber homeland.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I thank all Members who worked on this, but certainly commend the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL), the ranking member, and the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHLERT) for having the foresight and commitment to initiate and advance this legislation that I would suggest is very important.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Research, I am proud to have worked on this bill and to be a prime sponsor. This act establishes programs at both the National Science Foundation and NIST, the National Institute for Standards and Technology, to advance research and, perhaps most importantly, develop a talented workforce of cyber security researchers and professionals.

While the focus in information technology has largely been to build it faster, build it smaller, and build it less expensive, perhaps now more than ever we need to know how to build it safer and more secure.

The programs authorized by this act provide much needed support for the research that will help us understand just how to do that. By supporting undergraduate and graduate post-doctoral students, as well as senior researchers who wish to focus some of their research efforts on cyber security, we will train the experts who make sure the appropriate safeguards are in place to protect us from malicious cyber attacks.

It is a huge challenge. It is not going to come cheaply and it is not going to come easily.

There are some unique features of this bill that will make it particularly effective in fostering innovative research and education in cyber security. For example, this act will establish a program at the National Science Foundation to help institutions of higher education purchase the equipment that they need so that students can learn how to prevent cyber attacks without risking the integrity of the college's own computer network. Another program established by this act at the National Institute of Standards and Technology will support the kind of high-risk, high-payoff research that is necessary to make great advances in cyber security but that is unlikely to get funded under the traditional peer-review process that tends to favor more conservative approaches to research questions. In addition, in recognition of the fact that effective cyber security will rely largely on the expertise of computer technicians, this bill amends the Scientific and Advanced Technology Act of 1992 to provide the National Science Foundation funding to 2-year colleges to make sure that graduates of technical programs are properly trained in cyber security.

Just a few weeks ago, an electronic attack crippled 13 computer servers that manage Internet traffic. While this hour-long attack went nearly unnoticed by routine computer users, a longer attack could cripple communication, infrastructure operations and even national security efforts. This country more than any other country in the world has come to depend on our software and our computer technology, from how we run our financial services to how we move our railroads to certainly our airlines and transportation down to how we transfer electrical power throughout the United States, not to mention our national security and our military efforts. We cannot allow these kinds of attacks to happen.

In conclusion, as we move forward in our war against terrorism, it is going to be as important for us to secure cyber space as it will be for us to secure homeland security against malicious attack. I look forward to working with the National Science Foundation as they implement the programs authorized by this act.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Texas. I thank the gentleman from Michigan for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I support the Senate amendment to H.R. 3394, the Cyber Security Research and Development Act. Earlier this year, a federally funded research center operated by Carnegie Mellon University reported that breaches in security of computer systems more than doubled from 2000 to 2001. More than 52,000 incidents were reported in 2001, up from 22,000 in 2000.

Last spring the Committee on the Judiciary's Subcommittee on Crime, Terrorism and Homeland Security that I chair held a series of hearings on cyber crime. We heard testimony from local, State and Federal officials and also from the private sector. A common observation emerged: The demand for highly trained and skilled personnel to investigate computer crimes is tremendous. This problem is compounded by the rapid advances in technology which make continued training an absolute necessity. We must have training both for a new generation of cyber warriors whose most important weapon is not a gun but a laptop and for private sector companies that must protect their Internet presence.

This bill seeks to expand what many States and cities are already doing, investing in cyber security training activities. In my hometown, the University of Texas at San Antonio has established the Center for Information Assurance and Security, known as CIAS. The CIAS will be the hub of a city initiative to research, develop and address computer protection mechanisms to prevent and detect intrusions on computer networks. With funding provided in this bill, UTSA and dozens of other universities will be able to train the next generation of cyber warriors, cyber defenders and "white hat netizens." This legislation supports the work at UTSA and other universities for students who want to pursue computer security studies.

While the benefits of the digital age are obvious, the Internet also has fostered an environment where hackers retrieve private data for amusement, individuals distribute software illegally, and viruses circulate with the sole purpose of debilitating computers. A well-trained and highly skilled force of cyber protectors is urgently needed in America today.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is my pleasure to see this bill reach the floor for final passage and on its way to the President. I certainly agree with all the comments that have been made and I will not repeat them, but I did want to point out that in passing this legislation, both the House and the Senate have recognized the important role that the National Institute of Standards and Technology plays in cyber security. This is very important to note, because in the original proposal for the homeland security bill that particular activity would have been transferred out of the National Institute of Standards and Technology and placed in the Department of Homeland Security. I think that would have been very disruptive to the activity, but the important thing to recognize is that this group at the National Institute of Standards and Technology is the leading group in doing the basic research necessary to solve our cyber security problems. Members of the House and of the Senate working on the homeland security legislation should embrace this role as well. While there have been proposals to transfer NIST's cyber security division into the new department, this legislation clearly identifies the role that NIST should play in cyber security. As such, the proposals to move this responsibility elsewhere do not meet the test. Any conference agreement should recognize this as well by keeping NIST's cyber security division within NIST.

Let me also add that to most individuals in this land, cyber security means not having someone steal their credit card number. That is a very important function. But there is much more at stake here, as we have heard. That is the Nation's security. Two years ago, I wrote a report for the NATO parliamentary assembly, which is the legislative body relating to NATO, that discussed and studied information warfare. Much of what I said in that report is pertinent to this discussion today.

Mr. Speaker, I include that report at this point in the proceedings.

INFORMATION WARFARE AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The importance of Information Technology (IT) to the functioning of our societies is evident in virtually every human activity. Computers are involved in and often control everything from government operations to transportation, from energy to finance, from telecommunications to water management. Every day an enormous amount of information is exchanged or stored by electronic means and trillions of dollars travel throughout the world electronically. Information technology has become even more pervasive with the widespread dispersion of personal computers. According to projections of the US Computer Industry Almanac, by the year 2000 there will be more than 550 million PCs in the world, 230 million of which will be connected to the Internet (92 million in the United States alone).

2. The pace of technological change and our increasing reliance on technology are even more impressive. Five years ago, a computer chip could carry the equivalent of 1.1

million transistors. Now the number has increased to 120 million and engineers believe they can reach 400 million and even 1 billion. Capable of 256 billion multiplications per second, the latest desktop computers have acquired the speed of yesterday's supercomputers. This has accelerated the dispersion and use of the Internet. To achieve mass-user status, it took radio 35 years, television 13 years and the Internet only 4 years. Microsoft experts assert that Internet traffic doubles every 100 days and, according to other estimates, one billion people (one-sixth of humanity) will be on-line by 2005.

3. The reliance of our societies on computers and the fact that many critical infrastructures are electronically interconnected poses evident security problems. Although computer experts have been working on these problems for years, only in the mid-1990s did Western defence analysts begin to pay serious attention to them. In a variety of studies and reports, a strategic catch phrase emerged to define a new concept: Information Warfare. In a 1997 Report, the NAA Science and Technology Committee provided a first assessment of Information Warfare, analysing most of the available sources on the subject. The threat of possible attacks on information systems and the potential risks for our military and civilian infrastructures were outlined in that Report. (1)

4. In the last two years technological advances as well as governmental and international actions have changed the world of information security. As a consequence, the subject of information warfare has been extensively discussed and analysed, both within and outside the information technology and defence communities. This report analyses these new developments, starting with some new definitions of information warfare, assesses the effective strategic threats, and reports about the US and other governments' initiatives to counter them. It is also our intention to consider the concerns expressed by the science and technology community about the possible overstatement of such threats, especially with reference to some cases of media hyperbole.

II. WHAT IS INFORMATION WARFARE?

A. Definitions

5. The cited 1997 STC Report emphasised the distinction between the use of information in warfare and the newer concept of information warfare, the first being recognised since ancient times and referring basically to tactical and strategic deception, war propaganda, and destruction of command and control systems. In the current conceptualisation, information warfare "extends far beyond the traditional battlefield, and its possible perpetrators and victims are by no means confined to the military". A few definitions were reported then, to which your Rapporteur would like to add some new ones. The first is proposed by the Institute for the Advanced Study of Information Warfare: "Information warfare is the offensive and defensive use of information and information systems to exploit, corrupt, or destroy an adversary's information and information systems, while protecting one's own. Such actions are designed to achieve advantages over military or business adversaries." (2)

6. The International Centre for Security Analysis of King's College, London suggests that information warfare "is about struggles for control over information activities" and distinguishes three levels or categories: ideational struggle for the mind of an opponent, struggle for information dominance, and attacks on, and defence of, information flows and activities. The first, highest level "encompasses the whole range of psychological, media, diplomatic and military techniques for influencing the mind of an opponent, whether that opponent is a military commander or a whole population". The second level could be assimilated with the Revolution in Military Affairs (RMA), whose theorists and advocates see, as the future evolution of armed forces, the goal of dominating the "information spectrum". The ultimate objective of this level of information warfare would be to render physical conflict "either unnecessary or at worst short, sharp and successful". At the third level the focus is on any kind of electronic attack upon military or civilian information infrastructures, including criminal hacking (or cracking), data disruption, illegal systems penetration, and also physical destruction, deception and psychological operations. (3)

7. The Washington based Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) recently published a comprehensive study on these issues and admitted that so many different activities have been classified under the label "information warfare" that it is now difficult to understand exactly what it is. Nonetheless, this study classifies information warfare activities according to the source, the form, and the tactical objectives of the attack. Thus, information warfare can be viewed as a combination of these three dimensions.

8. First, an attack could originate either from outside or from within the targeted organisation or system. Second, four categories of attack can be identified:

Data attacks are conducted by inserting data into a system to make it malfunction.

Software attacks, similar to data attacks, are conducted by penetrating systems with software causing failure or making them perform functions different from those intended.

Hacking or cracking is seizing or attempting to seize control of an information system (or a vital part of it) to disrupt, deny use, steal resources or data, or cause any other kind of harm.

Physical attacks are the traditional form of attack (bombing, assaulting, and destroying) directed against information systems. An electromagnetic pulse (EMP) produced by nuclear explosions can also be included in this kind of attack.

9. All these different forms of information warfare attack can be categorised by their goals or tactical objectives: they could be aimed at exploitation, deception, disruption or destruction of information systems. (4)

10. The French Ministry of Defence has also offered an interesting definition of information warfare. It has singled out three types:

War for information (guerre pour l'information): to obtain information about the enemy's means, capabilities and strategies in order to defend ourselves;

War against information (guerre contre l'information): at the same time to protect our information systems and to disrupt or destroy the enemy's.

War through information (guerre par l'information): to conduct misinformation or deception operations against the enemy in order to achieve "information dominance". (5)

11. All the above are accurate and acceptable definitions, but for the sake of clarity we can try to summarise them into a simpler and more limited formula. Information warfare could be then defined as defensive and offensive operations, conducted by individuals or structured organisations with specific political and strategic goals, for the exploitation, disruption or destruction of data contained in computers or transmitted over the Internet and other networked information systems. (6)

B. Assessing the Threat

12. In general terms, a threat can be defined as the combination of a capability and a hostile intent. According to many analysts, the reason for concern about attacks upon information systems, or information warfare, is that the means of offence are widely available, inexpensive and easy to use. In a world where even governments and the military tend to rely on computer hardware and software available commercially off-the-shelf (COTS), virtually anybody with a computer and the technical skills could become a cracker or a cyberterrorist. Moreover, the progress in information technology makes the electronic tools available to conduct such attacks more sophisticated every day and, through the Internet and the interlinked computer world, easier to acquire. But the most potentially dangerous feature of information warfare is that it can be conducted from anywhere in the world and the possibilities of discovering the attack's origin, or even its presence, are extremely difficult.

13. Who can conduct such attacks? A recent analysis has listed the potential "enemies" according to the levels of threat. At the lower level are the crackers, or "hackers with malicious intentions", sometimes highly knowledgeable in technical matters and very determined, but often isolated and without a clear political agenda. Then we have some pressure groups, organisations that fight for specific political causes and might decide to acquire the technology in order to attack the information systems of other organisations or even of states. Terrorists come next in the scale: some groups are becoming increasingly sophisticated in the use of technology and can conduct strategic offensive information warfare. At the highest level are the states, many of which now have access to extremely sophisticated technology and can acquire the necessary organisational infrastructure to conduct both offensive and defensive information warfare. In fact, some experts doubt the effectiveness, capability, or even willingness of the non-state actors to conduct attacks that can seriously threaten other nations' security. (7)

14. In the last fifteen years, both the private and public sectors' information systems have been subjected to attacks that have substantially increased with the growth of the Internet. Computer viruses have been a primary concern of information security experts. These are generally very small programmes, often with destructive capabilities, designed to invade computer systems or individual PCs by attaching themselves to other bits of executable programme codes. Created by hackers, computer science students or disgruntled programmers, these viruses have been extremely destructive to many computers and networks, but have not proved to be particularly effective as weapons to date. Because of their non-professional origins, the viruses often contain errors and, moreover, their authors are often incapable of envisioning the complexity and variety of the systems they are attacking.

15. Of course, it is still possible that a state or a terrorist group can assemble a team of experts capable of creating malicious viruses and using them to conduct information warfare attacks. But computer viruses are extremely unpredictable and far from precise in their behaviour, and they might eventually damage the attacker as much as the victim. In addition, the international anti-virus industry is mature and is well positioned to create necessary antidotes to almost any new virus.

16. Other, more dangerous attacks on information systems have been conducted by criminal hacking intruders. Private corporations, particularly in the financial sector, are regularly penetrated by cybercriminals: the FBI estimates that these electronic intrusions cause yearly losses of about $10 billion in the United States alone. This is probably only the tip of the iceberg. In fact, concerns about protecting shareholder value and customer confidence may keep many firms from reporting all the attacks to law enforcement agencies.

17. Electronic intrusions into the military information infrastructure cause deep concern in the United States. According to the CSIS, probe attacks against the Pentagon number in the tens of thousands every year. John J. Hamre, Deputy Secretary of Defense, recently stated that from January to mid-November 1998, the National Security Agency (NSA) recorded more than 3,800 incidents of intrusion attempts against the Defense Department's unclassified computer systems and networks. Over 100 of these attacks reached root-level access and many were even able to break down some kinds of service. This reflects only what has been reported to NSA, but "the actual number of intrusions probably is considerably higher". (8)

18. The literature and the chronicles are full of examples of successful network intrusions at the US Department of Defense (DoD) and other Western defence institutions. One of the most interesting is the break-in at the Air Force's Laboratories in the town of Rome, in New York State, when two British boys hacked into the system with the help of what is called a "sniffer" programme, able to capture passwords and user log-ins to the network. The case served as a learning experience for the Air Force Information Warfare Center, which then developed the advanced technical skills to counter these intrusions. Similar hacker intrusions are regularly experienced by all other US military services and government agencies.

19. While most of the attacks in the last few years were generally conducted by individuals or by small groups of intruders, with little or no political purpose, recently some cases suggested the possibility of state-sponsored hacking or cracking. Additionally, some anti-state, politically motivated activity has occurred. In October 1998, China launched a new website to publicise its efforts in human rights. A few days later, hackers replaced the home page of that site with a message condemning Beijing for its poor record in human rights. (9)

20. Another, more revealing case occurred in Ireland, where refugees from East Timor had set up a website to protest against the occupation of their country by Indonesia. The Irish Internet provider even created a new domain name ".tp", as if East Timor were an independent country. In January 1999, a concerted attack against the East Timorese server started, originating from 18 different places as far apart as Australia, the United States, Japan, the Netherlands and Canada. The attackers managed to render the web server useless and forced the Irish provider to disconnect its entire system. Clearly, this was not an ordinary cracker intrusion, though many doubt that the Indonesian government had the capability to conduct such a concerted information warfare action. The most probable culprit is a group of politicised hackers sympathetic with the Indonesian position. (10)

21. The NATO information system was also indirectly threatened in October 1998, when a Serbian group of hackers known as Black Hand penetrated a Kosovo Albanian web server and threatened to sabotage the Alliance's information system. The organisation temporarily closed all foreign access to its web server and its web site was down for two days. Realising that the electronic defences of the NATO web server were extremely weak, experts took some countermeasures, which proved to be insufficient in the light of subsequent events. (11)

22. During the Kosovo crisis, hackers attacked the NATO web site, causing a line saturation of the server by using a "bombardment strategy". The organisation had to defend itself from macro viruses from FRY trying to corrupt its e-mail system, which was also being saturated by one individual sending 2,000 messages a day. These attacks were possible because NATO was using the same server for the e-mail system and its web-pages. When these tasks are done by separate servers, as is now the case at NATO, the threat is reduced. Allied governments' web sites have also been targeted during the war, and according to US Air Force sources the attacks came not only from FRY, but also from Russia and China. It is unclear, however, whether these attacks were state-sponsored or the work of groups of hackers. Conversely, FRY's information systems were severely damaged by NATO bombings and electronic operations—although Belgrade itself dismantled communication systems to deprive its people of outside information. In addition, thousands of Western civilian hackers conducted online attacks against the FRY government's web servers. (12)

23. Such cases might not prove the existence of state-sponsored information warfare or cyberterrorism, but they offer good examples of what could happen if the capability is coupled with a hostile intent. The subsequent question is: could a group of state-sponsored terrorists or individual crackers damage the information infrastructure of another nation so as to cause a major strategic disruption? The US Department of Defense seems to think so.

24. In the summer of 1997, a simulation exercise called "Eligible Receiver" was conducted at the Pentagon, ordered by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to test the ability of the nation's military and civilian infrastructure to resist a concerted information warfare attack. A team of fictional hackers, the Red Team, was allowed to use only COTS materiel and information available on the Web and had to act within the US law. So far, the results of this exercise remain strictly "top secret". Nonetheless, many officials have referred to it in public declarations and some have partially revealed the outcome. James Adams, a journalist based in Washington DC, claimed in a book to have interviewed senior officials about "Eligible Receiver": "The [simulated] attacks focused on three main areas: the national information infrastructure, the military leadership and the political leadership. In each of these three areas, the hackers found it exceptionally easy to penetrate apparently well-defended systems. Air traffic control systems were taken down, power grids made to fail, oil refineries stopped pumping—all initially apparent incidents. At the same time, in response to a hypothetical international crisis, the Defense department was moving to deploy forces overseas and the logistics network was swinging into action. It proved remarkably easy to disrupt that network by changing orders and interrupt[ing] the logistics flow. The hackers began to feed false news reports into the decision-making process so that the politicians faced a lack of public will about prosecuting a potential conflict and lacked detailed and accurate information." (13)

25. In conclusion, according to Adams' sources, a team of skilled hackers, using standard equipment and publicly available information and playing by the rules, was able to cause a "serious degradation of the Pentagon's ability to deploy and to fight". In other words, they demonstrated that an "electronic Pearl Harbor" was possible.

26. Many things have changed in the last two years due to the fast pace of progress in information technology. Moreover, the policies and actions taken by the US government may have reduced the vulnerability of the nation's infrastructure. Nonetheless, if technology is helping Western governments establish better defences, it also helps potential enemies improve their capabilities to attack. A recently announced new breed of hacker software, that can learn and adapt to the network environment it attacks, may represent a new threat. According to information technology experts, the new programmes can change their mode of operation, or their targets, based on external stimulants. Pre-programmed to search for specific types of files common to most networks, such software, once in the system, can target data or files of interest to the intruders, even those marked secure or for internal use only. (14)

27. In addition, many nations are trying to acquire the capabilities needed to conduct information warfare operations and new terrorist groups like Osama bin Laden's are known to use computers and satellite telecommunications. China has recently intensified its information warfare programmes, both to protect its own military infrastructures and to enable the People's Liberation Army to conduct electronic attacks. According to James Mulvenon, a defence specialist at Rand Corporation, Beijing "is seeking the ability both to interfere with Taiwan's command system, and ultimately to 'hack' into US military networks which control deployment in the Asian region." (15)

28. A serious physical threat to information systems can be posed by the effects of the electro-magnetic pulse (EMP) produced by nuclear explosions. The immediate energy release from a detonated nuclear device produces intense, rapidly varying electric and magnetic fields that can extend for considerable distances and severely affect all electronic equipment and electrical or radar transmissions even to the point of destroying equipment circuits, microprocessors, and other components. Therefore, a single, very high-altitude nuclear blast above Europe or the United States, which may cause no physical damage to structures or people, could disable or disrupt all non-hardened information systems. While few nations currently have both nuclear weapons and the missiles capable of delivering them in space, the increasing number of "rogue" nations with nuclear weapons that are also developing or acquiring long-range missiles may present an extremely serious EMP threat in the near future.

29. EMP effects from nuclear explosions and non-nuclear weapons, such as HERP (High-Energy Radio Frequency) guns or EMP/T (Electro-Magnetic Pulses Transformer) bombs, may be much more dangerous for civilian information systems than for military ones, most of which are now EMP hardened. Shielding of iron or other materials such as copper mesh or non-magnetic metals is generally available only for the protection of sensitive military technology.

III. RESPONSES TO THE THREAT

30. Efforts to respond to the threat of attacks to information systems, or information warfare, have been made by many nations. Generally, the military and defence "think tanks" have been the first to address the issue, but now most Western governments have taken steps towards more co-ordinated and structured responses.

31. In the United States, different panels, commissions and study groups have been examining these issues since the early 1990s and the government has taken several important measures. Congressional Committees have held hearings to investigate the nature of the information warfare threat. The National Defense University has extensively worked on the issue since the early 1990s. However, the most comprehensive appraisal of the nation's vulnerabilities in the field of information technology has been provided by the Presidential Commission on Critical Infrastructure Protection, created in 1996, involving officials from the energy, defence, commerce and law enforcement areas, as well as representatives of the private sector. After 15 months of study, the Commission published an extensive report highlighting the vulnerabilities of the US infrastructure and the weakness of the information systems, which proved to be a potentially easy target for any concerted attack. The report also indicated that government and industry do not efficiently share information that might give warning of an electronic attack and that the federal R&D budget does not include the analysis of the threats to the information systems in the infrastructure. (16)

32. The work of the Presidential Commission resulted in the issuing in May 1998 of two Presidential Decision Directives, 62 and 63, on Critical Infrastructure Protection. The provisions of these Directives included:

Interagency co-ordination for critical infrastructure protection;

Definition of the roles and responsibilities of US agencies in fighting terrorism;

Improvements in capabilities for protecting the national information structure, the most important of which is the creation of a National Infrastructure Protection Center (NIPC) in the FBI;

Promotion of partnerships with industry and other private players to enhance computer security;

Study of plans for minimising damage and recovering rapidly from attacks to its vital infrastructures.

33. Some experts criticised the US administration decisions, claiming that the above provisions underestimated the realities of the information warfare threat. Nonetheless this is the most comprehensive and complete initiative taken so far by any Western government to respond to the risks of attacks on information systems.

34. Moreover, the DoD, actively participating in the government initiatives, has recently created a Joint Task Force for Computer Network Defense (JTF-CND) to co-ordinate all the activities in this field and direct the Pentagon's response to computer network attacks. The JTF-CND will plan defensive measures, leverage existing capabilities and develop procedures for the military commanders-in-chief, services and agencies, as well as provide strategic focus at all levels. Fully operational in the summer of 1999, the JTF-CND will also develop relationships with intelligence and law enforcement agencies, the NIPC and the private sector. (17)

35. Among European nations, France appears to have developed a coherent strategy to deal with attacks on information systems. In the absence of a general programme for infrastructure protection, such as that in the United States, the Délegation générale pour l'armement (DGA) of the Ministry of Defence has concentrated technical activities in the field of information warfare at the Centre d'électronique de l'armement (CELAR). This centre employs some 900 experts in many scientific and technological areas, and has resources and capabilities with probably no equal on the continent. All CELAR activities are related to information warfare (guerre de l'information), defensive and offensive, and are divided into five tasks: weapon systems for electronic warfare, information security, information systems, telecommunications, and electronic components. CELAR analyses the threats, establishes the needs, and tests the proficiency and the limits of the systems and equipment. In particular, within the information security field of CELAR, the Centre de l'armement pour la sécurité des systémes d'information (CASSI), is responsible for the development of all security programmes and strategies in the Ministry of Defence and acts as a consultant for other ministries and governmental agencies. (18)

36. In Germany, the efforts of the Government and the Bundestag to address the problem of security in information technology led to the creation, in 1991, of a Federal Agency for Security in Information Technology (Bundesamt für Sicherheit in der Informationstechnik, or BSI). The BSI is responsible for assessing the risks and developing the criteria, tools and procedures to assure the security of vital information systems. However, according to German officials, the BSI has concentrated its work on the non-military aspects of information warfare. In other words, it has considered the possibility of attacks to information systems only in the civilian field. At the same time, the German military has conducted some studies on information warfare and has recently initiated a new one, called "2020", which will consider the future evolution of the topic. Recently, a working group has been created at a federal level to draft a policy paper on "Information Warfare and IT Security", aimed at reaching a better co-ordination within the civilian and military fields.

37. The UK Ministry of Defence has addressed, in various areas, the problems related to information warfare, recognising that "the potential vulnerabilities and risks arising from 'information warfare' go much wider than the Armed Forces and the defence infrastructure" (19). The MoD is therefore known to be working with other areas of Government, allies and suppliers of key services to co-ordinate security policies and find technical solutions to protect the nation's infrastructure.

38. Other countries, such as Finland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland have taken initiatives similar to those of the United States. Australia, Canada and Israel are investing in studies of defensive measures and approaches (20). NATO has recently analysed the threats of information warfare attacks and given indications to member states. For the moment, the most relevant studies conducted by the Alliance on the subject are classified.

IV. INFORMATION WARFARE OR SIMPLY INFORMATION SECURITY?

39. As it is often the case with extensively debated issues, some defence analysts and information security experts are doubting the actual size of the information warfare threat as it is presented by the media and even by some official reports. They contend that newspapers and magazines report stories about dangerous viruses, violated military websites and crackers penetrating corporate information systems in distorted and exaggerated ways. Some also list errors and overstatements included in official documents and defence studies. Fairness demands that we also consider these points of view, and below we summarise the most salient issues.

40. In 1997, for instance, a US government commission, that included former directors of the CIA and the National Reconnaissance Office, warned against a virus contained in an e-mail message entitled "Penpal Greetings". According to the commission's report, the virus "could infect the hard-drive and destroy all data present". Moreover, the virus was reportedly "self-replicating" and "would automatically forward itself to any e-mail address stored in the recipient's in-box." According to many computer security analysts, the report was wrong and the Penpal virus was in fact a hoax. However, more recently several viruses spreading by e-mail could nonetheless perform extremely destructive actions. (21)

41. In March 1999, a type of macro virus propagating by e-mail called Melissa damaged, according to many journalistic sources, more than 100,000 computers. Hidden within a file of a popular word processing software, Melissa affected its security settings, rendering personal computers vulnerable to further attacks. While some defence leaders, experts on terrorism, lawmen and software executives hailed "another warning siren of the vulnerability of our networks" or even "a demonstration of what an electronic Pearl Harbor might look like", most computer security people defined Melissa as "just another dangerous virus", no more sophisticated than prior ones using the identical modus operandi. Moreover, they contended, Melissa (although very costly to many businesses) had no noticeable effect on Internet use or stock markets or electronic commerce. They also noted that most persons using the web on a regular basis would not open an unknown file attachment received by e-mail, especially if reportedly it contained a list of pornographic websites. (22)

42. But computer scientists and IT security experts are not only highlighting general misinformation and myths about viruses. They contest as well the alarming figures suggesting that the Pentagon and other US vital infrastructures are under almost permanent attack by crackers or cyberterrorists. They admit that malefactors can break into military and civilian web servers, and maybe even cause serious damage, but that it is far from representing an "electronic Pearl Harbor" for the United States. As Kevin Ziese, the computer scientist who led the Rome Laboratories investigation, and other experts put it, these break-ins can be defined as the virtual equivalent of a "kid walking into the Pentagon cafeteria." (23)

43. Equating computer viruses and hacker software with weapons of mass destruction, many analysts insist, is overreaching. And classifying them as such would be like considering teen hackers or virus creators equivalent to terrorists or "rogue" states. The recent attacks on the Alliance's information system during the Kosovo crisis, according to these sources, might have proved just that. In fact, they report that computer security experts in the US Department of Defense were "completely unimpressed by whatever it was Serbian hackers did during the Yugoslavian war. The worst it did is make the NATO administrator of the site work a little harder. It didn't have any impact on the Yugoslavian war at all." (24)

44. With regard to the supposedly frightening results of the "Eligible Receiver" exercise, which are still considered "sensitive information" by the Pentagon, many object that they should be opened up to an independent audit. Until then, computer scientists declare that they will remain extremely sceptical. Moreover, they say the Pentagon's position is in stark contrast to the wide-open discussions of computer security vulnerabilities that reign on the Internet.

45. According to William M. Arkin, an army veteran, defence analyst and editor of US Military Online, the excessive secrecy in the Pentagon's attitude towards information security reflects a basic misjudgement of the power of the Internet and the ability of the military to control it. A directive issued on 24 September 1998 by Deputy Defense Secretary John Hamre instructed all military services and agencies to "ensure national security is not compromised or personnel placed at risk" by information available on military websites. In fact, the Pentagon has for years had policies that required just that, and therefore only unclassified information has ever been made available on the Internet. John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists agrees with Arkin that the DoD issued this new policy out of "a desire to show vigilance, coupled with a profound lack of understanding of information and computer security", rather than because of any new threats coming from the Internet. (25)

46. Many experts and scientists are critical of the approach taken by some of the Pentagon leaders not because they believe there are no threats coming from cyberspace, but because they feel those threats might have been overstated or mystified through what they call "info-warrior rhetoric". Computer security analysts, who have been working on these problems for years, have the impression that "information warfare" might just be old wine in new bottles. In fact, many of the activities now classified under this definition could be traditional intelligence work, intelligence analyses through the Internet or psychological operations and deception. For instance, the US Air Force Information Warfare Center (AFIWC, part of the Air Intelligence Agency) in San Antonio and other similar organisations are the equivalent of computer emergency response teams, and the military and civilians employed in them are all computer security specialists.

47. In spite of these reservations, it is clear that there are many serious threats. In sum, according to George Smith, editor of The Crypt Newsletter, an Internet publication dealing with computer security for computer analysts: "It is far from proven that the country [i.e., the United States] is at the mercy of possible devastating computerized attacks. On the other hand, even the small number of examples of malicious behaviour demonstrate that computer security issues in our increasingly technological world will be of primary concern well into the foreseeable future."

V. CONCLUSION

48. It is clear, even from the words of the most sceptical analysts, that the security of information systems must be a high priority for any nation. With the increasing dependence on information technologies, all our vital infrastructures are potentially vulnerable to some sort of external attack. Even if experts disagree on the extent and the nature of the threat, we need nonetheless to adopt measures to strengthen the protection of our information systems.

49. The first priority should be to seek objectivity in the assessment of the real threats. An independent group should be set up to provide such assessment, maybe at the international level. An example is provided by the G–8 High Tech Crime Group, a multilateral forum seeking to enhance transnational co-operation in investigating and prosecuting criminal misuse and exploitation of information systems. Parliaments and governments, as well as the industry, the scientific community and computer security experts should work within a similar group focused on information warfare threats in order to share their knowledge and competence and analyse the subject from different perspectives. A serious evaluation of the claims of computer security software and hardware producers could be the first task of such a group.

50. Programmes to raise public awareness and encourage education in the field of computer security and infrastructure protection would be extremely useful, and they should cover all possible audiences. They should include conferences, university studies, presentations at industry associations and professional societies, and sponsorship of graduate studies and programmes. In addition, research efforts are needed to both substantially improve and deploy more widely the existing technology. In particular, new capabilities for detection and identification of intrusion and improved simulation and modelling capability to understand the effects upon interconnected and interdependent infrastructures would be beneficial.

51. The law has to keep pace with the development of new technologies. Parliaments can play an important role in reconsidering and readapting the laws regulating infrastructure protection and information systems assurance. The United States can provide some good examples in terms of both statutes and case law and the Justice Department has a section devoted to this area. However, due to the open and global nature of the Internet, this effort should involve computer security experts and legislators internationally. In fact, creating a specific international set of rules or conventions is an essential prerequisite for establishing a credible and efficient Internet economy.

52. Intelligence can also contribute to a clearer understanding of the new threats of the information age in terms of actors, motives, and capabilities. Of course, the traditional intelligence work and organisation, developed during the Cold War, must be adapted to the new environment. Intelligence officials in all nations must reconsider their methods for information acquisition and rely on new sources. National agencies must also start recruiting special talents familiar with the new threats, such as skilled computer analysts with a direct experience of hacking methods.

53. Since most experts agree that commercial information systems are now more vulnerable to external attacks, it is essential to foster public-private co-operation. Much of the information that private companies need to protect their information systems may be available from the defence, intelligence and law enforcement communities. Often the private sector can better identify, understand and evaluate the threats. In many countries, co-operation between industries and their governments could be extremely helpful to share "information and techniques related to risk management assessment, including incident reports, identification of weak spots, plans and technology to prevent attacks and disruptions, and plans for how to recover from them." Of course, public-private collaboration also has its limits, such as classified and secret materials or proprietary and competitively sensitive information.

54. Finally, in most Western countries, but particularly in the United States, the military should address many questions concerning the effective role of the information warfare programmes in their general policy. Programmes like those going under the definition of "Revolution in Military Affairs" (RMA) have already tried to assess the future impact that the use of information technology could have on weapon systems and on military organisation and strategy. However, the US military still needs to clarify its policy about the options for deterring an attack on vital information systems and the possible use of offensive information warfare. The link between information warfare and other military strategies should be better articulated: for instance, would it be possible to respond to an information warfare attack with conventional forces? Moreover, the possibility that the United States (or any other Western country) would develop and deploy offensive information warfare techniques has not been adequately discussed in public forums. This can be essential in order to build a national and possibly international consensus about the role of offensive information warfare and to clearly define its policies of use.

Attacks to private corporations (see para.16) might be included only if conducted as part of political or strategic offensive. The limit to "Internet and other networked information systems" helps avoid confusion with espionage cases involving the use (or misuse) of restricted or secret information systems and/or data bases (such as recent alleged espionage at DOE weapons laboratories). In summary, then, this is a very important issue, something that we must address not only for security for individuals' privacy, not only for privacy and security and integrity in business communications, but also as a means of national security. I urge a "yes" vote on this bill. I look forward to the President signing this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) for his leadership on this issue and on so many issues on the Committee on Science. He has been one of those voices that sees problems before they present themselves to the rest of the country and has been an outstanding leader on this and many other issues.

I also want to reiterate my thanks to Chairman BOEHLERT, Ranking Member HALL, the committee staff and my own staff member, Chris Schloesser, for their good work on this.

Coincidentally, a few weeks ago I was messing around with my own computer system and I took the hardware firewall off that I have. I also have a software firewall. During a brief 15-minute period, five attacks from outside were recorded. I say that to mention that it is not just government doing its part to provide increased funds, the general public will need to increase their level of security and awareness that if they have permanent on-line connections and as broadband becomes more readily available, the general public has an important role to play because those who wish to do our country harm will try to get to our secure infrastructure through just average citizens' systems and through the network there.

I also want to underscore what the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) said about the cost of this legislation. It may sound expensive, and indeed it is, but the cost of a coordinated attack on our information infrastructure would be vast indeed. I would ask people to entertain the possibility of what might happen were there to be not only an attack from terrorists such as we saw on September 11 but if that were coordinated with a cyber attack on our air traffic control system or on our emergency communication systems. In an instance like that where information flow would be critical and would mean the life or death of thousands of Americans, a cyber attack would amplify exponentially the cost of a more traditional terrorist kind of attack. This money will be well spent. By spending it today, we will prepare our country for the kinds of risks we may face tomorrow.

I again urge passage of H.R. 3394. I commend those who have worked so hard to achieve this point. I thank the gentleman for his leadership.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In response, I want to thank the gentleman from Washington for his very perceptive comments on this issue. One important additional point to note is that the country with the most sophisticated computer systems is also the most vulnerable to information attacks and cyber attacks. Therefore, we have the most to gain by engaging in studies of cyber security to protect our extremely advanced systems.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Cyber Security Research and Development Act, H.R. 3394. The bill is substantially the same as the version which was developed in a bipartisan manner by the Science Committee and passed by the House early in the current session.

H.R. 3394 fills an important gap in current information technology research programs—namely, the need for improved security for our computers and digital communication networks.

I want to congratulate Science Committee Chairman BOEHLERT for his leadership and thank him for working with me in developing the bill.

I also want to acknowledge my colleague, Mr. BAIRD, for his important contribution to this legislation. The provisions pertaining to the National Institute of Standards and Technology originated in his bill, H.R. 3316.

Many systems that are vital to the Nation, such as transportation, the electric power grid, and financial services, rely on the transfer of information through computer networks. The trend in recent years of interconnecting computer networks has had the unintended consequence of making access to these critical systems easier for criminals, and potentially for terrorists.

As a result, there have been an increased number of assaults on network systems. Computer viruses, attacks by computer hackers, and electronic identification theft have become commonplace.

The tragic events of last year have made us realize just how vulnerable we are to attack. We are beginning to understand the critical need to protect the Nation's physical and electronic infrastructure.

Testimony before the Science Committee has highlighted a serious obstacle to achieving this goal: there are too few scientists and engineers engaged in research on information security and too little funding for security research. And as federal agencies and private industry have found, there are few people with specialized computer security skills.

H.R. 3394 establishes substantial new research programs at the National Science Foundation and the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The goal of both these multi-year programs is not only to advance computer security research, but also to expand the community of computer security researchers.

These programs will support graduate students, post-doctoral researchers, and senior researchers, while encouraging stronger ties between universities and industry. This industry linkage will provide a reality check for research priorities and will facilitate transfer of research results into new products and services.

The research and education programs at the two agencies will be reinforcing rather than duplicative. Each agency will use a different approach for the competitive review of research applications and for managing its research program. NSF and NIST have complementary linkages to the academic and industrial research communities, which will ensure a broad and varied research portfolio between the two programs.

Finally, the bill tasks the two agencies to formally coordinate their activities, and directs the Office of Science and Technology Policy to ensure that all the research activities supported under the bill are coordinated with any government-wide cyber security research effort.

Before I close, I would like to make a few comments about Sections 16 and 17, which were added to this legislation by the Senate. While I don't disagree with the objectives of these provisions, I am concerned about the procedures and the haste with which they were added to this bill. There was little consultation about the inclusion of Sec. 16 and Sec. 17 among the Members involved in drafting this legislation. In addition, there was no consultation with the university research community or the National Science Foundation, which will be affected by these provisions. The haste with which these provisions were drafted has resulted in language that is vague and unclear.

Section 16 could be interpreted as forbidding the National Science Foundation from awarding grants or fellowships to institutions of higher education or non-profit institutions that materially fail to comply with the record-keeping requirements under the Immigration and Nationality Act and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Responsibility Act. However, the record-keeping requirements for these laws have not yet been promulgated. Therefore, the effective date for this section cannot be the date of enactment. If the research performed under these grants is crucial to enhanced information security, the grants program should commence immediately; the compliance requirements should take effect only after the date of promulgation of the reporting and record-keeping requirements and after appropriate notice has been given to the affected institutions.

Section 17 requires the Director of the National Science Foundation to submit a report to Congress ensuring that awards made under this Act are given to individuals and institutions that are in compliance with the Immigration and Nationality Act. The National Science Foundation has neither the expertise nor responsibilities related to compliance with the Immigration and Nationality Act. I assume that the Department of State and the Immigration and Naturalization Service will ultimately certify compliance with the Act. Therefore, section 17 should only require the NSF report to Congress on information it obtains from State and INS. This section should not require the NSF Director to commission a duplicative study to secure information already held by State and INS.

I have discussed these issues with Chairman BOEHLERT and we are in agreement in our interpretation of these provisions and the process.

Mr. Speaker, the key to ensuring information security for the long-term is to establish a vigorous, creative and sustained basic research effort focused on the security of networked information systems. H.R. 3394 will make a major contribution toward accomplishing this goal. I commend this measure to my colleagues and ask for their support for its final passage by the House.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 3394.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GREAT LAKES AND LAKE CHAMPLAIN ACT OF 2002

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill (H.R. 1070) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to carry out projects and conduct research for remediation of sediment contamination in areas of concern in the Great Lakes, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendments:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Great Lakes and Lake Champlain Act of 2002".

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

TITLE I—GREAT LAKES

Sec. 101. Short title.
Sec. 102. Report on remedial action plans.
Sec. 103. Remediation of sediment contamination in areas of concern in the Great Lakes.
Sec. 104. Relationship to Federal and State authorities.
Sec. 105. Authorization of appropriations.
Sec. 106. Research and development program.

TITLE II—LAKE CHAMPLAIN

Sec. 201. Short title.
Sec. 202. Lake Champlain Basin Program.

TITLE III—MISCELLANEOUS

Sec. 301. Phase II storm water program.
Sec. 302. Preservation of reporting requirements.
Sec. 303. Repeal.
Sec. 304. Cross Harbor Freight Movement Project EIS, New York City.
Sec. 305. Center for Brownfields Excellence.
Sec. 306. Louisiana Highway 1026 Project, Louisiana.

TITLE I—GREAT LAKES

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Great Lakes Legacy Act of 2002".

SEC. 102. REPORT ON REMEDIAL ACTION PLANS.

Section 118(c)(3) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(c)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(E) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report on such actions, time periods, and resources as are necessary to fulfill the duties of the Agency relating to oversight of Remedial Action Plans under—

"(i) this paragraph; and

"(ii) the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement.".

SEC. 103. REMEDIATION OF SEDIMENT CONTAMINATION IN AREAS OF CONCERN IN THE GREAT LAKES.

"(12) REMEDIATION OF SEDIMENT CONTAMINATION IN AREAS OF CONCERN.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with this paragraph, the Administrator, acting through the Program Office, may carry out projects that meet the requirements of subparagraph (B).

"(B) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—A project meets the requirements of this subparagraph if the project is to be carried out in an area of concern located wholly or partially in the United States and the project—

"(i) monitors or evaluates contaminated sediment;

"(ii) subject to subparagraph (D), implements a plan to remediate contaminated sediment; or

"(iii) prevents further or renewed contamination of sediment.

"(C) PRIORITY.—In selecting projects to carry out under this paragraph, the Administrator shall give priority to a project that—

"(i) constitutes remedial action for contaminated sediment;

"(ii)(I) has been identified in a Remedial Action Plan submitted under paragraph (3); and

"(II) is ready to be implemented;

"(iii) will use an innovative approach, technology, or technique that may provide greater environmental benefits, or equivalent environmental benefits at a reduced cost; or

"(iv) includes remediation to be commenced not later than 1 year after the date of receipt of funds for the project.

"(D) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may not carry out a project under this paragraph for remediation of contaminated sediments located in an area of concern—

"(i) if an evaluation of remedial alternatives for the area of concern has not been conducted, including a review of the short-term and long-term effects of the alternatives on human health and the environment; or

"(ii) if the Administrator determines that the area of concern is likely to suffer significant further or renewed contamination from existing sources of pollutants causing sediment contamination following completion of the project.

"(E) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The non-Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under this paragraph shall be at least 35 percent.

"(ii) IN-KIND CONTRIBUTIONS.—The non-Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under this paragraph may include the value of in-kind services contributed by a non-Federal sponsor.

"(iii) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of a project carried out under this paragraph—

"(I) may include monies paid pursuant to, or the value of any in-kind service performed under, and administrative order on consent or judicial consent decree; but

"(II) may not include any funds paid pursuant to, or the value of any in-kind service performed under, a unilateral administrative order or court order.

"(iv) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the operation and maintenance of a project carried out under this paragraph shall be 100 percent.

"(F) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—The Administrator may not carry out a project under this paragraph unless the non-Federal sponsor enters into such agreements with the Administrator as the Administrator may require to ensure that the non-Federal sponsor will maintain its aggregate expenditures from all other sources for remediation programs in the area of concern in which the project is located at or above the average level of such expenditures in the 2 fiscal years preceding the date on which the project is initiated.

"(G) COORDINATION.—In carrying out projects under this paragraph, the Administrator shall coordinate with the Secretary of the Army, and with the Governors of States in which the projects are located, to ensure that Federal and State assistance for remediation in areas of concern is used as efficiently as practicable.

"(H) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In addition to other amounts authorized under this section, there is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $50,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.

"(ii) AVAILABILITY.—Funds made available under clause (i) shall remain available until expended.

"(13) PUBLIC INFORMATION PROGRAM.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator, acting through the Program Office and in coordination with States, Indian tribes, local governments, and other entities, may carry out a public information program to provide information relating to the remediation of contaminated sediment to the public in areas of concern that are located wholly or partially in the United States.

"(B) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $1,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.".

SEC. 104. RELATIONSHIP TO FEDERAL AND STATE AUTHORITIES.

Section 118(g) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(g)) is amended—

(1) by striking "construed to affect" and inserting the following: "construed—

"(1) to affect";

(2) by striking the period at the end and inserting "or"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) to affect any other Federal or State authority that is being used or may be used to facilitate the cleanup and protection of the Great Lakes.".

SEC. 105. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 118(h) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(h)) is amended—

(1) by striking the second sentence; and

(2) in the first sentence—

(A) by striking "not to exceed $11,000,000" and inserting "not to exceed—

"(1) $11,000,000";

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

"(2) such sums as are necessary for each of fiscal years 1992 through 2003; and

"(3) $25,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.".

SEC. 106. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In coordination with other Federal, State, and local officials, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may conduct research on the development and use of innovative approaches, technologies, and techniques for the remediation of sediment contamination in areas of concern that are located wholly or partially in the United States.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to amounts authorized under other laws, there is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $3,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.

(2) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

TITLE II—LAKE CHAMPLAIN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Daniel Patrick Moynihan Lake Champlain Basin Program Act of 2002".

SEC. 202. LAKE CHAMPLAIN BASIN PROGRAM.

Section 120 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1270) is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and all that follows through "There is established" in subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"SEC. 120. LAKE CHAMPLAIN BASIN PROGRAM.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established";

(2) in subsection (a) (as amended by paragraph (1)), by adding at the end the following:

"(2) IMPLEMENTATION.—The Administrator—

"(A) may provide support to the State of Vermont, the State of New York, and the New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission for the implementation of the Lake Champlain Basin Program; and

"(B) shall coordinate actions of the Environmental Protection Agency under subparagraph (A) with the actions of other appropriate Federal agencies.";

(3) in subsection (d), by striking "(1)";

(4) in subsection (e)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking "(hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Plan')"; and

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (D), by striking "and" at the end;

(ii) in subparagraph (E), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

"(F) be reviewed and revised, as necessary, at least once every 5 years, in consultation with the Administrator and other appropriate Federal agencies.";

(5) in subsection (f)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking "the Management Conference," and inserting "participants in the Lake Champlain Basin Program,"; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking "development of the Plan" and all that follows and inserting "development and implementation of the Plan.";

(6) in subsection (g)—

(A) by striking "(g)" and all that follows through "the term" and inserting the following:

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) LAKE CHAMPLAIN BASIN PROGRAM.—The term 'Lake Champlain Basin Program' means the coordinated efforts among the Federal Government, State governments, and local governments to implement the Plan.

"(2) LAKE CHAMPLAIN DRAINAGE BASIN.—The term";

(B) in paragraph (2) (as designated by subparagraph (A))—

(i) by inserting "Hamilton," after "Franklin,"; and

(ii) by inserting "Bennington," after "Rutland,"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) PLAN.—The term 'Plan' means the plan developed under subsection (e).";

(7) by striking subsection (h) and inserting the following:

"(h) NO EFFECT ON CERTAIN AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section—

"(1) affects the jurisdiction or powers of—

"(A) any department or agency of the Federal Government or any State government; or

"(B) any international organization or entity related to Lake Champlain created by treaty or memorandum to which the United States is a signatory;

"(2) provides new regulatory authority for the Environmental Protection Agency; or

"(3) affects section 304 of the Great Lakes Critical Programs Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–596; 33 U.S.C. 1270 note)."; and

(8) in subsection (i)—

(A) by striking "section $2,000,000" and inserting "section—

"(1) $2,000,000";

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

"(2) such sums as are necessary for each of fiscal years 1996 through 2003; and

"(3) $11,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.".

TITLE III—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 301. PHASE II STORM WATER PROGRAM.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for fiscal year 2003, funds made available to a State to carry out nonpoint source management programs under section 319 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1329) may, at the option of the State, be used to carry out projects and activities in the State relating to the development or implementation of phase II of the storm water program of the Environmental Protection Agency established by the rule entitled "National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System—Regulations for Revision of the Water Pollution Control Program Addressing Storm Water Discharges", promulgated by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency on December 8, 1999 (64 Fed. Reg. 68722).

SECTION 302. PRESERVATION OF REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3003(a)(1) of the Federal Reports Elimination and Sunset Act of 1995 (31 U.S.C. 1113 note; Public Law 104–66) does not apply to any report required to be submitted under any of the following provisions of law:

(1) EFFECTS OF POLLUTION ON ESTUARIES OF THE UNITED STATES.—Section 104(n)(3) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1254(n)(3)).

(2) IMPLEMENTATION OF GREAT LAKES WATER QUALITY AGREEMENT OF 1978.—Section 118(c)(10) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(c)(10)).

(3) COMPREHENSIVE CONSERVATION AND MANAGEMENT PLAN FOR LONG ISLAND SOUND.—Section 119(c)(7) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1269(c)(7)).

(4) LEVEL B PLAN ON ALL RIVER BASINS.—Section 209(b) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1289(b)).

(5) STATE REPORTS ON WATER QUALITY OF ALL NAVIGABLE WATERS.—Section 305(b) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1315(b)).

(6) EXEMPTIONS FROM WATER POLLUTION CONTROL REQUIREMENTS FOR EXECUTIVE AGENCIES.—Section 313(a) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1323(a)).

(7) STATUS OF WATER QUALITY IN UNITED STATES LAKES.—Section 314(a) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1324(a)).

(9) REPORTS ON CONTRACTS ENTERED INTO RELATING TO PROCUREMENT FROM VIOLATORS OF WATER QUALITY STANDARDS.—Section 508(e) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1368(e)).

(10) NATIONAL REQUIREMENTS AND COSTS OF WATER POLLUTION CONTROL.—Section 516 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1375).

(b) OTHER REPORTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Effective November 10, 1998, section 501 of the Federal Reports Elimination Act of 1998 (Public Law 105–362; 112 Stat. 3283) is amended by striking subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d).

(2) APPLICABILITY.—The Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1254(n)(3)) shall be applied and administered on and after the date of enactment of this Act as if the amendments made by subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) of section 501 of the Federal Reports Elimination Act of 1998 (Public Law 105–362; 112 Stat. 3283) had not enacted.

SEC. 303. REPEAL.

Title VII of Public Law 105–78 (20 U.S.C. 50 note; 111 Stat. 1524) (other than section 702) is repealed.

SEC. 304. CROSS HARBOR FREIGHT MOVEMENT PROJECT EIS, NEW YORK CITY.

Section 1602 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 305) is amended in item number 1320 of the table by striking "Reconstruct 79th Street Traffic Circle, New York City" and inserting "Cross Harbor Freight Movement Project EIS, New York City".

SEC. 305. CENTER FOR BROWNFIELDS EXCELLENCE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—To demonstrate the transfer of technology and expertise from the Federal Government to the private sector, and to demonstrate the effectiveness of the reuse by the private sector of properties and assets that the Federal Government has determined, through applicable statutes and processes, that it no longer needs, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall make a grant to not less than one eligible sponsor to establish and operate a center for Brownfields Excellence.

"(b) RESPONSIBILITIES OF CENTER.—The responsibilities of a center established under this section shall include the transfer of technology and expertise in the redevelopment of abandoned or underutilized property that may have environmental contamination and the dissemination of information regarding successful models for such redevelopment.

"(c) PRIORITY.—In carrying out this section, the Administrator shall give priority consideration to a grant application submitted by an eligible sponsor that meets the following criteria:

(1) Demonstrated ability to facilitate the return of property that may have environmental contamination to productive use.

(2) Demonstrated ability to facilitate public-private partnerships and regional cooperation.

(3) Capability to provide leadership in making both national and regional contributions to addressing the problem of underutilized or abandoned properties.

(4) Demonstrated ability to work with Federal departments and agencies to facilitate reuse by the private sector of properties and assets no longer needed by the Federal Government.

"(d) ELIGIBLE SPONSOR DEFINED.—In this section, the term "eligible sponsor" means a regional nonprofit community redevelopment organization assisting an area that—

(1) has jobs due to the closure of a private sector of Federal installation; and

(2) as a result, has an underemployed workforce and underutilized or abandoned properties.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,000,000.

SEC. 306. LOUISIANA HIGHWAY 1026 PROJECT, LOUISIANA.

Section 1602 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (112 Stat. 272) is amended in item number 426 of the table by striking "Louisiana Highway 16" and inserting the following: "Louisiana Highway 1026".]

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to provide assistance for remediation of sediment contamination in areas of concern, to authorize assistance for research and development of innovative technologies for such remediation, and to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act and the Water Resources Development Act of 2000 to modify provisions relating to the Lake Champlain basin, and for other purposes.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN).

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge all Members to concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 1070, the Great Lakes Legacy Act of 2002. On September 4 of this year, the House passed H.R. 1070 by voice vote. On October 17, the Senate passed this bill, with an amendment, by unanimous consent.

Title I of the Senate amendment is the House-passed version of the Great Lakes Legacy Act of 2002 with a few minor and technical changes. Industrialization over the past 200 years has contaminated sediments in the Great Lakes. This sediment contamination can limit some uses of the lakes, particularly fishing, when contaminants get into the food chain. As a result, many of the Great Lakes are under advisories warning people not to eat the fish that they catch. Unfortunately, 200 years of contamination is difficult to reverse and sediment cleanups can be very controversial. Little progress has thus been made.

The Great Lakes Legacy Act will help overcome the obstacles to cleanup by encouraging voluntary, consensus-based cleanup actions that will be carried out by the EPA in partnership with non-Federal sponsors. The Great Lakes Legacy Act also will help reduce the controversy surrounding sediment cleanups by ensuring that any cleanup actions funded by this legislation will truly benefit human health and the environment. As noted in the report of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure accompanying H.R. 1070, projects should be selected in accordance with a risk management strategy. In addition, the legislation requires the EPA to make sure that the short- and long-term effects of remedial alternatives have been evaluated before selecting a cleanup project. This requirement will help give the public confidence that a cleanup action will not cause more harm than good. For example, if a cleanup alternative involves dredging, we can be confident that the EPA has considered whether dredging at that site will stir up contaminants, causing more harm than good to human health and the environment.

I want to commend the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) and his colleagues for working with various stakeholders from the Great Lakes. They have reached a great compromise on this that has kept everyone happy and thus has been able to advance this consensus approach to Great Lakes remediation.

Title II of the Senate amendment authorizes assistance to State and local governments to improve the quality of Lake Champlain. Lack Champlain is not one of the Great Lakes and is not eligible for assistance under title I of H.R. 1070. Current law authorizes the EPA to help State and local governments develop a plan for the restoration of Lake Champlain. Title II of H.R. 1070 expands this existing authority to allow the EPA to also provide assistance to implement projects recommended under the plan.

Nothing in this title provides any assistance for the regulatory activities of any agency or provides any new regulatory authority for the EPA. We expect the Lake Champlain Basin Program to be a model of community-based environmental restoration, giving local governments and other local entities the maximum input into the projects and activities that are carried out with assistance provided under this legislation.

Finally, title III of the Senate amendment includes miscellaneous provisions, including language that will reinstate several important Clean Water Act reports that help Congress oversee this program.

This is very important legislation, affecting one of the greatest and largest bodies of freshwater in this world, and I urge all Members to support the Senate amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of H.R. 1070, the Great Lakes and Lake Champlain Act of 2002, and I acknowledge with great gratitude the splendid leadership of the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN), the subcommittee chairman, who is always judicious, thoughtful, considerate, supportive, has a grasp of the issues, and proceeds with great confidence and vigor in pursuing the committee's work. I also want to acknowledge the splendid and persistent initiative of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS), who always brings his scientific bent to the work of the committee and particularly the work of the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment, and for whose great commitment to cleaning up the waters of the Great Lakes and keeping them clean I have sincere admiration and appreciation.

As the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN) already indicated, we have worked out relatively minor differences that existed between the House version and the version of the other body, and our approval today clears the bill for the President.

I grew up in the watershed of the Great Lakes, not along the shores of Lake Superior but along the waters that drain into Lake Superior, and much of my service in the Congress has been concerned with both my work as a staff director for my predecessor and staff director of the then Committee on Public Works and Transportation, and as a member, I have made protecting this extraordinary resource of freshwater one of my very top priorities and commitments.

We have to remember that the Great Lakes, all five of them, represent one-fifth of all the available freshwater on the face of the Earth. We do not count the frozen freshwater at the poles. And the magnitude of Lake Superior is such that the bottom 125 feet of Lake Superior are 125 feet below sea level. That is an immense body of water. It turns over once in 500 years. Whatever we put into that lake is going to be there for a long time. We have to be careful, extremely careful, not only about what directly goes into Lake Superior because it then goes into all the other lakes but Lake Michigan, because the effect will be so persistent and so long lasting.

We also have to be careful about what comes in from the air. Air depositions into Lake Superior come from as far away as Central America. DDT can be found on the shores of Lake Superior and other Great Lakes carried by the upper atmospheric winds, as can Toxaphene, which is used as an agent to suppress the boll weevils in cotton country, and that atmospheric deposition has been found in a lake on Isle Royale above the level of the waters of Lake Superior.

I mentioned these because the persistent toxic substances that are found in the Great Lakes, both in the bottom sediments, in the plants, taken up by the benthic organisms, eaten by the fish, then consumed by people, those toxic substances move up the food chain, and it is simply a tragedy that 100 percent of the near shore waters of the Great Lakes and their connecting tributaries are under fish consumption advisories for PCBs, dioxins, mercury. Studies continue to show, as they did years ago when I chaired the Subcommittee on Investigations and Oversight and held hearings on the U.S.-Canada Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement and the Great Lakes Water Quality Act, that if one lives anywhere in America, one probably has five parts per billion PCBs in their body, but if one lives within 20 miles of one of the Great Lakes and eat fish once a week, they most likely have 440 parts per billion PCBs in their body. That is 20 times the average outside of the Great Lakes.

Dr. Waylon Swain, researcher at the University of Michigan, the home State of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS), testified at hearings that I held reporting on tests he conducted on his 16-year-old daughter. He analyzed her fatty tissue, calculated the level of PCBs, and then did a computer projection on her progeny to determine how long it would take just for natural processes without further introduction of PCBs into the food chain of that daughter and her offspring. It would take six generations for the PCBs to disappear from the bloodline. That is such a sobering thought that as we go about taking action on this legislation, this should not be considered just another bill that we pass. This is legislation we are passing that fully applied, vigorously enforced, vigorously carried out, will vastly improve quality of life for future generations.

Twenty years ago we, the U.S. and Canada, identified 43 areas of concern in the Great Lakes. Thirty-one of those are wholly or mostly in U.S. waters. And even though we have removed 1,300,000 cubic yards of bottom sediment, mostly from the harbors, those are mostly harbors, and have remediated that sedimentation, the challenge is still there. The challenge is huge. We have not resolved the problem yet. And there are 36 million people living along the waters of the Great Lakes and in the watershed; therefore, far more responsibility on us to be more careful with these waters and with the bottom sediments.

I was very encouraged when then President Clinton included in his budget request $50 million for remediation of contaminated sediments, and I introduced legislation to authorize a program to vigorously advance the remediation. Unfortunately the 50 million did not get appropriated, the bill did not pass. What we have today is an advanced version of that legislation for which again I am very appreciative of the gentlemen from Michigan and of Tennessee. We do in this legislation provide that $50 million annual authorization for EPA to carry out projects to address sediment contamination. Priority will go to projects that actively address contaminated sediments that have been identified in the remedial action plans for those areas of concern and for innovative approaches, technologies, and techniques for dealing with contaminated sediments. I have been very keenly interested in one that has been used on the bottom sediments in the Duluth harbor using mining technique in nonmagnetic ore beneficiation. A process is used called media flotation where the nonferrous material settles out and the lesser material is carried off, they can do this work for on the order of a dollar to $2 a cubic yard. Early prices on remediation of bottom sediments in the Great Lakes centered around $400 to $600 a cubic yard. I thought if we could bring mining and environmental technology together, we could make an advance and in fact did. It is not the dollar or $2 a cubic yard but $30 or $40 which is still a factor of 10 less than early estimates. We have now succeeded in cleaning up large volumes of toxic substance-containing sediment, and this cleaned material is now being used for parkland and for beach nourishment and is being used in reclaiming areas along the waterfront in Duluth for other activities that are in fact environmentally friendly.

I expect this project to continue with great success as more is learned about the mechanics of separating toxic substances out from bottom sediments, and I have no doubt that the legislation before us will move vigorously in the direction that we appointed with this bill and that EPA should have no reticence whatever in moving ahead so long as we provide the appropriation to follow up on the funding authority.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I had the privilege of chairing the Subcommittee on Aviation for 6 years under the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) and now the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment for 2 years under the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG). Both have been great, great leaders for our committee, really outstanding chairmen, and we have many wonderful members. But I always am so very impressed, in fact at times even amazed at the knowledge that the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) our ranking member, has on the issues that come before our committee, and I think there are very few Members in this body who are more dedicated to the work that comes out of a committee than the gentleman is to the work that comes out of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and I just wanted to express once again, as I have before, my very deep appreciation and respect and admiration for him, and he has shown that once again on this bill. And I do agree with him. He is correct in saying this is not just another bill. The lack of controversy about this bill should not be any indication of its importance. As I mentioned a moment ago and as the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) mentioned, it has almost one-fifth of the surface freshwater in the world in the Great Lakes and I think 95 percent of the U.S. surface freshwater. But this bill would not be before us today if it were not for the great and dedicated work of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN) for yielding me this time. I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for his very generous comments and his erudite display of knowledge.

I agree with the gentleman from Tennessee's (Mr. DUNCAN) comments about the gentleman from Minnesota's (Mr. OBERSTAR) interest and his vast scope of knowledge. I would like to think that is a trait of people from Minnesota since I was born in Minnesota myself.

□ 1515

The gentleman from Tennessee has done an outstanding job of chairing the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment, and we have gotten some very good legislation out this year, not just this bill, but other bills relating to this, and I hope they all pass as this bill is doing.

Also I want to thank the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, for his support, and the excellent staff of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, who have worked very hard, even sometimes late evenings, to get this legislation through the House, over to the Senate, and now back before the House for final consideration.

America is often called the land of plenty, especially when it comes to our natural resources. Few places are blessed more than we are, and the Great Lakes stand out among our many blessings. These lakes provide us with fresh drinking water, habitat for wildlife, food for fisheries, recreation in and on the waterways, water for agriculture, and shipping lanes for economic growth. Millions of people live on the Great Lakes and millions more journey to the Great Lakes to vacation and enjoy all the splendors the lakes provide. Put simply, they are the heart and soul of Michigan.

I would also add to the statistic the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) gave that one-fifth of all the fresh water in the world is contained in the Great Lakes. Even beyond that, the Great Lakes alone contain 20 times more fresh water than all the other lakes and rivers in the United States combined; twenty times more than all the others. That is an immense amount of fresh water.

The legislation before us today is a marriage of two different bills, both of which represent a great step forward in protecting and restoring our environment in the Great Lakes Basin. Title I of the legislation is the Great Lakes Legacy Act of 2002, which I introduced in March 2001. The Senate accepted almost all of the legislation that passed the House on September 5, 2002. This title provides $50 million a year in grants to clean up contaminated sediments at "Areas of Concern" within the Great Lakes. These areas represent a legacy of pollution within the Great Lakes Basin, and it is high time that we clean them up or, in the words of the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), prevent any further contamination of future generations.

In addition, the legislation will foster technology research development by providing the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Research and Development $2 million a year. With this funding, we can find better, faster, cheaper ways to clean up these toxic hot spots.

In carrying out this program, the Great Lakes National Program Office, which is ultimately responsible for making these grants, should coordinate with the Office of Research and Development to ensure that grants are focused on technologies that will, in fact, improve the way we clean up these sites.

We also accepted some changes the Senate made to the Legacy Act that passed by the House. We have added a new public information program which is funded at $1 million a year. This will ensure that the public is informed about the progress, or lack of, in cleaning up areas of concern.

Lastly, we have added a provision that requires the Environmental Protection Agency to report back to Congress on what the Agency needs in order to oversee and implement the remedial action plans for Areas of Concern and other plans mandated by the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. These plans represent the steps that must be taken in order to restore the water quality of a polluted site.

Recently, the GAO reported that the EPA has not done an adequate job of overseeing the implementation of these plans by State and local entities. GAO pointed out that this lack of oversight has led to confusion and delays in getting cleanup actions underway.

Title II of the legislation was added by the Senate in order to continue and expand a program for Lake Champlain that was established under the Clean Water Act. Current law authorizes the EPA to help State and local governments develop a plan for the restoration of Lake Champlain. Title II expands this authority to allow EPA to also provide assistance to implement projects recommended under the plan. The ultimate goal of this plan, like the Legacy Act, is to improve water quality in the Great Lakes Basin.

We as a country have spent many years cleaning up our rivers and lakes on the surface, and we have made very significant progress. Now it is time to turn our attention to the bottoms of rivers and lakes and clean up the toxic sediments that are steadily leaching into the Great Lakes. The Great Lakes and Lake Champlain Act will give this problem the attention it deserves.

I thank the chairman, his staff and the ranking member for their assistance. I also thank groups that helped on this legislation, the Lake Michigan Federation, the Sierra Club and the Council of Great Lakes Industries. I also want to thank Susan Bodine, currently on the staff, who spent endless hours working with us on this issue over the past few years. Also I want to thank Ben Grumbles, who as a committee staffer worked on this legislation. Currently he is at the EPA working in their Office of Water. I am sure he will take great pleasure in implementing this bill.

I appreciate the support of all these individuals, and I urge all of my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, again I express my appreciation to the gentleman from Tennessee for his kind, thoughtful remarks, and to the gentleman from Michigan for his thoughtful comments as well, and to say that this is the finest example of how legislation ought to be done, where two parties get together and put aside partisanship and do things that are good for the country. We have a great tradition of doing so in our committee, and I look forward to continuing that tradition in the balance of this session and in the coming Congress.

I reexpress my appreciation to the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Alaska (Chairman YOUNG). Probably he is happy to see this bill passed so we stop badgering him about getting it to the floor and getting it moving.

I do want to join in observing that the additions made by the other body dealing with Lake Champlain and its cleanup are very important and very useful, but it should be emphasized that Lake Champlain is a good lake, it is not a Great Lake, with all respect to our colleagues in the other body who at one time tried to make it one of the Great Lakes by legislation. Now, that is kind of a reverse on the marriage injunction, that what God has joined together, let no man put asunder. Let no man create what God has not done. In this respect, we are happy to help out with Lake Champlain, and it is important, more important historically, I think, than geologically.

But this is good legislation. Let us now all resolve to work together to make sure we get the appropriations to carry out this legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that today we will send H.R. 1070, the Great Lakes Legacy Act of 2002, to President Bush to be enacted into law.

The Great Lakes are a vital resources for both the United States and Canada, but have been adversely impacted by over 200 years of development and industrialization.

This is not a situation that can be addressed by pointing fingers and suing people under the Superfund law or other liability statutes.

The solution provided by the Great Lakes Legacy Act is to address sediment contamination through cooperative efforts and public-private partnerships.

Cleanup activities funded by this bill can be carried out as separate projects or in conjunction with other efforts to clean up sediments—including efforts being carried out under consent decrees or consent orders authorized by other environmental laws and efforts of the Army Corps of Engineers.

This approach is supported by both industrial and environmental groups in the Great Lakes Basin.

The Senate amendments that is before the House today consists of the House text of H.R. 1070, as title I. Accordingly, the report of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee provides the relevant legislative history for this title.

The Senate amendment also includes, as title II, a limited authorization to EPA to support activities proposed by State and local governments to help restore Lake Champlain.

Finally, the Senate amendment includes, as title III, some miscellaneous items, including the restoration of various Clean Water Act reports to help my Committee's oversight of Clean Water Act programs.

I urge all members to support the Senate Amendment to H.R. 1070.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to H.R. 1070.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1070.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

REAL INTERSTATE DRIVER EQUITY ACT OF 2001

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill (H.R. 2546) to amend title 49, United States Code, to prohibit States from requiring a license or fee on account of the fact that a motor vehicle is providing interstate pre-arranged ground transportation service, and for other purposes.

Senate amendments: Page 3, strike out lines 1 through 7 and insert:

"(i) transportation by the motor carrier from one State, including intermediate stops, to a destination in another State; or

"(ii) transportation by the motor carrier from one State, including intermediate stops in another State, to a destination in the original State.

"(2) INTERMEDIATE STOP DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'intermediate stop', with respect to transportation by a motor carrier, means a pause in the transportation in order for one or more passengers to engage in personal or business activity, but only if the driver providing the transportation to such passenger or passengers does not, before resuming the transportation of such passenger (or at least 1 of such passengers), provide transportation to any other person not included among the passengers being transported when the pause began.

Page 3, line 8, strike out "(2)" and insert "(3)"

Page 3, line 22, after "to" insert "pre-licensing drug testing or"

Page 3, line 24, strike out all after "domiciled," down to and including "or" in line 25.

Page 4, line 2, after "service," insert "or by the motor carrier providing such service,".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the Real Interstate Driver Equity Act of 2001, known as H.R. 2546, was introduced by our colleague the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT). This legislation is needed to solve a problem that arises when a for-hire vehicle, usually a limousine or sedan, travels across a state line in interstate commerce.

As the law is written today, State and local jurisdictions can require for-hire vehicles to be licensed in multiple States. In some cases, if they do not pay for additional licenses, the for-hire vehicle can only drop its passenger in another State. They cannot make incidental stops or return the same passenger to his original departing State.

For example, a traveler might arrange to be picked up at an airport. On the way home to another State, a common occurrence in Washington, D.C. and in many other communities, the traveler might wish to stop and have dinner within the State he arrived in. This sounds reasonable. What could be the objection? Unfortunately, that stopover could result in the for-hire car being towed, ticketed and impounded. The traveler would be stranded, the car service is left without a vehicle and faces hundreds or even thousands of dollars in fines and in fees.

This is not a fair practice, and H.R. 2546 corrects the problem. For-hire car services providing prearranged ground transportation should be able to engage in interstate commerce. However, some restrictions currently in place would still apply. For example, this legislation does not allow a carrier to operate in another jurisdiction with new clients that were not pre-arranged as though they were licensed within that jurisdiction. The bill also protects the right of transportation terminal operators to provide preferential access and for States to require criminal background checks.

This bill does not provide any direct financial relief for the hard-hit ground transportation industry. However, it does reduce an unnecessary burden and will increase choice, sufficiency and convenience for consumers.

The bill was reported by the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure on November 7, 2001, and passed the House on November 13 of that year. Last month the Senate amended the bill slightly by more specifically defining intermediate stops and making some other minor technical corrections. These changes are agreeable to the House sponsors of the legislation and to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and I urge the House to pass H.R. 2546 today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I express my great appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) for moving this legislation, and, of course, to the Chair of the full committee for moving the bill through subcommittee, the full committee and getting it to the floor today.

This legislation bears a rather disarming title, the Real Interstate Driver Equity Act. The title itself belies the rather intense feelings that accompany this legislation and generated it, in fact, and that we are able to bring the bill to the floor today is something of a marvel in itself, because it really has meant bridging some very serious differences among States.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI), the chairman of the subcommittee; the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI), the ranking member; the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL) and the gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY), all have had a role, as has the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), all of whom have had a hand in resolving this issue.

Under current law, for-hire limousines can be regulated by numerous local jurisdictions while operating in pre-arranged interstate commerce. Service usually involves short distance transportation between neighboring States.

To avoid unnecessary duplication, the bill prohibits a State, a local government or an interstate agency, from enacting or enforcing any rule, whether a law or regulation, that requires a license or a fee on a motor vehicle with a seating capacity not to exceed 15 passengers, including driver, in providing prearranged ground transportation services.

However, the State or local jurisdiction is not prohibited from requiring a criminal background investigation prior to the driver picking up a passenger within its jurisdiction. That was one of the points of contention I am glad we were able to get resolved, particularly in this era of concern about terrorism.

The gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY) raised an important issue during committee consideration of the bill. To meet those concerns, nothing in the bill will restrict the rights of a State or locality from regulating limousine operators who enter competition with local taxicab operators. States and localities retain the right to regulate those kinds of operations. The bill provides that at intermediate stops, interstate limousine drivers must not perform any transportation service for an additional passenger or group of passengers while waiting to carry their first passenger to his or her destination.

There are other provisions to reflect the Senate amendment that adds clarifying language consistent with the legislative intent in the House report.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2546, the Real Interstate Driver Equity Act of 2001. I want to thank the chairman of our full committee, Mr. YOUNG, the Chairman and Ranking Member of our Subcommittee, Mr. PETRI and Mr. BORSKI, the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. PASCRELL, and the gentlewoman from Nevada, Ms. BERKLEY, for their support of this legislation. The committee worked on this bill for well over 2 years and, finally, we have an agreement that has the support of Members on both sides of the Capitol.

Under current law, for-hire limousines can be regulated by multiple local jurisdictions while operating in prearranged interstate commerce. This service generally involves short distance transportation between neighboring states, and dual regulation has created confusion and difficulties for the operators. To avoid unnecessary duplication of regulation of these operations, this bill prohibits a State, local government, or interstate agency from enacting or enforcing any rule, whether it is a law or regulation, that requires a license or fee on a motor vehicle with a seating capacity not exceeding 15 passengers, including the driver, that is providing prearranged interstate ground transportation service. However, a state or local government may not be prohibited from requiring a criminal background investigation prior to any driver picking up passengers within its jurisdiction for interstate transportation. I believe that this is a sound approach, and I support the bill.

The gentlelady from Nevada, Ms. BERKLEY, raised an important issue during committee consideration of the bill. To meet her concerns, nothing in the bill restricts the rights of a State or locality from regulating limousine operators who enter into competition with local taxicab operators. States and localities retain the right to regulate these kinds of operations. The bill provides that at intermediate stops, interstate limousine drivers must not perform any transportation service for an additional passenger, or group of passengers, while waiting to transport the first passenger to his or her destination.

To deal with other concerns that have been raised, the bill does not prohibit airport, train, or bus terminal operators from providing preferential access or facilities to one or more providers of pre-arranged ground transportation service. In addition, the bill makes it clear that taxicab services in a vehicle having a capacity of not more than 8 passengers, including the driver, are exempt from the economic and minimum liability regulations of the Federal Government.

The Senate amendment to the bill primarily adds clarifying language consistent with the legislative intent expressed in the House report. The only major substantive change involves pre-licensing drug testing. The House passed bill reserves the right of a State or local government to require a criminal background check of the driver. The Senate amendments adds pre-licensing drug testing of drivers to the same provision and provides that both are to be conducted by the State where the driver is licensed, or by the motor carrier providing the service.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the Senate amendments improve the bill, and I urge my colleagues to support final passage.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I thought I would have another speaker in the form of the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), who is the author of this bill, but he is at the White House at an important meeting, and I am sure he will insert remarks in the RECORD outlining his support for this legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Real Interstate Driver Equity Act of 2001, H.R. 2546, as amended by the Senate.

This legislation has been under consideration for more than 3 years now, and I am glad that we have been able to find a fair and agreeable solution in the waning days of the 107th Congress.

I want to especially recognize my colleague from Missouri, Mr. BLUNT, who sponsored this bill and has championed the cause of for-hire motor carriers. I believe this legislation will remove barriers to passenger choice and effective management of transportation services.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by thanking the gentleman from Missouri Mr. BLUNT, without whom this legislation would not have gotten on the floor; his legislative skill and his partnership in this effort are truly appreciated, and I thank the gentleman for his work.

I also want to thank my friend and constituent Don Kensey who first brought this to my attention several years ago in my office in New Jersey with various members of the National Limousine Association and the South Jersey Limousine Association.

I am extremely pleased to see that the other body has favorably passed H.R. 2546. The Real Interstate Driver Equity Act, REAL Act, embodies the tireless efforts of many interested parties in upholding Congress' longstanding commitment to the free-flow of goods and services across this Nation. The unnecessary burdens of interstate restrictions on the sedan and limousine industry, of which over 80 percent are small businesses, will now be removed with the passage of H.R. 2546.

In a time where there is much uncertainty about the state of our economy, this legislation provides small business owners with a chance to compete on a fair playing field. Fairness, that is long overdue.

Again, I would like to extend my many thanks to the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. BLUNT, other colleagues and my constituents for their underlying help in bringing the REAL Act to the House floor today. I urge my colleagues to give an affirmative vote and pass this legislation.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, traveling by limousine is increasingly popular among business travelers who appreciate the security and predictability that come with pre-arranged limousine and sedan service. Women are increasingly turning to these services because they provide a measure of safety and security that is not always found by hailing a cab in a strange city.

A substantial portion of their service occurs interstate. Limousine and other prearranged ground transportation service providers are frequently assessed registration and licensing fees by these other states. Enforcement of these requirements, including vehicle impoundment and heavy fines, has caused tremendous hardship to drivers and owners of these businesses, many of which are small, single vehicle operations, over 80 percent, are 1- to 3-car operators grossing less than $500,000 a year.

H.R. 2546 rectifies this burden. It prohibits states other than a home licensing state from enacting or enforcing a law requiring a fee or some other payment requirements on vehicles that provide prearranged ground transportation service.

H.R. 2546 prohibits States or localities from restricting limousine or sedan services if: (1) the service is registered with the Department of Transportation as an interstate carrier; (2) the company meets all the requirements of the state in which they are domicile or do business; and (3) the limousine or sedan service is engaged in providing pre-arranged transportation from one state to another, including round trips.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill, H.R. 2546.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 2546.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

IMPROPER PAYMENTS INFORMATION ACT OF 2002

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 4878) to provide for estimates and reports of improper payments by Federal agencies.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Improper Payments Information Act of 2002".

SEC. 2. ESTIMATES OF IMPROPER PAYMENTS AND REPORTS ON ACTIONS TO REDUCE THEM.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF SUSCEPTIBLE PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES.—The head of each agency shall, in accordance with guidance prescribed by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, annually review all programs and activities that it administers and identify all such programs and activities that may be susceptible to significant improper payments.

(b) ESTIMATION OF IMPROPER PAYMENT.—With respect to each program and activity identified under subsection (a), the head of the agency concerned shall—

(1) estimate the annual amount of improper payments; and

(2) submit those estimates to Congress before March 31 of the following applicable year, with all agencies using the same method of reporting, as determined by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(c) REPORTS ON ACTIONS TO REDUCE IMPROPER PAYMENTS.—With respect to any program or activity of an agency with estimated improper payments under subsection (b) that exceed $10,000,000, the head of the agency shall provide with the estimate under subsection (b) a report on what actions the agency is taking to reduce the improper payments, including—

(1) a discussion of the causes of the improper payments identified, actions taken to correct those causes, and results of the actions taken to address those causes;

(2) a statement of whether the agency has the information systems and other infrastructure it needs in order to reduce improper payments to minimal cost-effective levels;

(3) if the agency does not have such systems and infrastructure, a description of the resources the agency has requested in its budget submission to obtain the necessary information systems and infrastructure; and

(4) a description of the steps the agency has taken to ensure that agency managers (including the agency head) are held accountable for reducing improper payments.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section:

(1) AGENCY.—The term "agency" means an executive agency, as that term is defined in section 102 of title 31, United States Code.

(2) IMPROPER PAYMENT.—The term "improper payment"—

(A) means any payment that should not have been made or that was made in an incorrect amount (including overpayments and underpayments) under statutory, contractual, administrative, or other legally applicable requirements; and

(B) includes any payment to an ineligible recipient, any payment for an ineligible service, any duplicate payment, payments for services not received, and any payment that does not account for credit for applicable discounts.

(3) PAYMENT.—The term "payment" means any payment (including a commitment for future payment, such as a loan guarantee) that is—

(A) made by a Federal agency, a Federal contractor, or a governmental or other organization administering a Federal program or activity; and

(B) derived from Federal funds or other Federal resources or that will be reimbursed from Federal funds or other Federal resources.

(e) APPLICATION.—This section—

(1) applies with respect to the administration of programs, and improper payments under programs, in fiscal years after fiscal year 2002; and

(2) requires the inclusion of estimates under subsection (b)(2) only in annual budget submissions for fiscal years after fiscal year 2003.

(f) GUIDANCE BY THE OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall prescribe guidance to implement the requirements of this section.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) and the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4878.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, each year the Federal Government wastes countless billions of dollars on improper payments. I say "countless billions" because we do not know the magnitude of the problem. Incredible as it might seem, Federal agencies are not required by law to calculate how much money they spend improperly.

What we do know is that improper payments are a very serious problem in the Federal Government, based on the few voluntary estimates that some agencies submit for a handful of programs. The General Accounting Office, headed by the Comptroller General of the United States, who is very impartial and utilizes a nonpartisan, neutral approach, they looked at them and he says that there is $20 billion in improper payments annually. The Office of Management and Budget recently updated the annual figure to about $33 billion of improper payments.

Staggering as these amounts are, they likely represent only the tip of a very enormous iceberg.

For example, the Department of Health and Human Services reported making improper payments of more than $12 billion in its Medicare fee-for-service program last year, but the Department does not even attempt to estimate improper payments made in the Medicaid program.

The obvious first step toward reducing this outrageous waste of taxpayers' money is to understand the extent of the problem. We must find out which programs are at risk and the causes of those risks. Only then can we develop cost-effective solutions.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4878, the "Improper Payments Information Act of 2002," takes this important first step. The bill requires Federal agencies to estimate the improper payments made in their programs. The bill also requires agencies to tell Congress and the American taxpayers what steps they are going to take to reduce those improper payments.

The Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management, and Intergovernmental Relations, which I chair, has held numerous hearings over the years on various aspects of improper payments. These hearings have demonstrated the overwhelming need for H.R. 4878.

The administration strongly supports this legislation, H.R. 4878, and the bill has achieved broad bipartisan support in Congress. Our subcommittee's ranking member, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY), is a cosponsor of this legislation. So is our chairman of the full Committee on Government Reform, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), and also my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. OSE).

On July 9, the House passed H.R. 4878 by voice vote under suspension of the rules. On October 15, the Senate passed an amended version of this bill by unanimous consent.

The Senate then added the amendments which tightened up the bill in several ways. They imposed an annual March 31 deadline for agencies to report their estimated improper payments to Congress. The amendments also require that the reports include the root causes of the improper payments and the results of any action agencies have taken to correct the problem. In addition, the Senate amendments require the Office of Management and Budget to provide guidelines to implement the bill within 6 months of its enactment.

In one respect, the Senate amendments are less stringent than the House bill, than the original bill. The amended bill requires agencies to report on their actions to reduce improper payments for any program in which the annual improper payments are estimated at $10 million or more.

The House-approved bill had a lower threshold. However, I believe the Senate's amended threshold is excellent and reasonable.

Mr. Speaker, I would point out that the bill's threshold is simply the minimum requirement for reporting at less than the $10 million amount. It does not or should not prevent agencies from voluntarily reporting on significant improper payments, even if they do not rise to the bill's minimum requirement.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to concur with the Senate amendments and send this bill to the President.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the people on the staff on our side, Bonnie Heald, the Staff Director of the subcommittee; Henry Wray, Senior Counsel who did most of the work; Dan Daly, Counsel; and we thank a lot Hank Savage, Assistant Counsel from the Office of Legislative Counsel.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am pleased to again be on the floor with the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) to move this bill on improper payments. We worked together to move this bill through the House last July and we are here today to accept the changes made by the Senate.

The Senate has asked that the reports on improper payments be limited to agencies where the aggregate amount is $10 million or more, rather than the $1 million in the original House bill. In addition, the Senate has clarified the timing of the reports coming to Congress. I concur with these changes.

There was one change proposed by the Senate following advice from the General Accounting Office that I found perplexing. The GAO proposed that agencies could avoid reporting on improper payments if the agency concluded that the cost of estimating the level of improper payments was not "cost beneficial." In other words, if an agency does not know how many improper payments it is making, it can somehow conclude that it is not worth knowing how many improper payments it is making. I was concerned that the provision simply created another loophole for agencies to avoid addressing this problem, and I am pleased that the Senate chose not to include this provision.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to reiterate a point I made last July. In programs that provide payments directly to the poor, improper payments often result from the complexities of the program rules or from errors in administering the program. These kinds of errors should not become another burden on the poor. I hope these agencies will take the opportunity created by this bill to find ways to avoid these kinds of errors and, if they occur, to consider the impact on the needy recipient and assure that any negative impact is minimized.

I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) for his hard work on this bill and for working in such a collegial manner throughout the process of passing this legislation. I would also like to end in the gentleman's tradition by thanking the professional democratic staff David McMillan for his work on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I have no other requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 4878.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO OFFER MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES ON H.R. 4628, INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 7(c) of rule XXII, I hereby notify the House of my intention to offer a motion to instruct conferees tomorrow on H.R. 4628, the Intelligence Authorization bill, which has been in conference since October 3, 2002. The form of the motion is as follows:

> I move that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 4628, be instructed to take such actions as may be appropriate to ensure that a conference report is filed on the bill prior to November 14, 2002.

Mr. Speaker, this motion simply instructs the conferees on the Intelligence Authorization bill to complete their work and file a conference report prior to Thursday, November 14, 2002.

REPORT ON NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO THE 1979 IRANIAN EMERGENCY AND ASSETS BLOCKING—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107–278)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit herewith a 6-month periodic report prepared by my Administration on the national emergency with respect to Iran that was declared in Executive Order 12170 of November 14, 1979.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 12, 2002.

CONTINUATION OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO IRAN—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107–279)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmit to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the Iran emergency declared by Executive Order 12170 on November 14, 1979, is to continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on November 13, 2001, (66 FR 56966).

Our relations with Iran have not yet returned to normal, and the process of implementing the January 19, 1981, agreements with Iran is still underway. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared on November 14, 1979, with respect to Iran, beyond November 14, 2002.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 12, 2002.

CONTINUATION OF EMERGENCY REGARDING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107–280)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems declared by Executive Order 12938 on November 14, 1994, as amended, is to continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on November 13, 2001 (66 FR 56965).

The proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the means of delivering them continues to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States. Therefore, I have determined the national emergency previous declared must continue in effect beyond November 14, 2002.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

EXPRESSING SORROW OF THE HOUSE AT THE DEATH OF THE HONORABLE PAUL D. WELLSTONE, SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 598) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 598

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of the Honorable Paul D. Wellstone, a Senator from the State of Minnesota.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That when the House adjourns today, it adjourn as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Senator.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, 20 years ago I had returned to Minnesota from a human rights inquiry trip with the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee in El Salvador, where we inquired into abuses of human rights visited upon Salvadorans and the four American women, three church women and one lay woman.

We visited the blood-spattered streets of San Antonio Abad, the site of La Matanza, the massacre outside of San Salvador. We met with numerous victims of violence by the government and resolved to take action in the Congress on our return to the United States.

On my return, I was asked by the President of the student body of Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota, to come and address the students on the experience that I had just encountered.

It was an overwhelming response. The place for the meeting was filled to overflowing, and students wanted to gather afterward. They asked me if I would come and join them at the home of one of the professors, which I did.

Of course, at that meeting, it was very animated and intense questioning that came from the host, a young professor, who impressed me with his deep sense of caring, his feeling about this issue, his desire to do justice. I was not quite sure of his name, and I asked again: PAUL WELLSTONE.

I said, Professor, you ought to think about running for public office. He said, indeed, I am. I am considering running for State auditor. Well, that was hardly a place from which to make statewide policy, but it was something that he wanted to do to get into the public arena, and he felt there was a message that he could convey. As was later revealed, however, his dyslexia prevented him from really grasping numbers in the way that other folks do.

Nonetheless, he conducted a spirited campaign, and lost to a gentleman named Arnie Carlson, who served as auditor for several years, and then later ran for Governor and won in the same year that PAUL WELLSTONE ran for Senator and won: 1990.

In between those two dates was a very high level of spirited activism by PAUL WELLSTONE, most notable of which was leading the resistance to construction of a power line across the State of Minnesota to be built by a generation power company of the rural electrification system which had really lost touch with its member cooperatives and the people that the co-op was to serve.

PAUL WELLSTONE called them to accountability, called them and mounted a movement across the State to hold hearings, to have public sessions to explain the necessity for this power line running through the backyard of homes and through farms, and what possible adverse side effects there might be from the construction of this power line. It was characteristic of PAUL WELLSTONE's role in public service that when people got too big, when organizations got too big for their own good, he called them to account.

In Scripture, I find the roots of PAUL WELLSTONE's drive for public service. The prophet Isaiah, Chapter 11, Verse 4, under the rubric "the Rule of Immanuel" writes "But he shall judge the poor with justice;" and again, in Chapter 12, Verse 1, "Woe to those who enact unjust statutes and who write oppressive decrees depriving the needy of judgment and robbing my people's poor of their rights."

Nothing disturbed, distressed, angered PAUL WELLSTONE more or motivated him more to action than unjust statutes, oppressive decrees depriving the needy of their day in court, so to speak, or robbing the poor of their rights.

Whether we read into those verses of Scripture the Legal Services Act, redlining in urban housing, the need for surveying the homeless, providing adequate housing for poor and middle-income Americans, or food stamps or Meals on Wheels, we read the keystone of PAUL WELLSTONE's career of public service: A burning mission, anchored in Scripture, expressed in public acts to improve the lives of the least among us; to be a stirring voice for those who either have none, or who have lost their voice.

At the memorial service honoring Senator WELLSTONE in Virginia, Minnesota, in my district a young campaign worker, Ida Rukavine, spoke of the inspiration that young people felt about PAUL WELLSTONE, saying that her classmates, her contemporaries, were looking for someone to be a role model.

At a time when, as Ida implied, young people are indeed looking for role models, I would pin this image on our hearts: PAUL and his wife, Sheila, walking wherever they went hand-in-hand in all that they did, wherever they traveled. We should take their hands symbolically and take each other's hands and feel the strength of the spirit of PAUL WELLSTONE that still moves among us.

There were two votes that I would characterize as bookends for PAUL WELLSTONE's career of public service, both of which I discussed with him at some length. The first was early in 1991, when we were voting in the Congress on whether to approve military action against Iraq, and the last was the most recent vote in the Congress, again to approve of a resolution giving authority to the President to use force at a time of his choosing of his determination against Iraq.

PAUL's no vote was recognized as a vote of courage, a vote of principle, a vote that marked his character in public service and all that he stood for. It was my vote, but it was his vote of deep conviction unashamedly expressed, unabashedly carried out; a role model for young people. Whether one agreed with the vote or not, one had to agree that this was indeed a man of great strength, personal character, and of deep conviction.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my dear friend and colleague, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO).

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution and in memory of our colleague, PAUL WELLSTONE. The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) and I had the unique opportunity of serving with PAUL for 12 years. But when I think of PAUL, I think of him primarily not in his role as a member of the U.S. Senate but as a person, a person who, when we saw PAUL, we expected to see Sheila. They were exceptionally close, and they were exceptionally close to their family; to Marsha, who unfortunately was on the plane with them; and to their sons, David and Mark, and to their grandchildren. They were an incredibly close family. PAUL was so proud of his kids and his grandkids, and wanted to spend as much time as he could with them.

I also think of PAUL as someone who really connected with people for really two reasons. One, he liked people. He met them with a flourish and enthusiasm. Secondly, he really had empathy for problems that impacted people.

□ 1600

All he said and did in politics was not about theory, but about how what we do here impacts people in their daily lives. PAUL, the elected official, was a person who always saw himself as primarily representing the underdog, the underrepresented in society, and he did that with compassion and intelligence and enthusiasm and incredibly hard work. So Americans, those that struggle day to day in life, lost a true friend, a true advocate.

We remember his boys and his grandchildren today, they carry on a remarkable family, and we offer them our sympathy and our thoughts in the days and weeks and months ahead, but our State and our country suffered a real loss in that plane accident.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY).

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution and in gratitude to my colleague for offering it.

I have a big hole in my heart, and I think it is reflective of the hole that is left now in the political landscape, a space that was occupied uniquely by PAUL WELLSTONE. I feel great sorrow and great gratitude; sorrow for the loss of a close friend and colleague, and gratitude for having had the opportunity to know and work with PAUL WELLSTONE and his wife, his life-long partner, Sheila Wellstone.

PAUL and Sheila Wellstone touched many, many lives; literally tens of thousands of Americans considered themselves to be their close friends and partners in the effort to make America better. My husband and I enjoyed spending time with PAUL, listening to his stories and jokes and planning strategy and organizing. PAUL and Sheila were always open and friendly, and always eager to act on their beliefs.

In Chicago this weekend, we will hold a memorial service to honor their lives. Similar memorial services are being held in towns and cities across this country. PAUL WELLSTONE was the people's Senator, not just Minnesota's Senator, the one you could always count on to push for economic and social justice.

PAUL used to talk frequently about the concerns raised by people eating in the cafes and diners in Minnesota. He brought those concerns to the floor of the Senate, speaking for his constituents and for families everywhere. He knew what it was like to deal with mental illness and discrimination in the health care system. He made it his job to end inequality in care and pass comprehensive mental health parity. He knew what it was like to lack health care coverage and to be unable to afford medical treatment for a child or grandparent, and so he made it his job to win universal access to affordable and quality health care.

He listened to family farmers struggling to survive in the shadow of agribusiness, and he made it his job to speak for those farmers. He heard about discrimination and lack of opportunity, and he made it a priority to break down barriers to give every person the right to be productive and secure and to protect the rights of working men and women.

He listened to Sheila about the horrors of domestic violence, and together they worked to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act and to stop the abuse that threatens women and children.

As a teacher, PAUL focused on the power of education to improve our lives. He fought for better teachers and better schools from early childhood development through the university level. He embraced these weighty issues with joy and exuberance. He was called the happy warrior. He was never apologetic or defensive, always bold and clear and, to many of us, thrilling.

Above all, PAUL was proud to be an organizer. He believed with every fiber of his being in the power of people to make change and to win social and economic justice. He taught us to strive for the very best in ourselves and in our communities. He inspired us to do more than we thought was possible because his vision of what was achievable was so powerful. He showed us that we can listen to our consciences, do what is right and take courageous stands on issues from welfare to Iraq and still win elections.

The people of Minnesota respected him and loved him and mourn him because he lived and voted his values. PAUL WELLSTONE changed lives. He changed thousands of lives, young people and old people alike. He empowered people. He was a friend, and I want to end with PAUL WELLSTONE as a friend.

I have two friends in my district who loved PAUL with all their hearts; Harvey and Norma Mader were good friends of PAUL and Sheila Wellstone. For a long time before PAUL was elected to Congress, Harvey and Norma Mader were their friends. They live in my district, but they were prepared to go to Minnesota for the election as senior citizen advocates. Their lives very much revolve around progressive politics, and PAUL WELLSTONE was their hero and friend.

And PAUL would call them up on the telephone and say, How is Norma, how is she feeling? How are things going, Harvey? It was common for PAUL on a regular basis just to check in with his friends. And when I was at that memorial service in Minnesota, I talked to a number of people who said PAUL called me last week. He heard that my son was sick or he heard that I was having a test at the hospital, and he just called to see how I was.

I realize that so many of us who get so busy with our work here and the weightiness of our work here sometimes sacrifice ordinary friendships, but PAUL WELLSTONE managed to do it all. He managed to maintain those friendships all over the country. That is what I heard. It meant so much to Harvey and Norma Mader, it meant so much to all of the people that he cared so much about, and I think that says something so special about what kind of person that he was.

Although PAUL and Sheila are no longer here physically, the partnership that we have with them will continue. Through our commitment to their vision of America, PAUL and Sheila will always have an enormous impact on our Nation and on our future.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and for coming forward to offer this resolution. I recognize that a number of Members are not here today because we do not have votes, but I am very pleased that the gentleman was able to get the time so some of us who felt so deeply about losing PAUL WELLSTONE would have an opportunity to express those views publicly.

We always on the floor from time to time are admonished not to refer to the other body. Well, this afternoon we are referring to an unforgettable Member of the other body. He was not a Member of this body, but PAUL WELLSTONE's presence was felt even in this body. In fact, this is the kind of man whose presence could not help but be felt.

The loss of PAUL, Sheila, his wife, and his daughter Marcia is deeply felt here. In no small part, these three were doing public business. They were all trying to get PAUL back to the Senate so he could engage in the business of the public.

Why is PAUL WELLSTONE so admired by Republicans and Democrats alike in the Senate? We have heard about Republicans who cried when they heard that PAUL had been killed. In no small part I think it is because PAUL believed in something, and he believed in being more than a Senator. Beyond that, if I try to focus on what made him so beloved to so many, particularly to those who worked with him, I come time and again to the fact that he took risks for what he believed in.

Members of the House and the Senate always admire that. Regardless of where we stand on the issues, the notion that somebody is willing to step forward and take political risks is something to be admired; and, of course, PAUL WELLSTONE was willing even to risk his political life.

That is another way of saying that PAUL WELLSTONE came to the Senate in order to stand for principle. The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) spoke of character. That is what character is all about. When the rubber meets the road and a Member needs to decide whether to take a risk on an issue, I think first of the principle that I stood for. That is not what the political business is all about. Sure, those of us from safe districts get to do that all the time. I hope we are not patting ourselves on the back. We are doing it for principle, but many are doing it also because the people who live in our district want us to do it. PAUL WELLSTONE had to think about whether what he was doing was what his constituents wanted him to do, and whether it was the right thing to do according to his own sense of principle.

So standing for principle in a real sense was a kind of trademark of PAUL WELLSTONE and indicia of character. I do not mean to say if a Member does not always stand for principle, they do not have any character. But politicians particularly admire Members who are willing to take risks, ignoring the political consequences.

Now, let us not forget that PAUL WELLSTONE was a most unlikely candidate. It was unlikely that he would get to the Senate at all. Let us be clear; he was a Ph.D. college professor; and, indeed, a tenured college professor. I can tell Members this is not a place where one expects academics to come. I am myself an academic who never expected and never intended to come to the House. I am a tenured academic who still teaches at Georgetown Law Center. And I can tell Members, those of us who spend our lives trying to get tenure do not think of another career. It is harder to get tenure than it is to get elected. Tenured professors do not go around trying to get another job.

One needs to think what in the world got into PAUL WELLSTONE, tenure at a very good liberal arts college. Again, I go back to principle. At the bottom he was an organizer, and he had done all he could do organizing, and so he thought I guess I will go to the Senate and see if I can organize there. I am sure that is the way he thought.

If he was an unlikely candidate when he got here, he took on unlikely issues. He stuck with health care when everybody else backed off because the Democrats tried very hard in the early 1990s and got pressed back.

And again I can go down a lexicon of issues. Here is another unlikely one, mental health coverage as a part of ordinary health coverage, and he got that very far along.

Those issues speak to two abilities: One is the ability as an organizer. He never lost that passion, never lost that understanding that is the way to operate. Senator LIEBERMAN tells a funny story that one day PAUL was discussing an amendment on the floor. PAUL walks into the Senate, PAUL is pressing his amendment. He does not even think he has Members on his side, much less Republicans, so he held up a piece a paper for Senator LIEBERMAN to see that said "DLC votes yes," meaning Democratic Leadership Conference votes yes because Senator LIEBERMAN was in a conference that was in another spectrum of the Democratic Party. Senator LIEBERMAN just laughed. PAUL was so funny and laughed all the time.

PAUL was so collegial. Even those who could not possibly vote the way PAUL voted had to love him. I think of our former colleague SAM BROWNBACK, who made common cause with PAUL on a bill to prevent international sex trafficking of women and girls. Together, this conservative Republican and this liberal Democrat pressed that bill through the floor. If you look at PAUL's record, this one-man progressive force was always looking for allies, especially people who were more conservative than he. He was not content to stand on principle alone. He wanted to stand on principle and then get it enacted into law and so he reached out to see how he could do that.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I will tell the quintessential PAUL story about a principle. At the height of the wonderful economy of the late 1990s, when everybody was doing well, I mean, I was going around bragging that more African Americans own homes, highest median income in history, more rising out of poverty, at the height of this economy when all boats were being lifted, PAUL called me up and said he wanted me to cosponsor a bill, then he wanted to go to a church here in the District to have a press conference about it. The bill was called the Strategic Transitional Employment Program. We should understand that unemployment was down to something like 3 percent, way down from where I regret to say it is now. This bill was about the millions who had been left behind. PAUL was tired of hearing how all of us were doing so well, even the poor. PAUL knew that there was a horrific gap between the larger number of people who were doing better and the millions who were not benefitting from that wonderful economy.

I do not think PAUL particularly believed this bill had a ghost of a chance, but he did believe that if you were one of those millions still unemployed, still living in a community that did not have investment, still living in rural or urban America where jobs were not being made out of the dot-coms and all of the wonderful work that the economy was doing, if you were in a manufacturing job still waiting to be called back, PAUL knew that nobody was talking to you and had acted as if you had floated off the planet. PAUL did not believe you should stand up for those who did not have only when the economy was the way it is now, down and not doing well at all. PAUL believed you should stand up when you had not brought the great American dream to all, especially when there were millions upon millions upon millions who thought nobody even spoke to their issues or spoke to them any longer because so many people were doing so well. That to me is the quintessential PAUL.

Mr. Speaker, Senators, not to mention House Members, come and go, but some rise to a special level. That is the level of being simply irreplaceable. That is the level to which PAUL WELLSTONE has risen to Members across the line in both parties. I again thank the gentleman for not only yielding to me but for bringing PAUL WELLSTONE to this body.

Mr. OBERSTAR. I thank the gentlewoman for those wonderful remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Minnesota (Ms. MCCOLLUM).

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, yesterday was Veterans Day, November 11. As I woke up in the morning, I thought, well, I am getting on a plane today and I am going to be heading off to Washington, a different type of Veterans Day than I was used to spending. See, I used to spend Veterans Day at veterans hospitals and cemeteries remembering those who had given their lives, remembering those who came home injured, whether it be physically or emotionally. I remembered those days because I spent them with Senator PAUL WELLSTONE. PAUL and I would often be at veterans hospitals, cameras long gone, with veterans from all over the United States, and we would sit and we would talk and we would have very personal conversations with some veterans who had not heard from family members in a long time and who were alone. PAUL would be on a plane as he was the last time I flew out to Washington and he would be with Sheila. His back would bother him or his legs would be bothering him and he could not sit still for very long, so especially after they changed the flight time where we have to spend the last 30 minutes sitting on the plane, not moving as we approached Washington National since September 11, PAUL would be on the plane walking up and down the aisles, talking to elderly people, talking to children, it did not make any difference whether or not they lived in Minnesota, asking them what was going on in their lives, what they were studying, how they were doing in school. Sheila would be sitting there reading, working on something to help Minnesota, to help our country, to help our Nation, women of domestic violence, children of domestic violence.

We have heard testimony from Members here of what a great legislator PAUL was, and he was truly a magnificent Senator. But he was all those things because he was a good teacher. He was a good father. He was a good friend. Sheila and PAUL never forgot family and their family went beyond their children. Their family campaigned together. Marcia, who was a teacher, was on the plane. Over the last couple of weeks, I have met students of Marcia's. PAUL was a good father, he was a good teacher, and he passed that on to his children.

Mary McEvoy was also on the plane. Mary was a dear friend. Mary believed in the issues that PAUL worked on, helping children succeed, helping children to be literate. Mary and PAUL and Sheila together would work on those issues and make them a reality in the everyday lives of everyday children. But we all know and I know better than ever having served in this body of Congress that our staff is important. Just as we are judged by the friends we keep, I think legislatively we can be judged by the staff we work with. To the Chief of Staff, Colin McGuiness and the Washington staff, to State Director Connie Lewis, to all the staff in Senator WELLSTONE's office, he was so very proud of you and you in the work that you did made us proud of PAUL. To Mark and David, our loss is different than yours. Yours is beyond my imagination right now having lost so many family members. You shared your grief with our State and with our Nation.

November 11 will never be the same. I will never drive by a veterans cemetery or go by a veterans hospital without thinking of all the work that PAUL did for the veterans in this country. I will never go in another grade school and not think of all the work that he did for children and education with those around him. I will carry on a women's domestic abuse roundtable that we are having with people in the Fourth District and Fifth District, St. Paul and Minneapolis, without Sheila's presence. There will be students in White Bear Lake who will always remember Marcia. And Mary is so deep in the hearts of many of us. But, Tom and Will, you also made an impact by allowing PAUL to do the work that he did and we are blessed for having you all in our lives.

Minnesota will never be the same. Minnesota will always remember what happened on the tragic Friday of October 25, where they were, what they were doing, when we all stopped and paused and remembered our blessings in having had such a special Senator.

PAUL, I will miss you in Washington and I will miss you at home.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for those truly heartfelt, heart rending remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the minority whip.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and extend to him and the entire Minnesota delegation the deepest sympathy of my family and my constituents.

I have known PAUL and Sheila for a very long time, long before either of us were in Congress, he in the Senate, going back to our days in the Democratic Party in the early 1980s. I have known of his passion for the issues and for working families in our country and his interest in making a difference for them in our country.

I rise today to honor Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, Sheila Wellstone, the sadness of their losing their daughter at the same time and to offer my sympathy to the families of those who were lost in that terrible tragedy. To the families of staffers Will McLaughlin, Tom Lapic and Mary McEvoy, Mary was a person of so many credentials and all of them much heralded in these sad days, and of the Captains Richard Conroy and Michael Guess, I pray that you can take some comfort in the fact that your loved ones lost their lives in service to our country. To take part in the political process, the process of educating voters about their choices, is indeed a great service to democracy.

To David and Mark Wellstone, thank you for sharing your wonderful family with all of us and with the American people. In this era of polls and pundits, PAUL WELLSTONE was that increasingly rare breed, a politician with the courage of his convictions. We see a lot of that here in Congress, but the public is not aware of that. He fought for what he believed in. He voted for what he thought was right regardless of whether it was popular. He stood for something, and he stood his ground. In doing so, he gave voice to the many millions of Americans who cannot afford to make campaign donations and who are struggling just to pay their rent and feed their families.

When PAUL WELLSTONE took the floor of the United States Senate, you knew you were going to hear something quite different from what had come before and what was likely to follow. You would hear passion and compassion and sometimes anger. You would hear talk about issues that do not get a great deal of attention these days, social justice, poverty and the responsibility of government to improve the lives of citizens. This was a responsibility that PAUL WELLSTONE lived and breathed, to the good of millions of America's children and families.

PAUL and Sheila left us not only a memory but a legacy. His legacy of good works will live throughout the country. Sheila's work in terms of domestic violence and so many other issues are being made known to the American people now more generally, but anyone who knew them knew of her commitment and the difference she made in that area. Losing Marcia is another tragedy, leaving her family behind seems to be the saddest of all, but I hope again it is a comfort to those families that so many people mourn their loss and are praying for them at this time.

To us in Congress, PAUL WELLSTONE left a special legacy. We can keep his spirit alive and that legacy glowing by standing strong for what we believe in and by bringing both passion and compassion to everything we do. He did that but he brought a great intellect, a great knowledge, a plan of action. He was a great person. Sheila and PAUL were a great team.

Mr. Speaker, we have already had a service in San Francisco honoring the memory of Sheila and PAUL WELLSTONE, Marcia and the others who perished. I bring from that service, attended by hundreds of people, the sympathy and condolences of my community to the people of Minnesota. I am so sorry.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for those remarks. I again want to express my appreciation to our Democratic whip for her call immediately following the tragedy expressing her deep sympathy and condolences through me to the family and to the close friends of PAUL WELLSTONE. It is characteristic of the gentlewoman from California that she would call and express that profound feeling. I am grateful that she mentioned the memorial service. I know that the family will be most appreciative.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to first of all thank the gentleman from Minnesota for yielding me this time and for taking out this special order. I recall a poet once saying, "Some people see things that are and ask why." But then he said, "I dream of things that have never been and ask why not." It seems to me that such was the life, such was the career, such was the being of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, a man who had an uncanny way of penetrating.

Notice that many people say "PAUL WELLSTONE," and that is because they felt a level of intimacy with him even though they were not personal friends, even though they had not traveled with him on the airplane, even though they did not live in his neighborhood or come from his district. He had a way of connecting, and so we would think of him as PAUL WELLSTONE, Senator WELLSTONE, full of power, dynamite.

I knew that PAUL could not sit still, but I did not know it had anything to do with his legs. I thought it just had to do with the level of energy and excitement that he brought to everything that he did. I was pleased to spend time with him in many small groups of people where there were no television cameras, there were no headlines, small groups of labor organizers, small groups of college students, small groups of low-income people, and he was asking the question then why not a livable wage so that low-income people can enjoy a level of the goodness and the greatness of this Nation? Why not health care for everybody no matter where they come from or no matter where they are going? But he also believed in giving a lot, understanding that if we put something in, we get something out. Always organizing, knowing that life can be greater and better than what it is.

It seems to me that another poet summed up his life when he said that whatever one puts into it, that is what he will get out of it. He said "I bargained with life for a penny and life would pay no more; however, I begged at evening time when I counted my scanty store, but I found that life is a just employer, he gives you what you ask, but once you have set the wages, then you must bear the task. I worked for a menial's hire only to learn dismay, whatever price I had asked of life, life would have willingly paid."

PAUL WELLSTONE put a great deal into it, and he got a great deal out of it. It has been a pleasure to know you, sir. Condolences to your family and all of those who shared your dream and your vision and went with you as you left.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for those stirring heartfelt, powerful remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT).

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), and I do not want to go on at great length about PAUL WELLSTONE because so much has been said already, but I believe I knew PAUL WELLSTONE longer than anyone in this Chamber, going back to, I believe, 1969, when I was in my last year at Carleton College and Paul Wellstone was in his first year on the faculty there. He was even then a dynamic, passionate person who cut a bigger swath than his stature might have led one to believe.

So much has been said about how dynamic, how passionate he has been in speaking out for farmers, for workers, for people of all sorts, and what joy he brought to his campaigning, to his political activity. He has been described as a man of convictions, someone who spoke clearly and directly, someone who is never criticized for hiding his opinions, for shifting his opinions, for pulling his punches. So it might sound to some people that we are describing a cocksure, arrogant idealogue. It could not be further from the truth. In my many interactions with PAUL WELLSTONE when he was a junior faculty member, when he was an activist going from town to town around Minnesota, when he was a friend with discussions in the evening, when he was a mentor to me when I arrived on Capitol Hill a couple of terms ago, in every instance what characterized PAUL WELLSTONE was not cocksure opinions but questions. He was one of the best questioners I have ever known, and one left each discussion with him with a sense of having some doors opened through his questioning, some understanding gained through his questioning, and a sense of purpose gained from his questioning. What a loss.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) for those heartfelt remarks and thoughtful comments.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I do not claim to know the late Senator WELLSTONE very well. We had very little interaction, but I had a deep interest in him because my home State was Minnesota. That was the State of my birth, and I have watched Minnesota politics with great interest over the years and I also watched Mr. WELLSTONE with great interest. And although his politics and his political views were quite different from those of mine, I admire several things about him.

In the go-along-to-get-along atmosphere we often encounter in politics, he stood out as someone who stood for his beliefs. He fought passionately for his beliefs, and he sought to extend those beliefs into action, and I admire that in any individual, whether in the House or the Senate or the political arena in general, to have a stance that they take, to have a passion for what they believe is right, and to fight passionately for what they believe is right I think is an admirable trait in any individual, and Mr. WELLSTONE certainly exhibited that during his brief career in the political arena.

So I just wanted to add those comments to the record, and I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for having this session so we can each express our opinions about what Mr. WELLSTONE has added to the Senate and to our Nation.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) for those thoughtful comments. They were much appreciated, and I know that the Wellstone children will be most grateful and again for his ever academic and thoughtful presentation.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would conclude by observing that PAUL WELLSTONE was more than a Senator, more than an advocate for ideas, for issues, for causes. PAUL WELLSTONE was himself a movement, a movement for justice. I pray that his movement will continue in the spirit in which he lived his life of public service.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I was deeply saddened by the tragic death of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, his family members and staff, and I have prayed for the families of all the victims of this accident.

I rise today to support this resolution honoring the short but powerful life of PAUL WELLSTONE, the people's senator. I will miss PAUL, a good friend, a good person, and an invaluable and courageous colleague.

PAUL and I joined together on many occasions to fight for legislation to help those who have so little power in our society. Most recently, we co-authored a bill to provide mental health and substance abuse treatment to juvenile offenders. PAUL understood that many young offenders suffer from problems that are treatable and that contribute to their troubles, but for which they rarely receive effective treatment. It was not a bill written for the powerful or wealthy interests. It was not a bill written because it would be popular in the press.

It was just one of the many examples of PAUL's genuine desire to help people and demonstrated his understanding of his role as a representative in government.

PAUL WELLSTONE fought for working families, for better schools, and for a cleaner environment. He was a dedicated public servant who was passionate about his work and who was proud to fight for progressive causes. His loss is a loss for all of America and for all those Americans who so desperately need champions on their side. PAUL was a man of principle, courage, and great intellect. Sadly, he will not be easily replaced in our society and we will miss him deeply.

Mr. EVANS. I rise to recognize the accomplishments of my good friend, the late Senator PAUL WELLSTONE of Minnesota. Many have come before me to praise the character and actions of this faithful public servant who left us all too early last month. Many have lauded his commitment to the underdog, to those who lacked a voice, to the "little guy." I speak of his commitment and passion for veterans.

During his 12 years on the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, PAUL was an active and committed member whose heart-felt concern about veteran's issues was often unmatched. PAUL has been remembered for his courageous stands, in both Bush Administrations, against sanctioning military action in Iraq. At one time, PAUL was criticized for making his views on this known at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington. Even though the gesture may have been misinterpreted, to me, it was symbolic of his constant realization that war has consequences. We must be ever-cognizant of the often painful realities of putting our sons and daughters in harm's way and resort to force only as the last recourse.

But PAUL also consistently demonstrated that he believed part of the cost of war was being ready to assist those that were willing to put themselves on the line for their country. For his advocacy he was honored by numerous veterans' service organizations, including Vietnam Veterans of America, the Minnesota chapter of the Paralyzed Veterans of America, the Military Order of the Purple Heart and the Minnesota Veterans of Foreign Wars.

One of the things that drew people to PAUL was his willingness to listen. I was impressed that the Senator rarely missed an opportunity to hear directly from veterans at their annual joint legislative hearings held here in the House. He would often bring the veterans to their feet exhorting them to fight for their rights.

Last year, PAUL introduced the Senate companion to my bill, Heather French Henry Homeless Veterans Assistance Act, S. 739. This bill addressed so many of the constituencies Paul held dear—and men and women without homes, individuals with mental illness, and veterans. I am proud to say, with PAUL's help in the Senate, we enacted Public Law 107–95.

PAUL also got things done for "atomic" veterans. During his tenure, Congress identified many new diseases which were presumed connected to veterans who were exposed to ionizing radiation.

Veterans could count on PAUL as an ally in the budget process—he consistently put forth initiatives to increase funding for veterans health care. I believe my friend PAUL would agree that we owe our veterans a great debt and he was already prepared to pay the bill.

PAUL and I also shared a chronic disability as a common foe. He dealt with his MS without complaint pushing himself to act when lesser men might have faltered. That is part of the personal courage he demonstrated on behalf of himself, his ideals, and the constituents who entrusted him with an office he used to its best advantage every day.

PAUL, you were a cherished friend to me, to veterans of this great Nation, and to every American who needed a voice, I will miss you.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, the Congress, the State of Minnesota, and the nation tragically lost a great public servant. The sudden death of Senator PAUL WELLSTONE, his wife Sheila, daughter Marcia, three staffers, and two pilots in an airplane crash last month, saddens us all. I extend my heartfelt sympathy and support to their family and friends as they deal with this tremendous loss.

This is also a devastating loss for our nation. As Chairman of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, I was fortunate to work with Senator WELLSTONE on many issues, such as the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. Personally, I worked closely with him on many veterans benefits issues.

PAUL had a true passion for people, civil service, and veterans that is matched by very few. PAUL's commitment to helping people, his warm sense of humor, and positive attitude made him both a great Senator and an excellent friend. His leadership and friendship will be dearly missed by me, members of the CHC and all members of the U.S. Congress. Our thoughts and prayers remain with PAUL's family and loved ones, and the family and friends of his staff and the pilots.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the resolution.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 40 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD) at 6 o'clock and 27 minutes p.m.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4546, BOB STUMP NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

Mr. HUNTER submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 4546) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 107–772)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4546), to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003".

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Representative Bob Stump of Arizona was elected to the House of Representatives in 1976 for service in the 95th Congress, after serving in the Arizona legislature for 18 years and serving as President of the Arizona State Senate from 1975 to 1976, and he has been reelected to each subsequent Congress.

(2) A World War II combat veteran, Representative Stump entered service in the United States Navy in 1943, just after his 16th birthday, and served aboard the USS LUNGA POINT and the USS TULAGI, which participated in the invasions of Luzon, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa.

(3) Representative Stump was elected to the Committee on Armed Services in 1978 and has served on nearly all of its subcommittees and panels during 25 years of distinguished service on the committee. He has served as chairman of the committee during the 107th Congress and has championed United States national security as the paramount function of the Federal Government.

(4) Also serving on the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives, chairing that committee from 1995 to 2000, and serving on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives, including service as the ranking minority member in 1985 and 1986, Representative Stump has dedicated his entire congressional career to steadfastly supporting America's courageous men and women in uniform both on and off the battlefield.

(5) Representative Stump's tireless efforts on behalf of those in the military and veterans have been recognized with numerous awards for outstanding service from active duty and reserve military, veterans' service, military retiree, and industry organizations.

(6) During his tenure as chairman of the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives, Representative Stump has—

(A) overseen the largest sustained increase to defense spending since the Reagan administration;

(B) led efforts to improve the quality of military life, including passage of the largest military pay raise since 1982;

(C) supported military retirees, including efforts to reverse concurrent receipt law and to save the Armed Forces Retirement Homes;

(D) championed military readiness by defending military access to critical training facilities such Vieques, Puerto Rico, expanding the National Training Center at Ft. Irwin, California, and working to restore balance between environmental concerns and military readiness requirements;

(E) reinvigorated efforts to defend America against ballistic missiles by supporting an increase in fiscal year 2002 of nearly 50 percent above the fiscal year 2001 level for missile defense programs; and

(F) honored America's war heroes by expanding Arlington National Cemetery, establishing a site for the Air Force Memorial, and assuring construction of the World War II Memorial.

(7) In recognition of his long record of accomplishments in enhancing the national security of the United States and his legislative victories on behalf of active duty service members, reservists, guardsmen, and veterans, it is altogether fitting and proper that this Act be named in honor of Representative Bob Stump of Arizona, as provided in subsection (a).

Subtitle B—Army Programs

SEC. 111. PILOT PROGRAM ON SALES OF MANUFACTURED ARTICLES AND SERVICES OF CERTAIN ARMY INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES WITHOUT REGARD TO AVAILABILITY FROM DOMESTIC SOURCES.

(a) EXTENSION OF PROGRAM.—Subsection (a) of section 141 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 10 U.S.C. 4543 note) is amended by striking "through 2002" in the first sentence and inserting "through 2004".

(b) USE OF OVERHEAD FUNDS MADE SURPLUS BY SALES.—Such section is further amended—

(1) by striking subsection (d);

(2) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(3) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection (c):

"(c) TRANSFER OF CERTAIN SUMS.—For each Army industrial facility participating in the pilot program that sells manufactured articles and services in a total amount in excess of $20,000,000 in any fiscal year, the amount equal to one-half of one percent of such total amount shall be transferred from the sums in the Army Working Capital Fund for unutilized plant capacity to appropriations available for the following fiscal year for the demilitarization of conventional ammunition by the Army.".

(c) UPDATE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL'S REVIEW.—The Inspector General of the Department of Defense shall review the experience under the pilot program carried out under such section 141 and, not later than July 1, 2003, submit to Congress a report on the results of the review. The report shall contain the views, information, and recommendations called for under subsection (d) of such section (as redesignated by subsection (b)(2)). In carrying out the review and preparing the report, the Inspector General shall take into consideration the report submitted to Congress under such subsection (as so redesignated).

SEC. 112. REPORT ON IMPACT OF ARMY AVIATION MODERNIZATION PLAN ON THE ARMY NATIONAL GUARD.

(a) REPORT BY CHIEF OF THE NATIONAL GUARD BUREAU.—The Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall submit to the Chief of Staff of the Army a report on the requirements for Army National Guard aviation. The report shall include the following:

(1) An analysis of the impact of the Army Aviation Modernization Plan on the ability of the Army National Guard to conduct its aviation missions.

(2) The plan under that aviation modernization plan for the transfer of aircraft from the active component of the Army to the Army reserve components, including a timeline for those transfers.

(3) The progress, as of January 1, 2003, in carrying out the transfers under the plan referred to in paragraph (2).

(4) An evaluation of the suitability and cost effectiveness of existing Commercial Off The Shelf light utility helicopters for performance of Army National Guard utility aviation missions.

(b) COMMENTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS BY CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE ARMY.—Not later than February 1, 2003, the Chief of Staff of the Army shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives the report received under subsection (a), together with any comments and recommendations that the Chief of Staff considers appropriate on the matters covered in the report.

SEC. 113. FAMILY OF MEDIUM TACTICAL VEHICLES.

(a) MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY.—Beginning with the fiscal year 2003 program year, the Secretary of the Army may, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, enter into a multiyear contract for the procurement of vehicles under the Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles program, subject to subsection (b).

(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary of the Army may not enter into a multiyear contract for the procurement of vehicles in the Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles authorized by subsection (a) until the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a written certification that—

(1) all key performance parameters required in the initial operational test and evaluation for that program have been met; and

(2) the total cost through the use of such multiyear contract of the procurement of the number of vehicles to be procured under such contract is at least 10 percent less than the total cost of the procurement of the same number of such vehicles through the use of successive one-year contracts.

(c) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense may waive subsection (b)(2) if the Secretary—

(1) determines that using a multiyear contract for the procurement of vehicles under the Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles program is in the national security interests of the United States;

(2) certifies that the Army cannot achieve the savings specified in subsection (b)(2); and

(3) submits to the congressional defense committees, in writing, a notification of the waiver together with a report describing the reasons why the use of a multiyear contract for such procurement is in the national security interests of the United States and why the Army cannot achieve a 10 percent savings of the total anticipated costs of carrying out the program through a multiyear contract.

Subtitle C—Navy Programs

SEC. 121. EXTENSION OF MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY FOR DDG–51 CLASS DESTROYERS.

Section 122(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104–201; 110 Stat. 2446), as amended by section 122 of Public Law 106–65 (113 Stat. 534) and section 122(a) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–24), is further amended by striking "October 1, 2005" in the first sentence and inserting "October 1, 2007".

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of the Navy should maintain the scope of the conversion program for the Ticonderoga class of cruisers so that the program—

(1) covers all 27 ships in that class of cruisers; and

(2) provides for modernizing each of those ships to include an appropriate mix of upgrades to ships' capabilities for theater missile defense, naval fire support, and air dominance.

SEC. 123. CONTINUATION OF CONTRACT FOR OPERATION OF CHAMPION-CLASS T–5 FUEL TANKER VESSELS.

The Department of the Navy contract in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act for the operation of five Champion-class T–5 fuel tanker vessels shall continue in effect with respect to the operation of each such vessel until the completion of the term of the contract or, if sooner for any such vessel, until the vessel is no longer used for purposes of the Military Sealift Command or any other Navy purpose.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

SEC. 131. MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT AUTHORITY FOR C–130J AIRCRAFT PROGRAM.

(a) MULTIYEAR AUTHORITY.—Beginning with the fiscal year 2003 program year, the Secretary of the Air Force may, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, enter into a multiyear contract for procurement of up to 40 C–130J aircraft in the CC–130J configuration and up to 24 C–130J aircraft in the KC–130J configuration. Notwithstanding subsection (k) of such section, such a contract may be for a period of six program years.

(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary of the Air Force may not enter into a contract authorized by subsection (a) until—

(1) testing of the CC–130J aircraft for qualification for use in assault operations has been completed by the Air Force Flight Test Center; and

(2) Block 5.3 software upgrades have been installed on all C–130J and CC–130J aircraft in the inventory of the Air Force.

SEC. 132. PATHFINDER PROGRAMS.

(a) PATHFINDER PROGRAMS.—Not later than February 1, 2003, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees a list of Air Force programs that the Secretary has designated as acquisition reform pathfinder programs (hereinafter in this section referred to as "pathfinder programs").

(b) OVERSIGHT OF PATHFINDER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, and the Joint Requirements Oversight Council maintain oversight over each pathfinder program that qualifies as a major defense acquisition program under section 2430 of title 10, United States Code.

(c) REPORT ON PATHFINDER PROGRAMS.—(1) Not later than March 15, 2003, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on pathfinder programs. For each such program, the report shall include a description of the following:

(A) The management approach for that program and how that approach will result in a disciplined, affordable and well-managed acquisition program.

(B) The acquisition strategy for that program and how that acquisition strategy responds to approved operational requirements.

(C) The test and evaluation plan for that program and how that plan will provide adequate assessment of each pathfinder program.

(D) The manner in which the acquisition plan for that program considers cost, schedule, and technical risk.

(E) The manner in which any innovative business practices developed as a result of participation in the program could be applied to other acquisition programs, and any impediments to application of such practices to other programs.

(2) For each such program, the report shall also set forth the following:

(A) The manner in which the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics will be involved in the development, oversight, and approval of the program's management approach, acquisition strategy, and acquisition approach.

(B) The manner in which the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation will be involved in the development, oversight, and approval of the program's test and evaluation plan.

(C) The manner in which an independent cost estimate for the program will be developed by the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

(d) APPLICABILITY OF SPIRAL DEVELOPMENT SECTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt any pathfinder program from the application of any provision of section 803(c).

SEC. 133. LEASES FOR TANKER AIRCRAFT UNDER MULTIYEAR AIRCRAFT-LEASE PILOT PROGRAM.

The Secretary of the Air Force may not enter into a lease for the acquisition of tanker aircraft for the Air Force under section 8159 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2002 (division A of Public Law 107–117; 115 Stat. 2284; 10 U.S.C. 2401a note) until—

(1) the Secretary submits the report specified in subsection (c)(6) of such section; and

(2) either—

(A) authorization and appropriation of funds necessary to enter into such lease are provided by law; or

(B) a new start reprogramming notification for the funds necessary to enter into such lease has been submitted in accordance with established procedures.

Subtitle E—Other Programs

SEC. 141. DESTRUCTION OF EXISTING STOCKPILE OF LETHAL CHEMICAL AGENTS AND MUNITIONS.

(a) PROGRAM MANAGEMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the program for destruction of the United States stockpile of lethal chemical agents and munitions is managed as a major defense acquisition program (as defined in section 2430 of title 10, United States Code) in accordance with the essential elements of such programs as may be determined by the Secretary.

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE (COMPTROLLER) ANNUAL CERTIFICATION.—Beginning with respect to the budget request for fiscal year 2004, the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) shall submit to the congressional defense committees on an annual basis a certification that the budget request for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program has been submitted in accordance with the requirements of section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986 (50 U.S.C. 1521).

SEC. 142. REPORT ON UNMANNED AERIAL VEHICLE SYSTEMS.

(a) REPORT.—Not later than January 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on unmanned aerial vehicle systems of the Department of Defense.

(b) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED CONCERNING UNMANNED AERIAL VEHICLE SYSTEMS.—The Secretary shall include in the report under subsection (a) the following, shown for each system referred to in that subsection:

(1) A description of the infrastructure that the Department of Defense has (or is planning) for the system.

(2) A description of the operational requirements document (ORD) for the system.

(3) A description of the physical infrastructure of the Department for training and basing.

(4) A description of the manner in which the Department is interfacing with the industrial base.

(5) A description of the acquisition plan for the system.

(6) A description of the process by which the Department will ensure that any unmanned aerial vehicle program proceeding past the science and technology stage does so only as part of an integrated, overall Office of the Secretary of Defense strategy for acquisition of unmanned aerial vehicles, such as that provided in the approved Office of the Secretary of Defense unmanned aerial vehicle roadmap.

(c) SUGGESTIONS FOR CHANGES IN LAW.—The Secretary shall also include in the report under subsection (a) such suggestions as the Secretary considers appropriate for changes in law that would facilitate the way the Department acquires unmanned aerial vehicle systems.

SEC. 143. GLOBAL INFORMATION GRID SYSTEM.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act for the Department of Defense system known as the Global Information Grid may be obligated until the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees a plan to provide that, as part of the bandwidth expansion efforts for the system, the system will be designed and configured so as to ensure that information transmitted within the system is secure and protected from unauthorized access.

(C) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) the responsibilities of the Joint Requirements Oversight Council under subsections (b) and (d) of section 181 of title 10, United States Code, have been carried out with respect to the updated mine countermeasures master plan, the budget resources for mine countermeasures for that fiscal year, and the future years defense program for mine countermeasures; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) NOTIFICATION OF PROPOSED CHANGES.—Upon certifying under subsection (b) with respect to a fiscal year, the Secretary may not carry out any change to the naval mine countermeasures master plan or the budget resources for mine countermeasures with respect to that fiscal year until after the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics submits to the congressional defense committees a notification of the proposed change. Such notification shall describe the nature of the proposed change, the effect of the proposed change on the naval mine countermeasures program or related programs with respect to that fiscal year, and the effect of the proposed change on the validity of the decision to certify under subsection (b) with respect to that fiscal year.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Such section is further amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology" and inserting "Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics"; and

(2) in subsection (b)(2)—

(A) by striking "multiyear" and inserting "future years"; and

(B) by striking "section 114a" and inserting "section 221".

SEC. 213. REVISED REQUIREMENTS FOR PLAN FOR MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM.

(a) STREAMLINED CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Subsection (e) of section 2521 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "prepare a five-year plan" in paragraph (1) and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2) and inserting the following: "prepare and maintain a five-year plan for the program.

"(2) The plan shall establish the following:

"(A) The overall manufacturing technology objectives, milestones, priorities, and investment strategy for the program.

"(B) The specific objectives of, and funding for the program by, each military department and each Defense Agency participating in the program.".

(b) BIENNIAL REPORT.—Such subsection is further amended in paragraph (3)—

(1) by striking "annually" and inserting "biennially"; and

(2) by striking "for a fiscal year" and inserting "for each even-numbered fiscal year".

SEC. 214. ADVANCED SEAL DELIVERY SYSTEM.

(a) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—To the extent provided in appropriations Acts, the amount described in subsection (b) shall be transferred to amounts available for fiscal year 2003 for research, development, test, and evaluation, Defense-Wide, and shall be available only for research, development, test, and evaluation relating to the Advanced SEAL Delivery System.

(b) AMOUNT TO BE TRANSFERRED.—The amount referred to in subsection (a) is the amount of $13,700,000 that was authorized and appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for procurement of the Advanced SEAL Delivery System within amounts for Procurement, Defense-Wide.

(c) TRANSFER AUTHORITY IN ADDITION TO OTHER AUTHORITY.—The transfer authority provided by this section is in addition to any other transfer authority provided by law.

SEC. 215. ARMY EXPERIMENTATION PROGRAM REGARDING DESIGN OF THE OBJECTIVE FORCE.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT.—Not later than March 31, 2003, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report on the experimentation program regarding design of the objective force that is required by subsection (g) of section 113 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001, as added by section 113 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1029).

(b) BUDGET DISPLAY.—Amounts provided for the experimentation program in the budget for fiscal year 2004 that is submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, shall be displayed as a distinct program element in that budget and in the supporting documentation submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 216. PROGRAM TO PROVIDE ARMY WITH SELF-PROPELLED FUTURE COMBAT SYSTEMS NON-LINE-OF-SIGHT CANNON INDIRECT FIRE CAPABILITY FOR THE OBJECTIVE FORCE.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a program to provide the Army, not later than fiscal year 2008, with a self-propelled Future Combat Systems non-line-of-sight cannon indirect fire capability to equip the objective force.

(b) REPORT.—(1) The Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees, at the same time that the President submits the budget for a fiscal year referred to in paragraph (2) to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, a report on the investments proposed to be made with respect to non-line-of-sight indirect fire programs for the Army. The report shall—

(A) identify the amount proposed for expenditures for the Crusader artillery system program for that fiscal year in the future-years defense program that was submitted to Congress in 2002 under section 221 of title 10, United States Code; and

(B) specify—

(i) the manner in which the amount provided in that budget would be expended for improved non-line-of-sight indirect fire capabilities for the Army; and

(ii) the extent to which expending such amount in such manner would improve such capabilities for the Army.

(2) The requirement to submit a report under paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to budgets for fiscal years 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008.

(c) OBJECTIVE FORCE DEFINED.—In this section, the term "objective force" has the meaning given such term in section 113(f)(2) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–24).

(d) FUNDING.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 201(1) for the Army for research, development, test, and evaluation, $368,500,000 shall be used only to develop and field a self-propelled Future Combat Systems non-line-of-sight cannon indirect fire artillery system and a resupply vehicle with respect to such system.

SEC. 217. PROHIBITION ON TRANSFER OF MEDICAL FREE ELECTRON LASER PROGRAM.

The Medical Free Electron Laser Program (PE 0602227D8Z) may not be transferred from the Department of Defense to the National Institutes of Health, or to any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

SEC. 218. LITTORAL COMBAT SHIP PROGRAM.

(a) AMOUNT FOR PROGRAM.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 201(2) for research, development, test, and evaluation, Navy, $4,000,000 may be available in program element 0603563N, relating to Ship Concept Advanced Design, for requirements development for the littoral combat ship.

(b) LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of the Navy may not obligate any funds for the construction of a littoral combat ship until after the Secretary submits the report required by subsection (c).

(c) REPORT ON MILESTONE A PLAN AND SCHEDULE.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy shall submit to the congressional defense committees, at the same time that the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2004 to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, a report on development of the littoral combat ship.

(2) The report shall address the plan and schedule for fulfilling the requirements of Department of Defense Instruction 5000-series for a major defense acquisition Milestone A decision for initiation of concept and technology development for the littoral combat ship, including the following such requirements:

(A) Consideration of technology issues.

(B) Market research.

(C) Validated mission need statement.

(D) Analysis of multiple concepts.

(E) Test and evaluation master plan (evaluation strategy only).

(F) Exit criteria.

(G) Acquisition decision memorandum.

(3) The report shall include a discussion of the Secretary's acquisition strategy for development of the littoral combat ship.

(d) REQUIREMENTS FOR ACQUISITION STRATEGY.—The Secretary shall ensure that the acquisition strategy for development of the littoral combat ship includes the following:

(1) A concept and technology demonstration phase that is robust and, in a manner and on a schedule that will inform the Navy's decisions on the concepts, technologies, and capabilities to be incorporated into the initial design of the littoral combat ship and into follow-on designs, capitalizes upon ongoing and planned experiments, demonstrations, and evaluations of—

(A) existing, prototype, and experimental hull forms and platforms, including the hull forms and platforms relating to—

(i) the Coastal Waters Interdiction Platform;

(ii) the Hybrid Deep Vee Demonstrator;

(iii) the Littoral Support Craft (Experimental);

(iv) the High Speed Vessel;

(v) surface effects ships;

(vi) Research Vessel Triton;

(vii) the SLICE ship;

(viii) other existing, prototype, and experimental craft that the Secretary considers to be appropriate; and

(ix) other existing ships capable of carrying the desired payload packages;

(B) ship and combat systems components;

(C) command, control, and communications systems;

(D) intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance systems;

(E) weapons systems; and

(F) support systems.

(2) A description of the experiments, demonstrations, and evaluations that are needed for support of design and development decisionmaking for mission modules to be employed on the littoral combat ship, including the mission modules for—

(A) anti-submarine warfare;

(B) mine countermeasures;

(C) anti-ship defense; and

(D) any other missions that may be envisioned for the ship.

(3) An identification of the experiments, demonstrations, and evaluations that would need to be accomplished during the concept and technology demonstration phase and those that would need to be accomplished during the system development and demonstration phase (after a major defense acquisition Milestone B decision to enter that phase).

(4) A description of the potential trade-offs between program requirements and capabilities, and the methodology (including life cycle cost as an independent variable, speed as an independent variable, and other applicable program attributes), needed to arrive at a design for a littoral combat ship that can be approved (pursuant to a major defense acquisition Milestone B decision) for entry into the system development and demonstration phase.

(5) An analysis of the adequacy of existing and planned platforms to test the littoral ship concept prior to construction of a littoral combat ship.

Subtitle C—Ballistic Missile Defense

SEC. 221. REPORT REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE PROGRAMS.

(a) ANNUAL SUBMISSION OF CURRENT PERFORMANCE GOALS AND DEVELOPMENT BASELINES.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees each year the performance goals and development baselines—

(A) for those ballistic missile defense systems under development by the Missile Defense Agency that could be fielded; and

(B) for any other ballistic missile defense program or project that has been designated by Congress as a special interest item.

(2) Such performance goals and development baselines shall be provided for each block of each such system.

(3) The performance goals and development baselines under paragraph (1) shall be included annually with the defense budget justification materials submitted in support of the President's budget submitted to Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) RDT&E BUDGET JUSTIFICATION MATERIALS.—The budget justification materials submitted to Congress for any fiscal year in support of a request for the authorization and appropriation of funds for research, development, test, and evaluation for ballistic missile defense systems shall include a funding profile for each block of each such system that could be fielded that reflects the development baseline submitted pursuant to subsection (a) for that fiscal year.

(c) REVIEW OF MDA CRITERIA IN RELATION TO MILITARY REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The Joint Requirements Oversight Council established under section 181 of title 10, United States Code, shall review cost, schedule, and performance criteria for missile defense programs of the Missile Defense Agency in order to assess the validity of those criteria in relation to military requirements.

(2) The Secretary shall include the results of such review with the first annual statement of program goals submitted to the congressional defense committees under section 232(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note) after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 222. RESPONSIBILITY OF MISSILE DEFENSE AGENCY FOR RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION RELATED TO SYSTEM IMPROVEMENTS OF PROGRAMS TRANSFERRED TO MILITARY DEPARTMENTS.

Section 224(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "before a" and inserting "for each";

(2) by striking "is"; and

(3) by striking "roles and responsibilities" and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting "responsibility for research, development, test, and evaluation related to system improvements for that program remains with the Director.".

SEC. 223. LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR THEATER HIGH ALTITUDE AREA DEFENSE PROGRAM PENDING SUBMISSION OF REQUIRED LIFE-CYCLE COST INFORMATION.

(a) LIMITATION PENDING SUBMISSION OF CERTIFICATION.—Not more than 85 percent of the amount specified in subsection (b) may be obligated until the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees the estimated total life-cycle cost of the Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) program as required for programs in engineering and manufacturing development by section 232(d) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note).

(b) FUNDS SUBJECT TO LIMITATION.—Subsection (a) applies to the amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for the Missile Defense Agency for the Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) program.

SEC. 224. PROVISION OF INFORMATION ON FLIGHT TESTING OF GROUND-BASED MIDCOURSE NATIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEM.

(a) INFORMATION TO BE FURNISHED TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The Director of the Missile Defense Agency shall provide to the congressional defense committees information on the results of each flight test of the Ground-based Midcourse national missile defense system.

(b) CONTENT.—Information provided under subsection (a) on the results of a flight test shall include the following matters:

(1) A thorough discussion of the content and objectives of the test.

(2) For each such test objective, a statement regarding whether or not the objective was achieved.

(3) For any such test objective not achieved—

(A) a thorough discussion describing the reasons that the objective was not achieved; and

(B) a discussion of any plans for future tests to achieve that objective.

SEC. 225. REFERENCES TO NEW NAME FOR BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE ORGANIZATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any reference to the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization in any provision of law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall be considered to be a reference to the Missile Defense Agency.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Title 10, United States Code, is amended as follows:

(A) Sections 203, 223, and 224 are each amended by striking "Ballistic Missile Defense Organization" each place it appears and inserting "Missile Defense Agency".

(B)(i) The heading for section 203 is amended to read as follows:

"§203. Director of Missile Defense Agency".

(ii) The item relating to section 203 in the table of sections at the beginning of subchapter II of chapter 8 is amended to read as follows:

"203. Director of Missile Defense Agency.".

(2) The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) is amended as follows:

(A) Sections 232 (115 Stat. 1037; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note), 233 (115 Stat. 1039), and 235 (115 Stat. 1041) are each amended by striking "Ballistic Missile Defense Organization" each place it appears and inserting "Missile Defense Agency".

(B) The heading for section 232 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 232. PROGRAM ELEMENTS FOR MISSILE DEFENSE AGENCY.".

(3) Section 3132 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–455; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note) is amended—

(A) by striking "Ballistic Missile Defense Organization" each place it appears and inserting "Missile Defense Agency";

(B) in subsection (c), by striking "BMDO" and inserting "MDA"; and

(C) by amending the heading to read as follows:

"SEC. 3132. ENHANCED COOPERATION BETWEEN NATIONAL NUCLEAR SECURITY ADMINISTRATION AND MISSILE DEFENSE AGENCY.".

(4) The following provisions are each amended by striking "Ballistic Missile Defense Organization" each place it appears and inserting "Missile Defense Agency":

(A) Section 233 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 10 U.S.C. 223 note).

(B) Section 243 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103–160; 10 U.S.C. 2431 note).

SEC. 226. ONE-YEAR LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR NUCLEAR ARMED INTERCEPTORS.

(a) LIMITATION.—None of the funds described in subsection (b) may be obligated for research, development, test, or evaluation, or for procurement, of a nuclear armed interceptor as a component of a missile defense system.

(b) COVERED FUNDS.—Subsection (a) applies to funds made available to the Department of Defense pursuant to an authorization of appropriations in this title or title I or to the Department of Energy pursuant to an authorization of appropriations in title XXXI.

Subtitle D—Improved Management of Department of Defense Test and Evaluation Facilities

SEC. 231. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE TEST RESOURCE MANAGEMENT CENTER.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—(1) Subchapter I of chapter 8 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§196. Department of Defense Test Resource Management Center

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AS DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FIELD ACTIVITY.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish within the Department of Defense under section 191 of this title a Department of Defense Test Resource Management Center (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Center'). The Secretary shall designate the Center as a Department of Defense Field Activity.

"(b) DIRECTOR AND DEPUTY DIRECTOR.—(1) At the head of the Center shall be a Director, selected by the Secretary from among commissioned officers of the armed forces on active duty. The Director, while so serving, holds the grade of lieutenant general or, in the case of an officer of the Navy, vice admiral.

"(2) There shall be a Deputy Director of the Center, selected by the Secretary from among senior civilian officers and employees of the Department of Defense who have substantial experience in the field of test and evaluation. The Deputy Director shall act for, and exercise the powers of, the Director when the Director is disabled or the position of Director is vacant.

"(c) DUTIES OF DIRECTOR.—The Director shall have the following duties:

"(1) To review and provide oversight of proposed Department of Defense budgets and expenditures for—

"(A) the test and evaluation facilities and resources of the Major Range and Test Facility Base of the Department of Defense; and

"(B) all other test and evaluation facilities and resources within and outside of the Department of Defense.

"(2) To complete and maintain the strategic plan required by subsection (d).

"(3) To review proposed budgets under subsection (e) and submit reports and certifications required by such subsection.

"(4) To administer the Central Test and Evaluation Investment Program and the program of the Department of Defense for test and evaluation science and technology.

"(d) STRATEGIC PLAN FOR DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE TEST AND EVALUATION RESOURCES.—(1) Not less often than once every two fiscal years, the Director, in coordination with the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, the Secretaries of the military departments, and the heads of Defense Agencies with test and evaluation responsibilities, shall complete a strategic plan reflecting the needs of the Department of Defense with respect to test and evaluation facilities and resources. Each such strategic plan shall cover the period of ten fiscal years beginning with the fiscal year in which the plan is submitted under paragraph (3). The strategic plan shall be based on a comprehensive review of the test and evaluation requirements of the Department and the adequacy of the test and evaluation facilities and resources of the Department to meet those requirements.

"(2) The strategic plan shall include the following:

"(A) An assessment of the test and evaluation requirements of the Department for the period covered by the plan.

"(B) An identification of performance measures associated with the successful achievement of test and evaluation objectives for the period covered by the plan.

"(C) An assessment of the test and evaluation facilities and resources that will be needed to meet such requirements and satisfy such performance measures.

"(D) An assessment of the current state of the test and evaluation facilities and resources of the Department.

"(E) An itemization of acquisitions, upgrades, and improvements necessary to ensure that the test and evaluation facilities and resources of the Department are adequate to meet such requirements and satisfy such performance measures.

"(F) An assessment of the budgetary resources necessary to implement such acquisitions, upgrades, and improvements.

"(3) Upon completing a strategic plan under paragraph (1), the Director shall submit to the Secretary of Defense a report on that plan. The report shall include the plan and a description of the review on which the plan is based.

"(4) Not later than 60 days after the date on which the report is submitted under paragraph (3), the Secretary of Defense shall transmit to the Committee on Armed Services and Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services and Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives the report, together with any comments with respect to the report that the Secretary considers appropriate.

"(e) CERTIFICATION OF BUDGETS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), shall require that the Secretary of each military department, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, and the head of each Defense Agency with test and evaluation responsibilities transmit such Secretary's, Director's, or head's proposed budget for test and evaluation activities for a fiscal year to the Director of the Center for review under paragraph (2) before submitting such proposed budget to the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller).

"(2)(A) The Director of the Center shall review each proposed budget transmitted under paragraph (1) and shall, not later than January 31 of the year preceding the fiscal year for which such budgets are proposed, submit to the Secretary of Defense a report containing the comments of the Director with respect to all such proposed budgets, together with the certification of the Director as to whether such proposed budgets are adequate.

"(B) The Director shall also submit, together with such report and such certification, an additional certification as to whether such proposed budgets provide balanced support for such strategic plan.

"(3) The Secretary of Defense shall, not later than March 31 of the year preceding the fiscal year for which such budgets are proposed, submit to Congress a report on those proposed budgets which the Director has not certified under paragraph (2)(A) to be adequate. The report shall include the following matters:

"(A) A discussion of the actions that the Secretary proposes to take, together with any recommended legislation that the Secretary considers appropriate, to address the inadequacy of the proposed budgets.

"(B) Any additional comments that the Secretary considers appropriate regarding the inadequacy of the proposed budgets.

"(f) SUPERVISION OF DIRECTOR BY UNDER SECRETARY.—The Director of the Center shall be subject to the supervision of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. The Director shall report directly to the Under Secretary, without the interposition of any other supervising official.

"(g) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT OF CENTER.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide the Director with administrative support adequate for carrying out the Director's responsibilities under this section. The Secretary shall provide the support out of the headquarters activities of the Department or any other activities that the Secretary considers appropriate.

"(h) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term 'Major Range and Test Facility Base' means the test and evaluation facilities and resources that are designated by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation as facilities and resources comprising the Major Range and Test Facility Base.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such subchapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"196. Department of Defense Test Resource Management Center.".

(b) FIRST STRATEGIC PLAN.—The first strategic plan required to be completed under subsection (d)(1) of section 196 of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), shall be completed not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) ADMINISTRATION OF CTEIP AND DOD T&E S&T PROGRAMS.—The duty of the Director of the Department of Defense Test Resource Management Center to administer the programs specified in subsection (c)(4) of section 196 of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), shall take effect, and such programs shall be placed under control of such Director, upon the beginning of the first fiscal year that begins after the report on the first strategic plan referred to subsection (b) is transmitted to the congressional committees required by subsection (d)(4) of such section 196.

SEC. 232. OBJECTIVE FOR INSTITUTIONAL FUNDING OF TEST AND EVALUATION FACILITIES.

(a) FUNDING OBJECTIVE.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish the objective of ensuring that, by fiscal year 2006—

(1) the institutional and overhead costs of a facility or resource of a military department or Defense Agency that is within the Major Range and Test Facility Base are fully funded through the major test and evaluation investment accounts of the military department or Defense Agency, the account of the Central Test and Evaluation Investment Program of the Department of Defense, and other appropriate accounts of the military department or Defense Agency; and

(2) the charge to an element of the Department of Defense for a use by that element of such a facility or resource for testing under a particular program is not more than the amount equal to the direct costs of such use by that element.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "Major Range and Test Facility Base" means the test and evaluation facilities and resources that are designated by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation as facilities and resources comprising the Major Range and Test Facility Base.

(2) The term "institutional and overhead costs", with respect to a facility or resource within the Major Range Test and Facility Base—

(A) means the costs of maintaining, operating, upgrading, and modernizing the facility or resource; and

(B) does not include any incremental cost of operating the facility or resource that is attributable to the use of the facility or resource for testing under a particular program.

(3) The term "direct costs", with respect to a facility or resource within the Major Range and Test Facility Base, means those costs that are directly attributable to the use of the facility or resource for testing under a particular program, over and above the institutional and overhead costs with respect to the facility or resource.

SEC. 233. UNIFORM FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT SYSTEM FOR DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE TEST AND EVALUATION FACILITIES.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR SYSTEM.—The Secretary of Defense shall implement a single financial management and accounting system for all test and evaluation facilities of the Department of Defense. The Secretary shall implement such system as soon as practicable, and shall establish the objective that such system be implemented not later than September 30, 2006.

(b) SYSTEM FEATURES.—The system required by subsection (a) shall be designed to achieve, at a minimum, the following functional objectives:

(1) Enable managers within the Department of Defense to compare the costs of carrying out test and evaluation activities in the various facilities of the military departments.

(2) Enable the Secretary of Defense—

(A) to make prudent investment decisions; and

(B) to reduce the extent to which unnecessary costs of owning and operating test and evaluation facilities of the Department of Defense are incurred.

(3) Enable the Department of Defense to track the total cost of test and evaluation activities.

(4) Comply with the financial management architecture established by the Secretary.

SEC. 234. TEST AND EVALUATION WORKFORCE IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) REPORT ON CAPABILITIES.—Not later than March 15, 2003, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall submit to Congress a report on the capabilities of the test and evaluation workforce of the Department of Defense. The Under Secretary shall consult with the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness and the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation in preparing the report.

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR PLAN.—(1) The report shall contain a plan for taking the actions necessary to ensure that the test and evaluation workforce of the Department of Defense is of sufficient size and has the expertise necessary to timely and accurately identify issues of military suitability and effectiveness of Department of Defense systems through testing of the systems.

(2) The plan shall set forth objectives for the size, composition, and qualifications of the workforce, and shall specify the actions (including recruitment, retention, and training) and milestones for achieving the objectives.

(c) ADDITIONAL MATTERS.—The report shall also include the following matters:

(1) An assessment of the changing size and demographics of the test and evaluation workforce, including the impact of anticipated retirements among the most experienced personnel over the period of five fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 2003, together with a discussion of the management actions necessary to address the changes.

(2) An assessment of the anticipated workloads and responsibilities of the test and evaluation workforce over the period of ten fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 2003, together with the number and qualifications of military and civilian personnel necessary to carry out such workloads and responsibilities.

(3) The Under Secretary's specific plans for using the demonstration authority provided in section 4308 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104-106; 10 U.S.C. 1701 note) and other special personnel management authorities of the Under Secretary to attract and retain qualified personnel in the test and evaluation workforce.

(4) Any recommended legislation or additional special authority that the Under Secretary considers appropriate for facilitating the recruitment and retention of qualified personnel for the test and evaluation workforce.

(5) Any other matters that are relevant to the capabilities of the test and evaluation workforce.

SEC. 235. COMPLIANCE WITH TESTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) ANNUAL OT&E REPORT.—Subsection (g) of section 139 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the fourth sentence the following: "The report for a fiscal year shall also include an assessment of the waivers of and deviations from requirements in test and evaluation master plans and other testing requirements that occurred during the fiscal year, any concerns raised by the waivers or deviations, and the actions that have been taken or are planned to be taken to address the concerns.".

(b) REORGANIZATION OF PROVISION.—Subsection (g) of such section, as amended by subsection (a), is further amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(g)";

(2) by designating the second sentence as paragraph (2);

(3) by designating the third sentence as paragraph (3);

(4) by designating the matter consisting of the fourth and fifth sentences as paragraph (4); and

(5) by designating the sixth sentence as paragraph (5).

Subtitle E—Other Matters

SEC. 241. PILOT PROGRAMS FOR REVITALIZING DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE LABORATORIES.

(a) ADDITIONAL PILOT PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may carry out a pilot program to demonstrate improved efficiency in the performance of research, development, test, and evaluation functions of the Department of Defense.

(2) Under the pilot program, the Secretary of Defense shall provide the director of one science and technology laboratory, and the director of one test and evaluation laboratory, of each military department with authority for the following:

(A) To use innovative methods of personnel management appropriate for ensuring that the selected laboratories can—

(i) employ and retain a workforce appropriately balanced between permanent and temporary personnel and among workers with appropriate levels of skills and experience; and

(ii) effectively shape workforces to ensure that the workforces have the necessary sets of skills and experience to fulfill their organizational missions.

(B) To develop or expand innovative methods of entering into and expanding cooperative relationships and arrangements with private sector organizations, educational institutions (including primary and secondary schools), and State and local governments to facilitate the training of a future scientific and technical workforce that will contribute significantly to the accomplishment of organizational missions.

(C) To develop or expand innovative methods of establishing cooperative relationships and arrangements with private sector organizations and educational institutions to promote the establishment of the technological industrial base in areas critical for Department of Defense technological requirements.

(D) To waive any restrictions not required by law that apply to the demonstration and implementation of methods for achieving the objectives set forth in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C).

(3) The Secretary may carry out the pilot program under this subsection at each selected laboratory for a period of three years beginning not later than March 1, 2003.

(b) RELATIONSHIP TO FISCAL YEARS 1999 AND 2000 REVITALIZATION PILOT PROGRAMS.—The pilot program under this section is in addition to, but may be carried out in conjunction with, the fiscal years 1999 and 2000 revitalization pilot programs.

(c) REPORTS.—(1) Not later than January 1, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the experience under the fiscal years 1999 and 2000 revitalization pilot programs in exercising the authorities provided for the administration of those programs. The report shall include a description of—

(A) barriers to the exercise of the authorities that have been encountered;

(B) the proposed solutions for overcoming the barriers; and

(C) the progress made in overcoming the barriers.

(2) Not later than September 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the pilot program under subsection (a) and the fiscal years 1999 and 2000 revitalization pilot programs. The report shall include, for each such pilot program, the following:

(A) Each laboratory selected for the pilot program.

(B) To the extent practicable, a description of the innovative methods that are to be tested at each laboratory.

(C) The criteria to be used for measuring the success of each method to be tested.

(3) Not later than 90 days after the expiration of the period for the participation of a laboratory in a pilot program referred to in paragraph (2), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a final report on the participation of that laboratory in the pilot program. The report shall include the following:

(A) A description of the methods tested.

(B) The results of the testing.

(C) The lessons learned.

(D) Any proposal for legislation that the Secretary recommends on the basis of the experience at that laboratory under the pilot program.

(d) EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY FOR OTHER REVITALIZATION PILOT PROGRAMS.—(1) Section 246(a)(4) of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261; 112 Stat. 1956; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note) is amended by striking "a period of three years" and inserting "up to six years".

(2) Section 245(a)(4) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 553; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note) is amended by striking "a period of three years" and inserting "up to five years".

(e) PARTNERSHIPS UNDER PILOT PROGRAM.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may authorize one or more laboratories and test centers participating in the pilot program under subsection (a) or in one of the fiscal years 1999 and 2000 revitalization pilot programs to enter into a cooperative arrangement (in this subsection referred to as a "public-private partnership") with entities in the private sector and institutions of higher education for the performance of work.

(2) A competitive process shall be used for the selection of entities outside the Government to participate in a public-private partnership.

(3)(A) Not more than one public-private partnership may be established as a limited liability company.

(B) An entity participating in a limited liability company as a party to a public-private partnership under the pilot program may contribute funds to the company, accept contributions of funds for the company, and provide materials, services, and use of facilities for research, technology, and infrastructure of the company, if it is determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense that doing so will improve the efficiency of the performance of research, test, and evaluation functions of the Department of Defense.

(f) FISCAL YEARS 1999 AND 2000 REVITALIZATION PILOT PROGRAMS DEFINED.—In this section, the term "fiscal years 1999 and 2000 revitalization pilot programs" means—

(1) the pilot programs authorized by section 246 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261; 112 Stat. 1955; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note); and

(2) the pilot programs authorized by section 245 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 552; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note).

SEC. 242. TECHNOLOGY TRANSITION INITIATIVE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND CONDUCT.—(1) Chapter 139 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2359 the following new section:

"§2359a. Technology Transition Initiative

"(a) INITIATIVE REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall carry out an initiative, to be known as the Technology Transition Initiative (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Initiative'), to facilitate the rapid transition of new technologies from science and technology programs of the Department of Defense into acquisition programs of the Department for the production of such technologies.

"(b) OBJECTIVES.—The objectives of the Initiative are as follows:

"(1) To accelerate the introduction of new technologies into operational capabilities for the armed forces.

"(2) To successfully demonstrate new technologies in relevant environments.

"(c) MANAGEMENT OF INITIATIVE.—(1) The Under Secretary shall designate a senior official of the Department of Defense (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Manager') to manage the Initiative.

"(2) In managing the Initiative, the Manager shall—

"(A) report directly to the Under Secretary; and

"(B) obtain advice and other assistance from the Technology Transition Council established under subsection (g).

"(3) The Manager shall—

"(A) in consultation with the Technology Transition Council established under subsection (g), identify promising technology transition projects that can contribute to meeting Department of Defense technology goals and requirements;

"(B) identify potential sponsors in the Department of Defense to manage such projects; and

"(C) provide funds under subsection (f) for those projects that are selected under subsection (d)(2).

"(d) SELECTION OF PROJECTS.—(1) The science and technology and acquisition executives of each military department and each appropriate Defense Agency and the commanders of the unified and specified combatant commands may nominate technology transition projects for implementation under subsection (e) and shall submit a list of the projects so nominated to the Manager.

"(2) The Manager, in consultation with the Technology Transition Council established under subsection (g), shall select projects for implementation under subsection (e) from among the projects on the lists submitted under paragraph (1).

"(e) IMPLEMENTATION OF PROJECTS.—For each project selected under subsection (d)(2), the Manager shall designate a military department or Defense Agency to implement the project.

"(f) FUNDING OF PROJECTS.—(1) From funds made available to the Manager for the Initiative, the Manager shall, subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), provide funds for each project selected under subsection (d)(2) in an amount determined by mutual agreement between the Manager and the acquisition executive of the military department or Defense Agency concerned.

"(2) The amount of funds provided to a project under paragraph (1) shall be not less than the amount equal to 50 percent of the total cost of the project.

"(3) A project shall not be provided funds under this subsection for more than four fiscal years.

"(g) TECHNOLOGY TRANSITION COUNCIL.—(1) There is a Technology Transition Council in the Department of Defense. The Council is composed of the following members:

"(A) The science and technology executive of each military department and each Defense Agency.

"(B) The acquisition executive of each military department.

"(C) The members of the Joint Requirements Oversight Council.

"(2) The duty of the Council shall be to provide advice and assistance to the Manager under this section.

"(3) The Council shall meet not less often than semiannually to carry out its duty under paragraph (2).

"(h) REPORT.—Not later than March 31 of each year, the Under Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives a report on the activities carried out by the Initiative during the preceding fiscal year.

"(i) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term 'acquisition executive', with respect to a military department or Defense Agency, means the official designated as the senior procurement executive for that military department or Defense Agency for the purposes of section 16(3) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 414(3)).".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2359 the following new item:

"2359a. Technology Transition Initiative.".

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated under section 201(4), $25,430,000 may be available in program element 0603826D8Z for technology transition activities of the Department of Defense, including the Technology Transition Initiative required by section 2359a of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), the Defense Acquisition Challenge Program required by section 2359b of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 243), and Quick Reaction Special Projects.

SEC. 243. DEFENSE ACQUISITION CHALLENGE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 139 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2359a (as added by section 242) the following new section:

"§2359b. Defense Acquisition Challenge Program

"(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall carry out a program to provide opportunities for the increased introduction of innovative and cost-saving technology in acquisition programs of the Department of Defense.

"(2) The program, to be known as the Defense Acquisition Challenge Program (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Challenge Program'), shall provide any person or activity within or outside the Department of Defense with the opportunity to propose alternatives, to be known as challenge proposals, at the component, subsystem, or system level of an existing Department of Defense acquisition program that would result in improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or operational capability of that acquisition program.

"(b) PANELS.—The Under Secretary shall establish one or more panels of highly qualified scientists and engineers (hereinafter in this section referred to as 'Panels') to provide preliminary evaluations of challenge proposals under subsection (c).

"(c) PRELIMINARY EVALUATION BY PANELS.—(1) Under procedures prescribed by the Under Secretary, a person or activity within or outside the Department of Defense may submit challenge proposals to a Panel, through the unsolicited proposal process or in response to a broad agency announcement.

"(2) The Under Secretary shall establish procedures pursuant to which appropriate officials of the Department of Defense may identify proposals submitted through the unsolicited proposal process as challenge proposals. The procedures shall provide for the expeditious referral of such proposals to a Panel for preliminary evaluation under this subsection.

"(3) The Under Secretary shall issue on an annual basis not less than one such broad agency announcement inviting interested parties to submit challenge proposals. Such announcements may also identify particular technology areas and acquisition programs that will be given priority in the evaluation of challenge proposals.

"(4) Under procedures established by the Under Secretary, a Panel shall carry out a preliminary evaluation of each challenge proposal submitted in response to a broad agency announcement, or submitted through the unsolicited proposal process and identified as a challenge proposal in accordance with paragraph (2), to determine each of the following:

"(A) Whether the challenge proposal has merit.

"(B) Whether the challenge proposal is likely to result in improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or operational capability at the component, subsystem, or system level of an acquisition program.

"(C) Whether the challenge proposal could be implemented in the acquisition program rapidly, at an acceptable cost, and without unacceptable disruption to the acquisition program.

"(5) The Under Secretary may establish procedures to ensure that the Challenge Program does not become an avenue for the repetitive submission of proposals that have been previously reviewed and found not to have merit.

"(6) If a Panel determines that a challenge proposal satisfies each of the criteria specified in paragraph (4), the person or activity submitting that challenge proposal shall be provided an opportunity to submit such challenge proposal for a full review and evaluation under subsection (d).

"(d) FULL REVIEW AND EVALUATION.—(1) Under procedures prescribed by the Under Secretary, for each challenge proposal submitted for a full review and evaluation as provided in subsection (c)(6), the office carrying out the acquisition program to which the proposal relates shall, in consultation with the prime system contractor carrying out such program, conduct a full review and evaluation of the proposal.

"(2) The full review and evaluation shall, independent of the determination of a Panel under subsection (c)(4), determine each of the matters specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of such subsection. The full review and evaluation shall also include—

"(A) an assessment of the cost of adopting the challenge proposal and implementing it in the acquisition program; and

"(B) consideration of any intellectual property issues associated with the challenge proposal.

"(e) ACTION UPON FAVORABLE FULL REVIEW AND EVALUATION.—(1) Under procedures prescribed by the Under Secretary, each challenge proposal determined under a full review and evaluation to satisfy each of the criteria specified in subsection (c)(4) with respect to an acquisition program shall be considered by the office carrying out the applicable acquisition program and the prime system contractor for incorporation into the acquisition program as a new technology insertion at the component, subsystem, or system level.

"(2) The Under Secretary shall encourage the adoption of each challenge proposal referred to in paragraph (1) by providing suitable incentives to the office carrying out the acquisition program and the prime system contractor carrying out such program.

"(f) ACCESS TO TECHNICAL RESOURCES.—(1) Under procedures established by the Under Secretary, the technical resources of the laboratories, research, development, and engineering centers, test and evaluation activities, and other elements of the Department may be called upon to support the activities of the Challenge Program.

"(2) Funds available to carry out this program may be used to compensate such laboratories, centers, activities, and elements for technical assistance provided to a Panel pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(g) ELIMINATION OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—In carrying out each preliminary evaluation under subsection (c) and full review under subsection (d), the Under Secretary shall ensure the elimination of conflicts of interest.

"(h) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available for the Challenge Program may be used only for activities authorized by this section, and not for implementation of challenge proposals.

"(i) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Under Secretary shall submit an annual report on the Challenge Program to Congress. The report shall be submitted at the same time as the President submits the budget for a fiscal year to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, and shall cover the conduct of the Challenge Program for the preceding fiscal year. The report shall include the number and scope of challenge proposals submitted, preliminarily evaluated, subjected to full review and evaluation, and adopted. No report is required for a fiscal year in which the Challenge Program is not carried out.

"(j) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may not carry out the Challenge Program under this section after September 30, 2007.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2359a (as added by section 242) the following new item:

"2359b. Defense Acquisition Challenge Program.".

SEC. 244. ENCOURAGEMENT OF SMALL BUSINESSES AND NONTRADITIONAL DEFENSE CONTRACTORS TO SUBMIT PROPOSALS POTENTIALLY BENEFICIAL FOR COMBATING TERRORISM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF OUTREACH PROGRAM.—During fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005, the Secretary of Defense, acting through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall carry out a program of outreach to small businesses and nontraditional defense contractors for the purpose set forth in subsection (b).

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the outreach program is to provide a process for reviewing and evaluating research activities of, and new technologies being developed by, small businesses and nontraditional defense contractors that have the potential for meeting a defense requirement or technology development goal of the Department of Defense that relates to the mission of the Department of Defense to combat terrorism.

(c) GOALS.—The goals of the outreach program are as follows:

(1) To increase efforts within the Department of Defense to survey and identify research activities and new technologies described in subsection (b).

(2) To provide the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics with a source of expert advice on new technologies for combating terrorism.

(3) To increase efforts to educate nontraditional defense contractors on Department of Defense acquisition processes, including regulations, procedures, funding opportunities, military needs and requirements, and technology transfer so as to encourage such contractors to submit proposals regarding research activities and new technologies described in subsection (b).

(4) To increase efforts to provide timely response by the Department of Defense to acquisition proposals (including unsolicited proposals) submitted to the Department by small businesses and by nontraditional defense contractors regarding research activities and new technologies described in subsection (b), including through the use of electronic transactions to facilitate the processing of such proposals.

(d) REVIEW PANEL.—(1) The Secretary shall appoint, under the outreach program, a panel for the review and evaluation of acquisition proposals described in subsection (c)(4).

(2) The panel shall be composed of qualified personnel from the military departments, relevant Defense Agencies, industry, academia, and other private sector organizations.

(3) Under procedures prescribed by the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, a small business or nontraditional defense contractor may submit acquisition proposals for consideration under the program through the unsolicited proposal process or in response to a broad agency announcement. The Under Secretary shall issue on an annual basis not less than one such broad agency announcement inviting parties to submit proposals.

(4) Under procedures prescribed by the Under Secretary, the panel shall review and evaluate acquisition proposals selected by the panel. An acquisition proposal shall be selected for review and evaluation if the panel determines that the acquisition proposal may present a unique and valuable approach for meeting a defense requirement or technology development goal of the Department of Defense that relates to the mission of the Department of Defense to combat terrorism. In carrying out its duties under this paragraph, the panel may act through representatives designated by the panel.

(5) The panel shall—

(A) not later than 60 days after the date on which the panel receives an acquisition proposal described in subsection (c)(4), transmit to the small business or nontraditional defense contractor that submitted the proposal a notification regarding whether the acquisition proposal has been selected under paragraph (4) for review and evaluation;

(B) to the maximum extent practicable, complete the review and evaluation of each selected acquisition proposal not later than 120 days after the date on which such proposal is selected under paragraph (4); and

(C) after completing the review and evaluation of an acquisition proposal, transmit the results of that review and evaluation to the small business or nontraditional defense contractor that submitted the proposal.

(6) The Secretary shall ensure that the panel, in reviewing and evaluating acquisition proposals under this subsection, has the authority to obtain assistance, to a reasonable extent, from the appropriate technical resources of the laboratories, research, development, and engineering centers, test and evaluation activities, and other elements of the Department of Defense.

(7) If, after completing review and evaluation of an acquisition proposal, the panel determines that such proposal represents a unique and valuable approach for meeting a defense requirement or technology development goal of the Department of Defense that relates to the mission of the Department of Defense to combat terrorism, the panel shall submit that determination to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, together with any recommendations that the panel considers appropriate regarding such proposal.

(8) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics may provide funding for acquisition proposals with respect to which the panel has submitted a determination under paragraph (7) through appropriate accounts of the military departments, Defense Agencies, the Small Business Innovative Research program, or any other acquisition program.

(9) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that a member of the panel has no conflict of interest with respect to the review and evaluation of an acquisition proposal by the panel.

(e) NONTRADITIONAL DEFENSE CONTRACTOR DEFINED.—In this section, the term "nontraditional defense contractor" means an entity that has not, for at least one year prior to the date of the enactment of this Act, entered into, or performed with respect to, any contract described in paragraph (1) or (2) of section 845(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (10 U.S.C. 2371 note).

SEC. 245. VEHICLE FUEL CELL PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a program for the development of vehicle fuel cell technology.

(b) GOALS AND OBJECTIVES.—The goals and objectives of the program shall be as follows:

(1) To identify and support technological advances that are necessary for the development of fuel cell technology for use in vehicles of types to be used by the Department of Defense.

(2) To ensure that critical technology advances are shared among the various fuel cell technology programs within the Federal Government.

(3) To maximize the leverage of Federal funds that are used for the development of fuel cell technology.

(c) CONTENT OF PROGRAM.—The program shall include—

(1) development of vehicle propulsion technologies and fuel cell auxiliary power units, together with pilot projects for the demonstration of such technologies, as appropriate; and

(2) development of technologies necessary to address critical issues with respect to vehicle fuel cells, such as issues relating to hydrogen storage and hydrogen fuel infrastructure.

(d) COOPERATION WITH INDUSTRY.—(1) The Secretary shall carry out the program in cooperation with companies selected by the Secretary. The Secretary shall select such companies from among—

(A) companies in the automobile and truck manufacturing industry;

(B) companies in the business of supplying systems and components to that industry; and

(C) companies in any other industries that the Secretary considers appropriate.

(2) The Secretary may enter into a cooperative agreement with one or more companies selected under paragraph (1) to establish an entity for carrying out activities required by subsection (c).

(3) The Secretary shall ensure that companies referred to in paragraph (1) collectively contribute, in cash or in kind, not less than one-half of the total cost of carrying out the program under this section.

(e) COORDINATION WITH OTHER FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Secretary shall carry out the program using a coordinating mechanism for sharing information and resources with the Department of Energy and other Federal agencies.

(f) INITIAL FUNDING.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by section 201(4), $10,000,000 shall be available for the program required by this section.

SEC. 246. DEFENSE NANOTECHNOLOGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a defense nanotechnology research and development program.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the program are as follows:

(1) To ensure United States global superiority in nanotechnology necessary for meeting national security requirements.

(2) To coordinate all nanoscale research and development within the Department of Defense, and to provide for interagency cooperation and collaboration on nanoscale research and development between the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies of the United States that are involved in nanoscale research and development.

(3) To develop and manage a portfolio of fundamental and applied nanoscience and engineering research initiatives that is stable, consistent, and balanced across scientific disciplines.

(4) To accelerate the transition and deployment of technologies and concepts derived from nanoscale research and development into the Armed Forces, and to establish policies, procedures, and standards for measuring the success of such efforts.

(5) To collect, synthesize, and disseminate critical information on nanoscale research and development.

(c) ADMINISTRATION.—In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall act through the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, who shall supervise the planning, management, and coordination of the program. The Director, in consultation with the Secretaries of the military departments and the heads of participating Defense Agencies and other departments and agencies of the United States, shall—

(1) prescribe a set of long-term challenges and a set of specific technical goals for the program;

(2) develop a coordinated and integrated research and investment plan for meeting the long-term challenges and achieving the specific technical goals that builds upon the Department's increased investment in nanotechnology research and development and the National Nanotechnology Initiative; and

(3) develop memoranda of agreement, joint funding agreements, and other cooperative arrangements necessary for meeting the long-term challenges and achieving the specific technical goals.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than March 1 of each of 2004, 2005, 2006, and 2007, the Director of Defense Research and Engineering shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the program. The report shall contain the following matters:

(1) A review of—

(A) the long-term challenges and specific technical goals of the program; and

(B) the progress made toward meeting those challenges and achieving those goals.

(2) An assessment of current and proposed funding levels, including the adequacy of such funding levels to support program activities.

(3) A review of the coordination of activities within the Department of Defense, with other departments and agencies, and with the National Nanotechnology Initiative.

(4) An assessment of the extent to which effective technology transition paths have been established as a result of activities under the program.

(5) Recommendations for additional program activities to meet emerging national security requirements.

SEC. 247. ACTIVITIES OF THE DEFENSE EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM TO STIMULATE COMPETITIVE RESEARCH.

Subsection (c) of section 257 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337; 10 U.S.C. 2358 note) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "research grants" and inserting "grants for research and instrumentation to support such research"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Any other activities that are determined necessary to further the achievement of the objectives of the program.".

SEC. 248. FOUR-YEAR EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY OF DARPA TO AWARD PRIZES FOR ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY ACHIEVEMENTS AND ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY OF MILITARY DEPARTMENTS AND DEFENSE AGENCIES TO AWARD PRIZES FOR ACHIEVEMENTS IN PROMOTING EDUCATION.

(a) EXTENSION.—Section 2374a(f) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "September 30, 2003" and inserting "September 30, 2007".

(b) REPORT ON ADMINISTRATION OF PROGRAM.—(1) Not later than December 31, 2002, the Director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the proposal of the Director for the administration of the program to award prizes for advanced technology achievements under section 2374a of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The report shall include the following:

(A) The results of consultations by the Director with officials of the military departments regarding the technology areas for which competitive prizes would be established.

(B) A description of the proposed goals of the competitions that would be established under the program, including the technology areas to be promoted by the competitions and the relationship of such areas to military missions of the Department of Defense.

(C) The proposed rules for the competitions that would be established under the program and a description of the proposed management of the competitions.

(D) A description of the manner in which the amounts of the cash prizes awarded and claimed under the program would be allocated among the accounts of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency for recording as obligations and expenditures.

(E) For each competition that would be established under the program, a statement of the reasons why the competition is a preferable means of promoting basic, advanced, and applied research, advanced technology development, or prototype projects, rather than other means of promoting such activities, including contracts, grants, cooperative agreements, and other transactions.

(c) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY TO AWARD CASH PRIZES FOR PROMOTING EDUCATION IN SUPPORT OF DOD MISSIONS.—(1) Chapter 139 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§2374b. Prizes for achievements in promoting science, mathematics, engineering, or technology education

"(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretaries of the military departments and the heads of defense agencies may each carry out a program to award cash prizes in recognition of outstanding achievements that are designed to promote science, mathematics, engineering, or technology education in support of the missions of the Department of Defense.

"(b) COMPETITION REQUIREMENTS.—Each program under subsection (a) shall use a competitive process for the selection of recipients of cash prizes.

"(c) LIMITATION.—For any single program under subsection (a), the total amount made available for award of cash prizes in a fiscal year may not exceed $1,000,000.

"(d) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER AUTHORITY.—The program under subsection (a) may be carried out in conjunction with or in addition to the exercise of any other authority to acquire, support, or stimulate basic and applied research, advanced technology development, or prototype development projects.

"(e) ANNUAL REPORT.—Promptly after the end of each fiscal year, each Secretary of a military department and each head of a defense agency carrying out a program under subsection (a) shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the administration of that program for that fiscal year.

"(f) PERIOD OF AUTHORITY.—The authority to award prizes under subsection (a) shall terminate at the end of September 30, 2006.".

"2374b. Prizes for achievements in promoting science, mathematics, engineering, or technology education.".

SEC. 249. PLAN FOR FIVE-YEAR PROGRAM FOR ENHANCEMENT OF MEASUREMENT AND SIGNATURES INTELLIGENCE CAPABILITIES OF THE UNITED STATES THROUGH INCORPORATION OF RESULTS OF BASIC RESEARCH ON SENSORS.

(a) CONGRESSIONAL FINDING.—Congress finds that the national interest will be served by the rapid exploitation of basic research on sensors for purposes of enhancing the measurement and signatures intelligence (MASINT) capabilities of the United States.

(b) PLAN FOR RESEARCH PROGRAM.—(1) Not later than March 31, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a plan for a five-year program of research intended to provide for the incorporation of the results of basic research on sensors into the measurement and signatures intelligence systems of the United States, to the extent the results of such research is applicable to such systems. Such program shall include the review and assessment of basic research on sensors for purpose of such incorporation, including both basic research on sensors conducted by the Government and basic research on sensors conducted by non-governmental entities.

(2) The plan submitted under paragraph (1) shall provide that the activities to be carried out under the program provided for in the plan shall be carried out by a consortium consisting of such governmental and non-governmental entities as the Secretary considers appropriate for purposes of incorporating the broadest practicable range of sensor capabilities into the systems referred to in paragraph (1). The consortium may include national laboratories, universities, and private sector entities.

(3) The plan shall include a proposal for the funding of activities under the five-year program provided for in the plan, including cost-sharing by non-governmental participants in the consortium under paragraph (2).

Sec. 345. Comptroller General study of adequacy of compensation provided for teachers in the Department of Defense Overseas Dependents' Schools.

Subtitle F—Information Technology

Sec. 351. Annual submission of information regarding information technology capital assets.
Sec. 352. Policy regarding acquisition of information assurance and information assurance-enabled information technology products.
Sec. 353. Installation and connection policy and procedures regarding Defense Switch Network.

Subtitle G—Other Matters

Sec. 361. Distribution of monthly reports on allocation of funds within operation and maintenance budget subactivities.
Sec. 362. Continuation of arsenal support program initiative.
Sec. 363. Extension of work safety demonstration program.
Sec. 364. Condition on authority of Defense Security Service to impose fees on fee-for-service basis.
Sec. 365. Logistics support and services for weapon systems contractors.

Sec. 366. Training range sustainment plan, Global Status of Resources and Training System, and training range inventory.

Sec. 367. Engineering study and environmental analysis of road modifications in vicinity of Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

Sec. 368. Reauthorization of warranty claims recovery pilot program.

Sec. 369. Expanded eligibility for loan, gift, or exchange of documents, historical artifacts, and condemned or obsolete combat materiel.

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

SEC. 301. OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE FUNDING.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for expenses, not otherwise provided for, for operation and maintenance, in amounts as follows:

(1) For the Army, $23,922,251,000.

(2) For the Navy, $29,264,939,000.

(3) For the Marine Corps, $3,559,636,000.

(4) For the Air Force, $27,419,488,000.

(5) For Defense-wide activities, $14,145,310,000.

(6) For the Army Reserve, $1,985,110,000.

(7) For the Naval Reserve, $1,233,759,000.

(8) For the Marine Corps Reserve, $189,532,000.

(9) For the Air Force Reserve, $2,160,604,000.

(10) For the Army National Guard, $4,155,067,000.

(11) For the Air National Guard, $4,104,810,000.

(12) For the Defense Inspector General, $155,165,000.

(13) For the United States Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces, $9,614,000.

(14) For Environmental Restoration, Army, $395,900,000.

(15) For Environmental Restoration, Navy, $256,948,000.

(16) For Environmental Restoration, Air Force, $389,773,000.

(17) For Environmental Restoration, Defense-wide, $23,498,000.

(18) For Environmental Restoration, Formerly Used Defense Sites, $252,102,000.

(19) For Overseas Humanitarian, Disaster, and Civic Aid programs, $58,400,000.

(20) For Drug Interdiction and Counter-drug Activities, Defense-wide, $859,907,000.

(21) For the Kaho'olawe Island Conveyance, Remediation, and Environmental Restoration Trust Fund, $25,000,000.

(22) For Defense Health Program, $14,123,038,000.

(23) For Cooperative Threat Reduction programs, $416,700,000.

(24) For Support for International Sporting Competitions, Defense, $19,000,000.

(25) For overseas contingency operations transfer fund, $17,844,000.

SEC. 302. WORKING CAPITAL FUNDS.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for the use of the Armed Forces and other activities and agencies of the Department of Defense for providing capital for working capital and revolving funds in amounts as follows:

(1) For the Defense Working Capital Funds, $387,156,000

(2) For the National Defense Sealift Fund, $934,129,000.

(3) For the Defense Commissary Agency Working Capital Fund, $969,200,000.

(4) For the Pentagon Reservation Maintenance Revolving Fund, $328,000,000.

SEC. 303. ARMED FORCES RETIREMENT HOME.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003 from the Armed Forces Retirement Home Trust Fund the sum of $69,921,000 for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Home.

SEC. 304. GRANT TO NATIONAL GUARD YOUTH FOUNDATION.

Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 301(5) for administrative and service-wide activities for civil-military programs, the Secretary of Defense may use up to $2,500,000 to make a grant to the National Guard Youth Foundation to support the efforts of the Foundation to mobilize individuals, groups, and organizations to build and strengthen the character and competence of youth in the United States.

Subtitle B—Environmental Provisions

SEC. 311. ENHANCEMENT OF AUTHORITY ON COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL PURPOSES.

Section 2701(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (3)";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph (2):

"(2) CROSS-FISCAL YEAR AGREEMENTS.—An agreement with an agency under paragraph (1) may be for a period that begins in one fiscal year and ends in another fiscal year so long as the period of the agreement does not exceed two years.".

SEC. 312. SINGLE POINT OF CONTACT FOR POLICY AND BUDGETING ISSUES REGARDING UNEXPLODED ORDNANCE, DISCARDED MILITARY MUNITIONS, AND MUNITIONS CONSTITUENTS.

Section 2701 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) UXO PROGRAM MANAGER.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall establish a program manager who shall serve as the single point of contact in the Department of Defense for policy and budgeting issues involving the characterization, remediation, and management of explosive and related risks with respect to unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, and munitions constituents at defense sites (as such terms are defined in section 2710 of this title) that pose a threat to human health or safety.

"(2) The authority to establish the program manager may be delegated to the Secretary of a military department, who may delegate the authority to the Under Secretary of that military department. The authority may not be further delegated.

"(3) The program manager may establish an independent advisory and review panel that may include representatives of the National Academy of Sciences, nongovernmental organizations with expertise regarding unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, or munitions constituents, the Environmental Protection Agency, States (as defined in section 2710 of this title), and tribal governments. If established, the panel shall report annually to Congress on progress made by the Department of Defense to address unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, or munitions constituents at defense sites and make such recommendations as the panel considers appropriate.".

SEC. 313. AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL RESPONSES.

(a) RESTATEMENT AND MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY.—Chapter 160 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 2707 as section 2700 and transferring such section to appear immediately after the table of sections at the beginning of such chapter; and

(2) by inserting after section 2706 the following new section 2707:

"§2707. Environmental restoration projects for environmental responses

"(a) ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION PROJECTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department may carry out an environmental restoration project if that Secretary determines that the project is necessary to carry out a response under this chapter or CERCLA.

"(b) TREATMENT OF PROJECT.—Any construction, development, conversion, or extension of a structure, and any installation of equipment, that is included in an environmental restoration project under this section may not be considered military construction (as that term is defined in section 2801(a) of this title).

"(c) SOURCE OF FUNDS.—Funds authorized for deposit in an account established by section 2703(a) of this title shall be the only source of funds to conduct an environmental restoration project under this section.

"(d) ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION PROJECT DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'environmental restoration project' includes any construction, development, conversion, or extension of a structure, or installation of equipment, in direct support of a response.".

(b) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED PROVISION.—Section 2810 of such title is repealed.

(1) in section 2700 (as redesignated by subsection (a))—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after "In this chapter:" the following new paragraph:

"(1) The term 'CERCLA' means the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.)."; and

(2) in section 2701(a)(2), by striking "the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (hereinafter in this chapter referred to as 'CERCLA') (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.)" and inserting "CERCLA".

(d) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 160 of such title is amended—

(A) by inserting before the item relating to section 2701 the following new item:

"2700. Definitions."; and

(B) by striking the item relating to section 2707 and inserting the following new item:

"2707. Environmental restoration projects for environmental responses.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 169 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2810.

SEC. 314. PROCUREMENT OF ENVIRONMENTALLY PREFERABLE PROCUREMENT ITEMS.

(a) TRACKING SYSTEM.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop and implement an effective and efficient tracking system to identify the extent to which the Defense Logistics Agency procures environmentally preferable procurement items or procurement items made with recovered material. The system shall provide for the separate tracking, to the maximum extent practicable, of the procurement of each category of procurement items that, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, has been determined to be environmentally preferable or made with recovered material.

(b) ASSESSMENT OF TRAINING AND EDUCATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall assess the need to establish a program, or enhance existing programs, for training and educating Department of Defense procurement officials to ensure that they are aware of any Department requirements, preferences, or goals for the procurement of environmentally preferable procurement items or procurement items made with recovered material.

(c) Reporting Requirement.—Not later than March 1, 2004, and each March 1 thereafter through 2007, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report detailing the results obtained from the tracking system developed under subsection (a).

(d) Relation to Other Laws.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter the requirements of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (40 U.S.C. 6901 et seq.).

(e) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "environmentally preferable", in the case of a procurement item, means that the item has a lesser or reduced effect on human health and the environment when compared with competing products that serve the same purpose. The comparison may consider raw materials acquisition, production, manufacturing, packaging, distribution, reuse, operation, maintenance, or disposal of the product.

(2) The terms "procurement item" and "recovered material" have the meanings given such terms in section 1004 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (40 U.S.C. 6903).

SEC. 315. INCIDENTAL TAKING OF MIGRATORY BIRDS DURING MILITARY READINESS ACTIVITIES.

(a) Interim Authority for Incidental Takings.—During the period described in subsection (c), section 2 of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (16 U.S.C. 703) shall not apply to the incidental taking of a migratory bird by a member of the Armed Forces during a military readiness activity authorized by the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of the military department concerned.

(b) Identification of Measures to Minimize Impact of Activities.—During the periods described in subsections (c) and (d), the Secretary of Defense shall, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, identify measures—

(1) to minimize and mitigate, to the extent practicable, any adverse impacts of authorized military readiness activities on affected species of migratory birds; and

(2) to monitor the impacts of such military readiness activities on affected species of migratory birds.

(c) Period of Application for Interim Authority.—The period described in this subsection is the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending on the date on which the Secretary of the Interior publishes in the Federal Register a notice that—

(1) regulations authorizing the incidental taking of migratory birds by members of the Armed Forces have been prescribed in accordance with the requirements of subsection (d);

(2) all legal challenges to the regulations and to the manner of their promulgation (if any) have been exhausted as provided in subsection (e); and

(3) the regulations have taken effect.

(d) Incidental Takings After Interim Period.—(1) Not later than the expiration of the one-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall exercise the authority of that Secretary under section 3(a) of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (16 U.S.C. 704(a)) to prescribe regulations to exempt the Armed Forces for the incidental taking of migratory birds during military readiness activities authorized by the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of the military department concerned.

(2) The Secretary of the Interior shall exercise authority under paragraph (1) with the concurrence of the Secretary of Defense.

(e) Limitation on Judicial Review.—An action seeking judicial review of regulations prescribed pursuant to this section or of the manner of their promulgation must be filed in the appropriate Federal court by not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning on the date on which such regulations are published in the Federal Register. Upon the expiration of such period and the exhaustion of any legal challenges to the regulations pursuant to any action filed in such period, there shall be no further judicial review of such regulations or of the manner of their promulgation.

(f) Military Readiness Activity.—(1) In this section the term "military readiness activity" includes—

(A) all training and operations of the Armed Forces that relate to combat; and

(B) the adequate and realistic testing of military equipment, vehicles, weapons, and sensors for proper operation and suitability for combat use.

(2) The term does not include—

(A) the routine operation of installation operating support functions, such as administrative offices, military exchanges, commissaries, water treatment facilities, storage facilities, schools, housing, motor pools, laundries, morale, welfare, and recreation activities, shops, and mess halls;

(B) the operation of industrial activities; or

(C) the construction or demolition of facilities used for a purpose described in subparagraph (A) or (B).

Subtitle C—Commissaries and Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentalities

SEC. 321. AUTHORITY FOR EACH MILITARY DEPARTMENT TO PROVIDE BASE OPERATING SUPPORT TO FISHER HOUSES.

Section 2493(f) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Base Operating Support.—The Secretary of a military department may provide base operating support for Fisher Houses associated with health care facilities of that military department.".

SEC. 322. USE OF COMMISSARY STORES AND MWR RETAIL FACILITIES BY MEMBERS OF NATIONAL GUARD SERVING IN NATIONAL EMERGENCY.

(a) Additional Basis for Authorized Use.—Section 1063a of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting "or national emergency" after "federally declared disaster"; and

(2) in subsection (c), by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) National Emergency.—The term 'national emergency' means a national emergency declared by the President or Congress.".

(b) Clerical Amendments.—(1) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

"§1063a. Use of commissary stores and MWR retail facilities: members of National Guard serving in federally declared disaster or national emergency".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 54 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 1063a and inserting the following new item:

"1063a. Use of commissary stores and MWR retail facilities: members of National Guard serving in federally declared disaster or national emergency.".

SEC. 323. UNIFORM FUNDING AND MANAGEMENT OF MORALE, WELFARE, AND RECREATION PROGRAMS.

(a) In General.—Chapter 147 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§2494. Uniform funding and management of morale, welfare, and recreation programs

"(a) Authority for Uniform Funding and Management.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, funds appropriated to the Department of Defense and available for morale, welfare, and recreation programs may be treated as nonappropriated funds and expended in accordance with laws applicable to the expenditures of nonappropriated funds. When made available for morale, welfare, and recreation programs under such regulations, appropriated funds shall be considered to be nonappropriated funds for all purposes and shall remain available until expended.

"(b) Conditions on Availability.—Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense may be made available to support a morale, welfare, or recreation program only if the program is authorized to receive appropriated fund support and only in the amounts the program is authorized to receive.

"(c) Conversion of Employment Positions.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may identify positions of employees in morale, welfare, and recreation programs within the Department of Defense who are paid with appropriated funds whose status may be converted from the status of an employee paid with appropriated funds to the status of an employee of a nonappropriated fund instrumentality.

"(2) The status of an employee in a position identified by the Secretary under paragraph (1) may, with the consent of the employee, be converted to the status of an employee of a nonappropriated fund instrumentality. An employee who does not consent to the conversion may not be removed from the position because of the failure to provide such consent.

"(3) The conversion of an employee from the status of an employee paid by appropriated funds to the status of an employee of a nonappropriated fund instrumentality shall be without a break in service for the concerned employee. The conversion shall not entitle an employee to severance pay, back pay or separation pay under subchapter IX of chapter 55 of title 5, or be considered an involuntary separation or other adverse personnel action entitling an employee to any right or benefit under such title or any other provision of law or regulation.

"(4) In this subsection, the term 'an employee of a nonappropriated fund instrumentality' means an employee described in section 2105(c) of title 5.".

"2494. Uniform funding and management of morale, welfare, and recreation programs.".

SEC. 324. REBATE AGREEMENTS UNDER THE SPECIAL SUPPLEMENTAL FOOD PROGRAM.

(a) Applicability to Navy Exchange Markets.—Paragraph (1)(A) of section 1060a(e) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "or Navy Exchange Markets" after "commissary stores".

(b) Increased Maximum Period of Agreement.—Paragraph (3) of such section is amended by striking "subsection may not exceed one year" in the first sentence and inserting "subsection, including any period of extension of the contract by modification of the contract, exercise of an option, or other cause, may not exceed three years".

Subtitle D—Workplace and Depot Issues

SEC. 331. NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS IN CONNECTION WITH REQUIRED STUDIES FOR CONVERSION OF COMMERCIAL OR INDUSTRIAL TYPE FUNCTIONS TO CONTRACTOR PERFORMANCE.

Subsection (c) of section 2461 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) SUBMISSION OF ANALYSIS RESULTS.—(1) Upon the completion of an analysis of a commercial or industrial type function described in subsection (a) for possible change to performance by the private sector, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the analysis, including the results of the examinations required by subsection (b)(3).

"(2) The report shall also contain the following:

"(A) The date when the analysis of the function was commenced.

"(B) The Secretary's certification that the Government calculation of the cost of performance of the function by Department of Defense civilian employees is based on an estimate of the most cost effective manner for performance of the function by Department of Defense civilian employees.

"(C) The number of Department of Defense civilian employees who were performing the function when the analysis was commenced and the number of such employees whose employment was or will be terminated or otherwise affected by changing to performance of the function by the private sector or by implementation of the most efficient organization of the function.

"(D) The Secretary's certification that the factors considered in the examinations performed under subsection (b)(3), and in the making of the decision regarding changing to performance of the function by the private sector or retaining performance in the most efficient organization of the function, did not include any predetermined personnel constraint or limitation in terms of man years, end strength, full-time equivalent positions, or maximum number of employees.

"(E) A statement of the potential economic effect of implementing the decision regarding changing to performance of the function by the private sector or retaining performance in the most efficient organization of the function on each affected local community, as determined in the examination under subsection (b)(3)(B)(ii).

"(F) A schedule for completing the change to performance of the function by the private sector or implementing the most efficient organization of the function.

"(G) In the case of a commercial or industrial type function performed at a Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence designated under section 2474(a) of this title or an Army ammunition plant, a description of the effect that the manner of performance of the function, and administration of the resulting contract if any, will have on the overhead costs of the center or ammunition plant, as the case may be.

"(H) The Secretary's certification that the entire analysis is available for examination.

"(3)(A) If a decision is made to change the commercial or industrial type function that was the subject of the analysis to performance by the private sector, the change of the function to contractor performance may not begin until after the submission of the report required by paragraph (1).

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), in the case of a commercial or industrial type function performed at a Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence designated under section 2474(a) of this title or an Army ammunition plant, the change of the function to contractor performance may not begin until at least 60 days after the submission of the report.".

SEC. 332. TEMPORARY AUTHORITY FOR CONTRACTOR PERFORMANCE OF SECURITY-GUARD FUNCTIONS TO MEET INCREASED REQUIREMENTS SINCE SEPTEMBER 11, 2001.

(a) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department may enter into a contract for any increased performance of security-guard functions at a military installation or facility under the jurisdiction of the Secretary undertaken in response to the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, and may waive the prohibition under section 2465(a) of title 10, United States Code, with respect to such contract, if—

(1) without the contract, members of the Armed Forces are or would be used to perform the increased security-guard functions; and

(2) the Secretary concerned determines that—

(A) the recruiting and training standards for the personnel who are to perform the security-guard functions at the installation or facility under the contract are comparable to the recruiting and training standards for the personnel of the Department of Defense who perform security-guard functions at military installations and facilities under the jurisdiction of the Secretary;

(B) the contractor personnel performing such functions under the contract will be effectively supervised, reviewed, and evaluated; and

(C) the performance of such functions by the contractor personnel will not result in a reduction in the security of the installation or facility.

(b) INCREASED PERFORMANCE DEFINED.—In this section, the term "increased performance", with respect to security-guard functions at a military installation or facility, means—

(1) in the case of an installation or facility where no security-guard functions were performed as of September 10, 2001, the entire scope or extent of the performance of security-guard functions at the installation or facility after such date; and

(2) in the case of an installation or facility where security-guard functions were performed within a lesser scope of requirements or to a lesser extent as of September 10, 2001, than after such date, the increment of the performance of security-guard functions at the installation or facility that exceeds such lesser scope of requirements or extent of performance.

(c) EXPIRATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority for contractor performance of security-guard functions under this section shall terminate at the end of the three-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act. The term of any contract entered into using the authority provided by this section may not extend beyond the end of such period.

(d) NEEDS ASSESSMENT AND PLAN.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) identify any requirements for the performance of security-guard functions at military installations and facilities under the jurisdiction of the Secretary or the Secretary of a military department that are expected to continue for more than three years after the date of the enactment of this Act and, in the absence of further action by the Secretary or Congress, would otherwise be performed by members of the Armed Forces; and

(2) submit to the congressional defense committees a plan for meeting those requirements on a long-term basis.

SEC. 333. REPEAL OF OBSOLETE PROVISION REGARDING DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR WORKLOADS THAT WERE PERFORMED AT CLOSED OR REALIGNED MILITARY INSTALLATIONS.

(a) REPEAL.—Section 2469a of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 146 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2469a.

SEC. 334. EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN EXPENDITURES FROM LIMITATION ON PRIVATE SECTOR PERFORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE.

Section 2474(f) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "Amounts expended out of funds described in paragraph (2) for the performance of a depot-level maintenance and repair workload by non-Federal Government personnel at a Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence" and inserting "Amounts expended for the performance of a depot-level maintenance and repair workload by non-Federal Government personnel at a Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence under any contract entered into during fiscal years 2003 through 2006";

(2) by striking paragraph (2); and

(3) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

Subtitle E—Defense Dependents Education

SEC. 341. ASSISTANCE TO LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES THAT BENEFIT DEPENDENTS OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

(a) CONTINUATION OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PROGRAM FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 301(5) for operation and maintenance for Defense-wide activities, $30,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of providing educational agencies assistance to local educational agencies.

(b) NOTIFICATION.—Not later than June 30, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall notify each local educational agency that is eligible for educational agencies assistance for fiscal year 2003 of—

(1) that agency's eligibility for the assistance; and

(2) the amount of the assistance for which that agency is eligible.

(c) DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of Defense shall disburse funds made available under subsection (a) not later than 30 days after the date on which notification to the eligible local educational agencies is provided pursuant to subsection (b).

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "educational agencies assistance" means assistance authorized under section 386(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993 (Public Law 102–484; 20 U.S.C. 7703 note).

(2) The term "local educational agency" has the meaning given that term in section 8013(9) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7713(9)).

SEC. 342. HOUSING BENEFITS FOR UNACCOMPANIED TEACHERS REQUIRED TO LIVE AT GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL STATION, CUBA.

Section 7 of the Defense Department Overseas Teachers Pay and Personnel Practices Act (20 U.S.C. 905) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f)(1) A teacher assigned to teach at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station, Cuba, who is not accompanied at such station by any dependent shall be offered for lease any available military family housing at such station that is suitable for occupancy by the teacher and is not needed to house members of the armed forces and dependents accompanying them or other civilian personnel and any dependents accompanying them.

"(2) For any period for which military family housing is leased under paragraph (1) to a teacher described in such paragraph, the teacher shall receive a quarters allowance in the amount determined under subsection (b). The teacher is entitled to such quarters allowance without regard to whether other Government furnished quarters are available for occupancy by the teacher without charge to the teacher.".

SEC. 343. OPTIONS FOR FUNDING DEPENDENT SUMMER SCHOOL PROGRAMS.

Section 1402(d)(2) of the Defense Dependents' Education Act of 1978 (20 U.S.C. 921(d)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) The Secretary shall provide any summer school program under this subsection on the same financial basis as programs offered during the regular school year, except that the Secretary may charge reasonable fees for all or portions of such summer school programs to the extent that the Secretary determines appropriate.".

SEC. 344. IMPACT AID ELIGIBILITY FOR LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES AFFECTED BY PRIVATIZATION OF MILITARY HOUSING.

Section 8003(b)(2) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7703(b)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(H) Eligibility for heavily impacted local educational agencies affected by privatization of military housing.—

"(i) Eligibility.—For any fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 2003, a heavily impacted local educational agency that received a basic support payment under subparagraph (A) for the prior fiscal year, but is ineligible for such payment for the current fiscal year under subparagraph (B) or (C), as the case may be, by reason of the conversion of military housing units to private housing described in clause (iii), shall be deemed to meet the eligibility requirements under subparagraph (B) or (C), as the case may be, for the period during which the housing units are undergoing such conversion.

"(ii) Amount of payment.—The amount of a payment to a heavily impacted local educational agency for a fiscal year by reason of the application of clause (i), and calculated in accordance with subparagraph (D) or (E) (as the case may be), shall be based on the number of children in average daily attendance in the schools of such agency for the fiscal year.

"(iii) Conversion of military housing units to private housing described.—For purposes of clause (i), 'conversion of military housing units to private housing' means the conversion of military housing units to private housing units pursuant to subchapter IV of chapter 169 of title 10, United States Code, or pursuant to any other related provision of law.".

SEC. 345. COMPTROLLER GENERAL STUDY OF ADEQUACY OF COMPENSATION PROVIDED FOR TEACHERS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE OVERSEAS DEPENDENTS' SCHOOLS.

(a) Additional Consideration for Study.—Subsection (b) of section 354 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1064) is amended by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) Whether the process for setting teacher compensation is efficient and cost effective.".

(b) Extension of Time for Reporting.—Subsection (c) of such section is amended by striking "May 1, 2002" and inserting "December 12, 2002".

Subtitle F—Information Technology

SEC. 351. ANNUAL SUBMISSION OF INFORMATION REGARDING INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY CAPITAL ASSETS.

(a) Requirement To Submit Information.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which the President submits the budget for a fiscal year to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress information on the following information technology capital assets, including information technology capital assets that are a national security system, of the Department of Defense:

(1) Information technology capital assets not covered by paragraph (2) that have an estimated total cost for the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted in excess of $10,000,000.

(2) Information technology capital assets that have an estimated total cost for the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted in excess of $30,000,000 and an estimated total life cycle cost (as computed in fiscal year 2003 constant dollars) in excess of $120,000,000.

(b) Required Information For Low-Threshold Assets.—With respect to each information technology capital asset described in subsection (a)(1), the Secretary of Defense shall include the following information:

(1) The name of the information technology capital asset.

(2) The function of the asset.

(3) The total cost of the asset for the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted, the current fiscal year, and the preceding fiscal year.

(c) Required Information For High-Threshold Assets.—With respect to each information technology capital asset described in subsection (a)(2), the Secretary of Defense shall include the following information:

(1) The name and identifying acronym of the information technology capital asset.

(2) The date of initiation of the asset.

(3) A summary of performance measurements and metrics.

(4) The total amount of funds, by appropriation account, appropriated and obligated for prior fiscal years, with a specific breakout of such information for the two preceding fiscal years.

(5) The funds, by appropriation account, requested for the next fiscal year.

(6) The name of each prime contractor and the work to be performed.

(7) Program management and management oversight information.

(8) The original baseline cost and most current baseline information.

(9) Information regarding compliance with the provisions of law enacted or amended by the Government Performance Results Act of 1993 (Public Law 103–62; 107 Stat. 285) and the Clinger–Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104–106; 110 Stat. 642).

(d) Total Cost Determinations.—In estimating the total cost for a fiscal year or total life cycle cost of an information technology capital asset, the Secretary of Defense shall consider research and development costs, procurement costs, and operation and maintenance costs related to the information technology capital asset.

(e) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "information technology" has the meaning given that term in section 11101 of title 40, United States Code.

(2) The term "capital asset" has the meaning given that term in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–11.

(3) The term "national security system" has the meaning given that term in section 11103 of title 40, United States Code.

SEC. 352. POLICY REGARDING ACQUISITION OF INFORMATION ASSURANCE AND INFORMATION ASSURANCE-ENABLED INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY PRODUCTS.

(a) Establishment of Policy.—The Secretary of Defense shall establish a policy to limit the acquisition of information assurance and information assurance-enabled information technology products to those products that have been evaluated and validated in accordance with appropriate criteria, schemes, or programs.

(b) Waiver.—As part of the policy, the Secretary of Defense shall authorize specified officials of the Department of Defense to waive the limitations of the policy upon a determination in writing that application of the limitations to the acquisition of a particular information assurance or information assurance-enabled information technology product would not be in the national security interest of the United States.

(c) Implementation.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the policy is uniformly implemented throughout the Department of Defense.

SEC. 353. INSTALLATION AND CONNECTION POLICY AND PROCEDURES REGARDING DEFENSE SWITCH NETWORK.

(a) Establishment of Policy and Procedures.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall establish clear and uniform policy and procedures, applicable to the military departments and Defense Agencies, regarding the installation and connection of telecom switches to the Defense Switch Network.

(b) Elements of Policy and Procedures.—The policy and procedures shall address at a minimum the following:

(1) Clear interoperability and compatibility requirements for procuring, certifying, installing, and connecting telecom switches to the Defense Switch Network.

(2) Current, complete, and enforceable testing, validation, and certification procedures needed to ensure the interoperability and compatibility requirements are satisfied.

(c) Exceptions.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may specify certain circumstances in which—

(A) the requirements for testing, validation, and certification of telecom switches may be waived; or

(B) interim authority for the installation and connection of telecom switches to the Defense Switch Network may be granted.

(2) Only the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence may approve a waiver or grant of interim authority under paragraph (1). The authority to approve such a waiver or grant of interim authority may not be delegated.

(3) The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence shall consult with the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff before approving a waiver or grant of interim authority under paragraph (1).

(d) Inventory of Defense Switch Network.—The Secretary of Defense shall prepare and maintain an inventory of all telecom switches that, as of the date on which the Secretary issues the policy and procedures—

(1) are installed or connected to the Defense Switch Network; but

(2) have not been tested, validated, and certified by the Defense Information Systems Agency (Joint Interoperability Test Center).

(e) Interoperability Risks.—On an ongoing basis, the Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) identify and assess the interoperability risks that are associated with the installation or connection of uncertified switches to the Defense Switch Network and the maintenance of such switches on the Defense Switch Network; and

(2) develop and implement a plan to eliminate or mitigate such risks as identified.

(f) Telecom Switch Defined.—In this section, the term "telecom switch" means hardware or software designed to send and receive voice, data, or video signals across a network that provides customer voice, data, or video equipment access to the Defense Switch Network or public switched telecommunications networks.

The Secretary of Defense may not authorize the Defense Security Service to impose fees on a fee-for-service basis for the investigative services provided by the Defense Security Service unless the Secretary certifies in advance to the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate that the Defense Security Service has the financial systems in place to determine accurately the cost of such services.

SEC. 365. LOGISTICS SUPPORT AND SERVICES FOR WEAPON SYSTEMS CONTRACTORS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense may make available logistics support and logistics services to a contractor in support of the performance by the contractor of a contract for the construction, modification, or maintenance of a weapon system that is entered into by an official of the Department of Defense.

(b) SUPPORT CONTRACTS.—Any logistics support and logistics services to be provided under this section to a contractor in support of the performance of a contract described in subsection (a) shall be provided under a separate contract that is entered into by the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency with that contractor. The requirements of section 2208(h) of title 10, United States Code, and the regulations prescribed pursuant to such section shall apply to the contract between the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency and the contractor.

(c) SCOPE OF SUPPORT AND SERVICES.—The logistics support and logistics services that may be provided under this section in support of the performance of a contract described in subsection (a) are the distribution, disposal, and cataloging of materiel and repair parts necessary for the performance of that contract.

(d) LIMITATIONS.—(1) The number of contracts described in subsection (a) for which the Secretary of Defense makes logistics support and logistics services available under the authority of this section may not exceed five contracts. The total amount of the estimated costs of all such contracts for which logistics support and logistics services are made available under this section may not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) No contract entered into by the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency under subsection (b) may be for a period in excess of five years, including periods for which the contract is extended under options to extend the contract.

(e) REGULATIONS.—Before exercising the authority under this section, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe in regulations such requirements, conditions, and restrictions as the Secretary determines appropriate to ensure that logistics support and logistics services are provided under this section only when it is in the best interests of the United States to do so. The regulations shall include, at a minimum, the following:

(1) A requirement for the authority under this section to be used only for providing logistics support and logistics services in support of the performance of a contract that is entered into using competitive procedures (as defined in section 4 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403)).

(2) A requirement for the solicitation of offers for a contract described in subsection (a), for which logistics support and logistics services are to be made available under this section, to include—

(A) a statement that the logistics support and logistics services are to be made available under the authority of this section to any contractor awarded the contract, but only on a basis that does not require acceptance of the support and services; and

(B) a description of the range of the logistics support and logistics services that are to be made available to the contractor.

(3) A requirement for the rates charged a contractor for logistics support and logistics services provided to a contractor under this section to reflect the full cost to the United States of the resources used in providing the support and services, including the costs of resources used, but not paid for, by the Department of Defense.

(4) With respect to a contract described in subsection (a) that is being performed for a department or agency outside the Department of Defense, a prohibition, in accordance with applicable contracting procedures, on the imposition of any charge on that department or agency for any effort of Department of Defense personnel or the contractor to correct deficiencies in the performance of such contract.

(5) A prohibition on the imposition of any charge on a contractor for any effort of the contractor to correct a deficiency in the performance of logistics support and logistics services provided to the contractor under this section.

(f) RELATIONSHIP TO TREATY OBLIGATIONS.—The Secretary shall ensure that the exercise of authority under this section does not conflict with any obligation of the United States under any treaty or other international agreement.

(g) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—(1) The authority provided in this section shall expire on September 30, 2007.

(2) The expiration of the authority under this section does not terminate—

(A) any contract that was entered into by the Director of the Defense Logistics Agency under subsection (b) before the date specified in paragraph (1) or any obligation to provide logistics support and logistics services under that contract; or

(B) any authority to enter into a contract described in subsection (a) for which a solicitation of offers was issued in accordance with the regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (e)(2) before the date specified in paragraph (1) or to provide logistics support and logistics services to the contractor with respect to that contract in accordance with this section.

SEC. 366. TRAINING RANGE SUSTAINMENT PLAN, GLOBAL STATUS OF RESOURCES AND TRAINING SYSTEM, AND TRAINING RANGE INVENTORY.

(a) PLAN REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall develop a comprehensive plan for using existing authorities available to the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the military departments to address training constraints caused by limitations on the use of military lands, marine areas, and airspace that are available in the United States and overseas for training of the Armed Forces.

(2) As part of the preparation of the plan, the Secretary of Defense shall conduct the following:

(A) An assessment of current and future training range requirements of the Armed Forces.

(B) An evaluation of the adequacy of current Department of Defense resources (including virtual and constructive training assets as well as military lands, marine areas, and airspace available in the United States and overseas) to meet those current and future training range requirements.

(3) The plan shall include the following:

(A) Proposals to enhance training range capabilities and address any shortfalls in current Department of Defense resources identified pursuant to the assessment and evaluation conducted under paragraph (2).

(B) Goals and milestones for tracking planned actions and measuring progress.

(C) Projected funding requirements for implementing planned actions.

(D) Designation of an office in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and in each of the military departments that will have lead responsibility for overseeing implementation of the plan.

(4) At the same time as the President submits to Congress the budget for fiscal year 2004, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report describing the progress made in implementing this subsection, including—

(A) the plan developed under paragraph (1);

(B) the results of the assessment and evaluation conducted under paragraph (2); and

(C) any recommendations that the Secretary may have for legislative or regulatory changes to address training constraints identified pursuant to this section.

(5) At the same time as the President submits to Congress the budget for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2008, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report describing the progress made in implementing the plan and any additional actions taken, or to be taken, to address training constraints caused by limitations on the use of military lands, marine areas, and airspace.

(b) READINESS REPORTING IMPROVEMENT.—Not later than June 30, 2003, the Secretary of Defense, using existing measures within the authority of the Secretary, shall submit to Congress a report on the plans of the Department of Defense to improve the Global Status of Resources and Training System to reflect the readiness impact that training constraints caused by limitations on the use of military lands, marine areas, and airspace have on specific units of the Armed Forces.

(c) TRAINING RANGE INVENTORY.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall develop and maintain a training range inventory for each of the Armed Forces—

(A) to identify all available operational training ranges;

(B) to identify all training capacities and capabilities available at each training range; and

(C) to identify training constraints caused by limitations on the use of military lands, marine areas, and airspace at each training range.

(2) The Secretary of Defense shall submit an initial inventory to Congress at the same time as the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2004 and shall submit an updated inventory to Congress at the same time as the President submits the budget for fiscal years 2005 through 2008.

(d) GAO EVALUATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall transmit copies of each report required by subsections (a) and (b) to the Comptroller General. Within 60 days after receiving a report, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress an evaluation of the report.

(e) ARMED FORCES DEFINED.—In this section, the term "Armed Forces" means the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

SEC. 367. ENGINEERING STUDY AND ENVIRONMENTAL ANALYSIS OF ROAD MODIFICATIONS IN VICINITY OF FORT BELVOIR, VIRGINIA.

(a) STUDY AND ANALYSIS.—(1) The Secretary of the Army shall conduct a preliminary engineering study and environmental analysis to evaluate the feasibility of establishing a connector road between Richmond Highway (United States Route 1) and Telegraph Road in order to provide an alternative to Beulah Road (State Route 613) and Woodlawn Road (State Route 618) at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, which were closed as a force protection measure.

(2) It is the sense of Congress that the study and analysis should consider as one alternative the extension of Old Mill Road between Richmond Highway and Telegraph Road.

(b) CONSULTATION.—The study required by subsection (a) shall be conducted in consultation with the Department of Transportation of the Commonwealth of Virginia and Fairfax County, Virginia.

(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress a summary report on the study and analysis required by subsection (a). The summary report shall be submitted together with the budget justification materials in support of the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006 that is submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(d) FUNDING.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 301(a)(1) for the Army for operation and maintenance, $5,000,000 may be made available for the study and analysis required by subsection (a).

SEC. 368. REAUTHORIZATION OF WARRANTY CLAIMS RECOVERY PILOT PROGRAM.

Section 391 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 10 U.S.C. 2304 note), as amended by section 364 of Public Law 107–107 (115 Stat. 1068), is further amended—

(1) in subsection (f), by striking "September 30, 2003" and inserting "September 30, 2004"; and

(2) by striking subsection (g).

SEC. 369. EXPANDED ELIGIBILITY FOR LOAN, GIFT, OR EXCHANGE OF DOCUMENTS, HISTORICAL ARTIFACTS, AND CONDEMNED OR OBSOLETE COMBAT MATERIEL.

Section 2572(a)(3) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period the following: "or a nonprofit military aviation heritage foundation or association incorporated in a State".

(C) by adding at the end (before paragraph (6) as designated by paragraph (1) of this subsection) the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) In the case of a person who, upon transfer to the Retired Reserve or discharge, is to be credited with satisfactory service in a general or flag officer grade under paragraph (1), authority provided by the Secretary of Defense to the Secretary of a military department under subparagraph (A) may be exercised with respect to that person only if approved by the Secretary of Defense or another civilian official in the Office of the Secretary of Defense appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(C) Authority provided by the Secretary of Defense to the Secretary of a military department under subparagraph (A) may be delegated within that military department only to a civilian official of that military department appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.".

(c) ADVANCE NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—Such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) ADVANCE NOTICE TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—(1) In the case of an officer to be retired in a grade that is a general or flag officer grade who is eligible to retire in that grade only by reason of an exercise of authority under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) to reduce the three-year service-in-grade requirement otherwise applicable under that paragraph, the Secretary of Defense, before the officer is retired in that grade, shall notify the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives of the exercise of authority under that paragraph with respect to that officer.

"(2) In the case of a person to be credited under subsection (d) with satisfactory service in a grade that is a general or flag officer grade who is eligible to be credited with such service in that grade only by reason of an exercise of authority under paragraph (5) of that subsection to reduce the three-year service-in-grade requirement otherwise applicable under paragraph (3)(A) of that subsection, the Secretary of Defense, before the person is credited with such satisfactory service in that grade, shall notify the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives of the exercise of authority under paragraph (5) of that subsection with respect to that officer.

"(3) In the case of an officer to whom subsection (c) applies, the requirement for notification under paragraph (1) is satisfied if the notification is included in the certification submitted with respect to that officer under paragraph (1) of such subsection.".

SEC. 506. AUTHORITY TO REQUIRE THAT AN OFFICER TAKE LEAVE PENDING REVIEW OF A RECOMMENDATION FOR REMOVAL BY A BOARD OF INQUIRY.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Section 1182(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(c)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary concerned, an officer as to whom a board of inquiry makes a recommendation under paragraph (1) that the officer not be retained on active duty may be required to take leave pending the completion of the officer's case under this chapter. The officer may be required to begin such leave at any time following the officer's receipt of the report of the board of inquiry, including the board's recommendation for removal from active duty, and the expiration of any period allowed for submission by the officer of a rebuttal to that report. The leave may be continued until the date on which action by the Secretary concerned on the officer's case is completed or may be terminated at any earlier time.".

(b) PAYMENT FOR MANDATORY EXCESS LEAVE UPON DISAPPROVAL OF CERTAIN INVOLUNTARY SEPARATION RECOMMENDATIONS.—Chapter 40 of such title is amended by inserting after section 707 the following new section:

"§707a. Payment upon disapproval of certain board of inquiry recommendations for excess leave required to be taken

"(a) An officer—

"(1) who is required to take leave under section 1182(c)(2) of this title, any period of which is charged as excess leave under section 706(a) of this title, and

"(2) whose recommendation for removal from active duty in a report of a board of inquiry is not approved by the Secretary concerned under section 1184 of this title, shall be paid, as provided in subsection (b), for the period of leave charged as excess leave.

"(b)(1) An officer entitled to be paid under this section shall be deemed, for purposes of this section, to have accrued pay and allowances for each day of leave required to be taken under section 1182(c)(2) of this title that is charged as excess leave (except any day of accrued leave for which the officer has been paid under section 706(b)(1) of this title and which has been charged as excess leave).

"(2) The officer shall be paid the amount of pay and allowances that is deemed to have accrued to the officer under paragraph (1), reduced by the total amount of his income from wages, salaries, tips, other personal service income, unemployment compensation, and public assistance benefits from any Government agency during the period the officer is deemed to have accrued pay and allowances. Except as provided in paragraph (3), such payment shall be made within 60 days after the date on which the Secretary concerned decides not to remove the officer from active duty.

"(3) If an officer is entitled to be paid under this section, but fails to provide sufficient information in a timely manner regarding the officer's income when such information is requested under regulations prescribed under subsection (c), the period of time prescribed in paragraph (2) shall be extended until 30 days after the date on which the member provides the information requested.

"(c) This section shall be administered under uniform regulations prescribed by the Secretaries concerned. The regulations may provide for the method of determining an officer's income during any period the officer is deemed to have accrued pay and allowances, including a requirement that the officer provide income tax returns and other documentation to verify the amount of the officer's income.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 706 of such title is amended—

(A) by inserting "or 1182(c)(2)" after "section 876a" in subsections (a), (b)(1), (b)(2), and (c); and

(B) by striking "section 707" in subsection (b)(2) and inserting "sections 707 and 707a".

(2) The heading for such section is amended to read as follows:

"§706. Administration of leave required to be taken".

(1) by striking the item relating to section 706 and inserting the following:

"706. Administration of leave required to be taken.";

and

(2) by inserting after the item relating to section 707 the following new item:

"707a. Payment upon disapproval of certain board of inquiry recommendations for excess leave required to be taken.".

Subtitle B—Reserve Component Management

SEC. 511. REVIEWS OF NATIONAL GUARD STRENGTH ACCOUNTING AND MANAGEMENT AND OTHER ISSUES.

(a) COMPTROLLER GENERAL ASSESSMENTS.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on management of the National Guard. The report shall include the following:

(1) The Comptroller General's assessment of the effectiveness of the implementation of Department of Defense plans for improving management and accounting for personnel strengths in the National Guard, including an assessment of the process that the Department of Defense, the National Guard Bureau, the Army National Guard and State-level National Guard leadership, and leadership in the other reserve components have for identifying and addressing in a timely manner specific units in which nonparticipation rates are significantly in excess of the established norms.

(2) The Comptroller General's assessment of the effectiveness of the process for Federal recognition of senior National Guard officers and recommendations for improvement to that process.

(3) The Comptroller General's assessment of the process for, and the nature and extent of, the administrative or judicial corrective action taken by the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Army, and the Secretary of the Air Force as a result of Inspector General investigations or other investigations in which allegations against senior National Guard officers are substantiated in whole or in part.

(4) The Comptroller General's determination of the effectiveness of the Federal protections provided for members or employees of the National Guard who report allegations of waste, fraud, abuse, or mismanagement and the nature and extent to which corrective action is taken against those in the National Guard who retaliate against such members or employees.

(b) SECRETARY OF DEFENSE REPORT ON DIFFERENT ARMY AND AIR FORCE PROCEDURES.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the differing Army and Air Force policies for taking adverse administrative actions against National Guard officers in a State status. The report shall include the Secretary's determination as to whether changes should be made in those policies.

SEC. 512. COURTS-MARTIAL FOR THE NATIONAL GUARD WHEN NOT IN FEDERAL SERVICE.

(a) MANNER OF PRESCRIBING PUNISHMENTS.—Section 326 of title 32, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Punishments shall be as provided by the laws of the respective States and Territories, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia.".

(b) CONVENING AUTHORITY.—Section 327 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"§327. Courts-martial of National Guard not in Federal service: convening authority

"(a) In the National Guard not in Federal service, general, special, and summary courts-martial may be convened as provided by the laws of the respective States and Territories, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia.

"(b) In the National Guard not in Federal service—

"(1) general courts-martial may be convened by the President;

"(2) special courts-martial may be convened—

"(A) by the commanding officer of a garrison, fort, post, camp, air base, auxiliary air base, or other place where members of the National Guard are on duty; or

"(B) by the commanding officer of a division, brigade, regiment, wing, group, detached battalion, separate squadron, or other detached command; and

"(3) summary courts-martial may be convened—

"(A) by the commanding officer of a garrison, fort, post, camp, air base, auxiliary air base, or other place where members of the National Guard are on duty; or

"(B) by the commanding officer of a division, brigade, regiment, wing, group, detached battalion, detached squadron, detached company, or other detachment.

"(c) The convening authorities provided under subsection (b) are in addition to the convening authorities provided under subsection (a).".

(c) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED AND OBSOLETE PROVISIONS.—(1) Sections 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, and 333 of title 32, United States Code, are repealed.

(2) The provisions of law repealed by paragraph (1) shall continue to apply with respect to courts-martial convened in the National Guard not in Federal service before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 3 of such title is amended by striking the items relating to sections 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, and 333 and inserting the following:

"327. Courts-martial of National Guard not in Federal service: convening authority.".

(e) MODELS FOR STATE CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE AND STATE MANUAL FOR COURTS-MARTIAL.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall prepare a model State code of military justice and a model State manual for courts-martial to recommend to the States for use with respect to the National Guard not in Federal service. Both such models shall be consistent with the recommendations contained in the report that was issued in 1998 by the Department of Defense Panel to Study Military Justice in the National Guard not in Federal Service.

(2) The Secretary shall ensure that adequate support for the preparation of the model State code of military justice and the model State manual for courts-martial (including the detailing of attorneys and other personnel) is provided by the General Counsel of the Department of Defense, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Air Force, and the Chief of the National Guard Bureau.

(3) If the funds available to the Chief of the National Guard Bureau are insufficient for paying the cost of the National Guard Bureau support required under paragraph (2) (including increased costs of pay of members of the National Guard for additional active duty necessitated by such requirement and increased cost of detailed attorneys and other staff, allowances, and travel expenses related to such support), the Secretary shall, upon request made by the Chief of the Bureau, provide such additional funding as the Secretary determines necessary to satisfy the requirement for such support.

(4) Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report on the actions taken to carry out this subsection to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives. The report shall include proposals in final form of both the model State code of military justice and the model State manual for courts-martial required by paragraph (1), together with a discussion of the efforts being made to present those proposals to the States for their consideration for enactment or adoption, respectively.

(5) In this subsection, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

SEC. 513. FISCAL YEAR 2003 FUNDING FOR MILITARY PERSONNEL COSTS OF RESERVE COMPONENT SPECIAL OPERATIONS FORCES PERSONNEL ENGAGED IN HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE ACTIVITIES RELATING TO CLEARING OF LANDMINES.

(a) USE OF RESERVE COMPONENT MILITARY PERSONNEL FUNDS.—Fiscal year 2003 reserve component military personnel funds may be used for military personnel expenses of reserve component Special Operations forces that are incurred during fiscal year 2003 in connection with landmine clearance assistance, notwithstanding section 401(c)(1) of title 10, United States Code.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT REQUIREMENT.—Fiscal year 2003 reserve component military personnel funds shall be reimbursed from fiscal year 2003 landmine clearance assistance funds for all military personnel expenses of reserve component Special Operations forces that are incurred during fiscal year 2003 in connection with landmine clearance assistance. Such reimbursement shall be made in each instance to the reserve component military personnel account that incurred the expense.

(c) LIMITATION.—The amount of reserve component military personnel expenses incurred during fiscal year 2003 for landmine clearance assistance may not exceed 10 percent of the amount of fiscal year 2003 landmine clearance assistance funds.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) LANDMINE CLEARANCE ASSISTANCE.—The term "landmine clearance assistance" means humanitarian and civic assistance provided under section 401 of title 10, United States Code, that is described in subsection (e)(5) of that section.

(2) FISCAL YEAR 2003 LANDMINE CLEARANCE ASSISTANCE FUNDS.—The term "fiscal year 2003 landmine clearance assistance funds" means the total amount appropriated for fiscal year 2003 in operations and maintenance accounts of the Department of Defense that is provided for landmine clearance assistance.

(3) FISCAL YEAR 2003 RESERVE COMPONENT MILITARY PERSONNEL FUNDS.—The term "fiscal year 2003 reserve component military personnel funds" means amounts appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for military personnel expenses of a reserve component of the Department of Defense.

(4) MILITARY PERSONNEL EXPENSES.—The term "military personnel expenses" means expenses properly chargeable to a military personnel account of the Department of Defense.

(e) LEGISLATIVE PROPOSAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress, as part of the budget request of the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2004, a legislative proposal that would ensure that military personnel expenses for both active and reserve component military personnel providing landmine clearance assistance are specified in detail and are budgeted to be authorized and appropriated from the appropriate military personnel accounts.

SEC. 514. USE OF RESERVES TO PERFORM DUTIES RELATING TO DEFENSE AGAINST TERRORISM.

(a) USE OF RESERVES TO PERFORM DUTIES RELATING TO DEFENSE AGAINST TERRORISM.—Section 12304(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "involving" and all that follows and inserting "involving—

"(1) a use or threatened use of a weapon of mass destruction; or

"(2) a terrorist attack or threatened terrorist attack in the United States that results, or could result, in catastrophic loss of life or property.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO FULL-TIME SUPPORT OF GUARD AND RESERVE PERSONNEL.— Section 12310(c)(1) of such title is amended by striking "involving" and all that follows and inserting "involving—

"(A) the use of a weapon of mass destruction (as defined in section 12304(i)(2) of this title); or

"(B) a terrorist attack or threatened terrorist attack in the United States that results, or could result, in catastrophic loss of life or property.".

SEC. 515. REPEAL OF PROHIBITION ON USE OF AIR FORCE RESERVE AGR PERSONNEL FOR AIR FORCE BASE SECURITY FUNCTIONS.

(a) REPEAL.—Section 12551 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 1215 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 12551.

Subtitle C—Reserve Component Officer Personnel Policy

SEC. 521. ELIGIBILITY FOR CONSIDERATION FOR PROMOTION TO GRADE OF MAJOR GENERAL FOR CERTAIN RESERVE COMPONENT BRIGADIER GENERALS WHO DO NOT OTHERWISE QUALIFY FOR CONSIDERATION FOR PROMOTION UNDER THE ONE-YEAR RULE.

Section 14301(g) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) BRIGADIER GENERALS.—(1) An officer who is a reserve component brigadier general of the Army or the Air Force who is not eligible for consideration for promotion under subsection (a) because the officer is not on the reserve active status list (as required by paragraph (1) of that subsection for such eligibility) is nevertheless eligible for consideration for promotion to the grade of major general by a promotion board convened under section 14101(a) of this title if—

"(A) as of the date of the convening of the promotion board, the officer has been in an inactive status for less than one year; and

"(B) immediately before the date of the officer's most recent transfer to an inactive status, the officer had continuously served on the reserve active status list or the active-duty list (or a combination of the reserve active status list and the active-duty list) for at least one year.

"(2) An officer who is a reserve component brigadier general of the Army or the Air Force who is on the reserve active status list but who is not eligible for consideration for promotion under subsection (a) because the officer's service does not meet the one-year-of-continuous-service requirement under paragraph (2) of that subsection is nevertheless eligible for consideration for promotion to the grade of major general by a promotion board convened under section 14101(a) of this title if—

"(A) the officer was transferred from an inactive status to the reserve active status list during the one-year period preceding the date of the convening of the promotion board;

"(B) immediately before the date of the officer's most recent transfer to an active status, the officer had been in an inactive status for less than one year; and

"(C) immediately before the date of the officer's most recent transfer to an inactive status, the officer had continuously served for at least one year on the reserve active status list or the active-duty list (or a combination of the reserve active status list and the active-duty list).".

SEC. 522. AUTHORITY FOR LIMITED EXTENSION OF MEDICAL DEFERMENT OF MANDATORY RETIREMENT OR SEPARATION OF RESERVE COMPONENT OFFICERS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Chapter 1407 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 14519. Deferment of retirement or separation for medical reasons

"(a) AUTHORITY.—If, in the case of an officer required to be retired or separated under this chapter or chapter 1409 of this title, the Secretary concerned determines that the evaluation of the physical condition of the officer and determination of the officer's entitlement to retirement or separation for physical disability require hospitalization or medical observation and that such hospitalization or medical observation cannot be completed with confidence in a manner consistent with the officer's well being before the date on which the officer would otherwise be required to retire or be separated, the Secretary may defer the retirement or separation of the officer.

"(b) PERIOD OF DEFERMENT.—A deferral of retirement or separation under subsection (a) may not extend for more than 30 days after the completion of the evaluation requiring hospitalization or medical observation.".

"14519. Deferment of retirement or separation for medical reasons.".

Subtitle D—Enlistment, Education, and Training Programs

SEC. 531. ENLISTMENT INCENTIVES FOR PURSUIT OF SKILLS TO FACILITATE NATIONAL SERVICE.

(a) AUTHORITY.—(1) Chapter 31 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 509 the following new section:

"§ 510. Enlistment incentives for pursuit of skills to facilitate national service

"(a) ENLISTMENT INCENTIVE PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out an enlistment incentive program in accordance with this section under which a person who is a National Call to Service participant shall be entitled to one of the incentives specified in subsection (e). The program shall be carried out during the period ending on December 31, 2007, and may be carried out after that date.

"(b) NATIONAL CALL TO SERVICE PARTICIPANT.—In this section, the term 'National Call to Service participant' means a person who has not previously served in the armed forces who enters into an original enlistment pursuant to a written agreement with the Secretary of a military department (in such form and manner as may be prescribed by that Secretary) under which the person agrees to perform a period of national service as specified in subsection (c).

"(c) NATIONAL SERVICE.—The total period of national service to which a National Call to Service participant is obligated under the agreement under this section shall be specified in the agreement. Under the agreement, the participant shall—

"(1) upon completion of initial entry training (as prescribed by the Secretary of Defense), serve on active duty in a military occupational specialty designated by the Secretary of Defense under subsection (d) for a period of 15 months;

"(2) upon completion of the period of active duty specified in paragraph (1) and without a break in service, serve either (A) an additional period of active duty as determined by the Secretary of Defense, or (B) a period of 24 months in an active status in the Selected Reserve; and

"(3) upon completion of the period of service specified in paragraph (2), and without a break in service, serve the remaining period of obligated service specified in the agreement—

"(A) on active duty in the armed forces;

"(B) in the Selected Reserve;

"(C) in the Individual Ready Reserve;

"(D) in the Peace Corps, Americorps, or another national service program jointly designated by the Secretary of Defense and the head of such program for purposes of this section; or

"(E) in any combination of service referred to in subparagraphs (A) through (D) that is approved by the Secretary of the military department concerned pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense and specified in the agreement.

"(d) DESIGNATED MILITARY OCCUPATIONAL SPECIALTIES.—The Secretary of Defense shall designate military occupational specialties for purposes of subsection (c)(1). Such military occupational specialties shall be military occupational specialties that, as determined by the Secretary, will facilitate pursuit of national service by National Call to Service participants.

"(1) Payment of a bonus in the amount of $5,000.

"(2) Payment in an amount not to exceed $18,000 of outstanding principal and interest on qualifying student loans of the National Call to Service participant.

"(3) Entitlement to an allowance for educational assistance at the monthly rate equal to the monthly rate payable for basic educational assistance allowances under section 3015(a)(1) of title 38 for a total of 12 months.

"(4) Entitlement to an allowance for educational assistance at the monthly rate equal to 50 percent of the monthly rate payable for basic educational assistance allowances under section 3015(b)(1) of title 38 for a total of 36 months.

"(f) ELECTION OF INCENTIVE.—A National Call to Service participant shall elect in the agreement under subsection (b) which incentive under subsection (e) to receive. An election under this subsection is irrevocable.

"(g) PAYMENT OF BONUS AMOUNTS.—(1) Payment to a National Call to Service participant of the bonus elected by the National Call to Service participant under subsection (e)(1) shall be made in such time and manner as the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe.

"(2)(A) Payment of outstanding principal and interest on the qualifying student loans of a National Call to Service participant, as elected under subsection (e)(2), shall be made in such time and manner as the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe.

"(B) Payment under this paragraph of the outstanding principal and interest on the qualifying student loans of a National Call to Service participant shall be made to the holder of such student loans, as identified by the National Call to Service participant to the Secretary of the military department concerned for purposes of such payment.

"(3) Payment of a bonus or incentive in accordance with this subsection shall be made by the Secretary of the military department concerned.

"(h) COORDINATION WITH MONTGOMERY GI BILL BENEFITS.—(1)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), a National Call to Service participant who elects an incentive under paragraph (3) or (4) of subsection (e) is not entitled to additional educational assistance under chapter 1606 of this title or to basic educational assistance under subchapter II of chapter 30 of title 38.

"(B) If a National Call to Service participant meets all eligibility requirements specified in chapter 1606 of this title or chapter 30 of title 38 for entitlement to allowances for educational assistance under either such chapter, the participant may become eligible for allowances for educational assistance benefits under either such chapter up to the maximum allowance provided less the total amount of allowance paid under paragraph (3) or (4) of subsection (e).

"(2)(A) The Secretary of Defense shall, to the maximum extent practicable, administer the receipt by National Call to Service participants of incentives under paragraph (3) or (4) of subsection (e) as if such National Call to Service participants were, in receiving such incentives, receiving educational assistance for members of the Selected Reserve under chapter 1606 of this title.

"(B) The Secretary of Defense shall, in consultation with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, prescribe regulations for purposes of subparagraph (A). Such regulations shall, to the maximum extent practicable, take into account the administrative provisions of chapters 30 and 36 of title 38 that are specified in section 16136 of this title.

"(3)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (1), nothing in this section shall prohibit a National Call to Service participant who satisfies through service under subsection (c) the eligibility requirements for educational assistance under chapter 1606 of this title or basic educational assistance under chapter 30 of title 38 from an entitlement to such educational assistance under chapter 1606 of this title or basic educational assistance under chapter 30 of title 38, as the case may be.

"(B)(i) A participant who made an election not to receive educational assistance under either such chapter at the applicable time specified under law or who was denied the opportunity to make an election may revoke that election or make an initial election, as the case may be, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary concerned may specify. A revocation or initial election under the preceding sentence is irrevocable.

"(ii) The participant making a revocation or initial election under clause (i) shall be eligible for educational assistance under either such chapter at such time as the participant satisfies through service the applicable eligibility requirements under either such chapter.

"(i) REPAYMENT.—(1) If a National Call to Service participant who has entered into an agreement under subsection (b) and received or benefited from an incentive under subsection (e)(1) or (e)(2) fails to complete the total period of service specified in such agreement, the National Call to Service participant shall refund to the United States the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of the incentive as the uncompleted part of such service bears to the total period of such service.

"(2) Subject to paragraph (3), an obligation to reimburse the United States imposed under paragraph (1) is for all purposes a debt owed to the United States.

"(3) The Secretary concerned may waive, in whole or in part, a reimbursement required under paragraph (1) if the Secretary concerned determines that recovery would be against equity and good conscience or would be contrary to the best interests of the United States.

"(4) A discharge in bankruptcy under title 11 that is entered into less than five years after the termination of an agreement entered into under subsection (b) does not discharge the person signing the agreement from a debt arising under the agreement or under paragraph (1).

"(j) FUNDING.—Amounts for payment of incentives under subsection (e), including payment of allowances for educational assistance under that subsection, shall be derived from amounts available to the Secretary of the military department concerned for payment of pay, allowances, and other expenses of the members of the armed force concerned.

"(k) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the military departments shall prescribe regulations for purposes of the program under this section.

"(l) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'Americorps' means the Americorps program carried out under subtitle C of title I of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12571 et seq.).

"(2) The term 'qualifying student loan' means a loan, the proceeds of which were used to pay any part or all of the cost of attendance (as defined in section 472 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1087ll)) at an institution of higher education (as defined in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001)).

"(3) The term 'Secretary of a military department' includes, with respect to matters concerning the Coast Guard when it is not operating as a service in the Navy, the Secretary of the Department in which the Coast Guard is operating.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of that chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 509 the following new item:

"510. Enlistment incentives for pursuit of skills to facilitate national service.".

(b) COMMENCEMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe the date on which the program provided for section 510 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall commence. Such date shall be not later than October 1, 2003.

(c) CONFORMING REPEAL.—Section 3264 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed. The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 333 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 3264.

(d) IMPLEMENTATION REPORT.—Not later than March 31, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the Secretary's plans for implementation of section 510 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a).

(e) EFFECTIVENESS REPORTS.—Not later than March 31, 2005, and March 31, 2007, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the committees specified in subsection (d) reports on the effectiveness of the program under section 510 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), in attracting new recruits to national service.

SEC. 532. AUTHORITY FOR PHASED INCREASE TO 4,400 IN AUTHORIZED STRENGTHS FOR THE SERVICE ACADEMIES.

(a) MILITARY ACADEMY.—Section 4342 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: "or such higher number as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Army under subsection (j)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) Beginning with the 2003–2004 academic year, the Secretary of the Army may prescribe annual increases in the cadet strength limit in effect under subsection (a). For any academic year, any such increase shall be by no more than 100 cadets or such lesser number as applies under paragraph (3) for that year. Such annual increases may be prescribed until the cadet strength limit is 4,400. However, no increase may be prescribed for any academic year after the 2007–2008 academic year.

"(2) Any increase in the cadet strength limit under paragraph (1) with respect to an academic year shall be prescribed not later than the date on which the budget of the President is submitted to Congress under section 1105 of title 31 for the fiscal year beginning in the same year as the year in which that academic year begins. Whenever the Secretary prescribes such an increase, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a notice in writing of the increase. The notice shall state the amount of the increase in the cadet strength limit and the new cadet strength limit, as so increased, and the amount of the increase in Senior Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps enrollment under each of sections 2104 and 2107 of this title.

"(3) The amount of an increase under paragraph (1) in the cadet strength limit for an academic year may not exceed the increase (if any) for the preceding academic year in the total number of cadets enrolled in the Army Senior Reserve Officers' Training Corps program under chapter 103 of this title who have entered into an agreement under section 2104 or 2107 of this title.

"(4) In this subsection, the term 'cadet strength limit' means the authorized maximum strength of the Corps of Cadets of the Academy.".

(b) NAVAL ACADEMY.—Section 6954 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: "or such higher number as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy under subsection (h)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h)(1) Beginning with the 2003–2004 academic year, the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe annual increases in the midshipmen strength limit in effect under subsection (a). For any academic year, any such increase shall be by no more than 100 midshipmen or such lesser number as applies under paragraph (3) for that year. Such annual increases may be prescribed until the midshipmen strength limit is 4,400. However, no increase may be prescribed for any academic year after the 2007–2008 academic year.

"(2) Any increase in the midshipmen strength limit under paragraph (1) with respect to an academic year shall be prescribed not later than the date on which the budget of the President is submitted to Congress under section 1105 of title 31 for the fiscal year beginning in the same year as the year in which that academic year begins. Whenever the Secretary prescribes such an increase, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a notice in writing of the increase. The notice shall state the amount of the increase in the midshipmen strength limit and the new midshipmen strength limit, as so increased, and the amount of the increase in Senior Navy Reserve Officers' Training Corps enrollment under each of sections 2104 and 2107 of this title.

"(3) The amount of an increase under paragraph (1) in the midshipmen strength limit for an academic year may not exceed the increase (if any) for the preceding academic year in the total number of midshipmen enrolled in the Navy Senior Reserve Officers' Training Corps program under chapter 103 of this title who have entered into an agreement under section 2104 or 2107 of this title.

"(4) In this subsection, the term 'midshipmen strength limit' means the authorized maximum strength of the Brigade of Midshipmen.".

(c) AIR FORCE ACADEMY.—Section 9342 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: "or such higher number as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Air Force under subsection (j)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) Beginning with the 2003–2004 academic year, the Secretary of the Air Force may prescribe annual increases in the cadet strength limit in effect under subsection (a). For any academic year, any such increase shall be by no more than 100 cadets or such lesser number as applies under paragraph (3) for that year. Such annual increases may be prescribed until the cadet strength limit is 4,400. However, no increase may be prescribed for any academic year after the 2007–2008 academic year.

"(2) Any increase in the cadet strength limit under paragraph (1) with respect to an academic year shall be prescribed not later than the date on which the budget of the President is submitted to Congress under sections 1105 of title 31 for the fiscal year beginning in the same year as the year in which that academic year begins. Whenever the Secretary prescribes such an increase, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a notice in writing of the increase. The notice shall state the amount of the increase in the cadet strength limit and the new cadet strength limit, as so increased, and the amount of the increase in Senior Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps enrollment under each of sections 2104 and 2107 of this title.

"(3) The amount of an increase under paragraph (1) in the cadet strength limit for an academic year may not exceed the increase (if any) for the preceding academic year in the total number of cadets enrolled in the Air Force Senior Reserve Officers' Training Corps program under chapter 103 of this title who have entered into an agreement under section 2104 or 2107 of this title.

"(4) In this subsection, the term 'cadet strength limit' means the authorized maximum strength of Air Force Cadets of the Academy.".

(d) Target for Increases in Number of ROTC Scholarship Participants.—Section 2107 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i) The Secretary of each military department shall seek to achieve an increase in the number of agreements entered into under this section so as to achieve an increase, by the 2006–2007 academic year, of not less than 400 in the number of cadets or midshipmen, as the case may be, enrolled under this section, compared to such number enrolled for the 2002–2003 academic year. In the case of the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary shall seek to ensure that not less than one-third of such increase in agreements under this section are with students enrolled (or seeking to enroll) in programs of study leading to a baccalaureate degree in nuclear engineering or another appropriate technical, scientific, or engineering field of study.".

(e) Repeal of Limit on Number of ROTC Scholarships.—Section 2107 of such title is further amended by striking the first sentence of subsection (h)(1).

(f) Repeal of Obsolete Language.—Section 4342(i) of such title is amended by striking "(beginning with the 2001–2002 academic year)".

SEC. 533. ENHANCEMENT OF RESERVE COMPONENT DELAYED TRAINING PROGRAM.

(a) Increase in Time Following Enlistment for Commencement of Initial Period of Active Duty for Training.—Section 12103(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "270 days" in the last sentence and inserting "one year".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to enlistments under section 12103(d) of title 10, United States Code, after the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Transition.—In the case of a person who enlisted under section 12103(d) of title 10, United States Code, before the date of the enactment of this Act and who as of such date has not commenced the required initial period of active duty for training under that section, the amendment made by subsection (a) may be applied to that person, but only with the agreement of that person and the Secretary concerned.

SEC. 534. REVIEW OF ARMED FORCES PROGRAMS FOR PREPARATION FOR, PARTICIPATION IN, AND CONDUCT OF ATHLETIC COMPETITIONS.

(a) Requirement for Review.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a comprehensive review of the programs of the active and reserve components of the Armed Forces for preparation for, participation in, and conduct of athletic competitions.

(b) Consideration of Funding.—The matters reviewed under subsection (a) shall include the funding sources that are currently available for the programs referred to in such subsection and any relevant limitations on the use of such funding sources.

(c) Report.—Not later than March 3, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the Secretary's findings and conclusions resulting from the review. The report shall include the following matters:

(1) The Secretary's views on the adequacy of the existing funding sources for the programs referred to in subsection (a).

(2) Any recommendations that the Secretary may have regarding limitations on the use of such funding sources or any inadequacies in the funding for such programs.

(3) An assessment of the issues related to, and recommendations of the Secretary for, achieving consistent funding and policy treatment with regard to participation by active and reserve component personnel in athletic competitions.

(4) Any recommended legislation that the Secretary considers appropriate regarding such programs.

SEC. 535. REPEAL OF BAR TO ELIGIBILITY OF ARMY COLLEGE FIRST PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS FOR BENEFITS UNDER STUDENT LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM.

Subsection (e) of section 573 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65; 10 U.S.C. 513 note) is repealed.

Subtitle E—Decorations and Awards

SEC. 541. WAIVER OF TIME LIMITATIONS FOR AWARD OF ARMY DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS TO CERTAIN PERSONS.

(a) Waiver.—Any limitation established by law or policy for the time within which a recommendation for the award of a military decoration or award must be submitted shall not apply to awards of decorations described in subsection (b), the award of each such decoration having been determined by the Secretary of the Army to be warranted in accordance with section 1130 of title 10, United States Code.

(b) Distinguished-Service Cross of the Army.—Subsection (a) applies to the award of the Distinguished-Service Cross of the Army as follows:

(1) To Henry Johnson of Albany, New York, for extraordinary heroism in France during the period of May 13 to 15, 1918, while serving as a member of the Army.

"(b) In this section, the term 'KDSM eligibility period' means the period beginning on July 28, 1954, and ending on such date after the date of the enactment of this section as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense to be appropriate for terminating eligibility for the Korea Defense Service Medal.

"(c) The Secretary of the Air Force shall prescribe service requirements for eligibility for the Korea Defense Service Medal. Those requirements shall not be more stringent than the service requirements for award of the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal for instances in which the award of that medal is authorized.''.

''8755. Korea Defense Service Medal.''.

(e) Award for Service Before Date of Enactment.—The Secretary of the military department concerned shall take appropriate steps to provide in a timely manner for the issuance of the Korea Defense Service Medal, upon application therefor, to persons whose eligibility for that medal is by reason of service in the Republic of Korea or the waters adjacent thereto before the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 544. COMMENDATION OF MILITARY CHAPLAINS.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Military chaplains have served with those who fought for the cause of freedom since the founding of the Nation.

(2) Military chaplains and religious support personnel of the Armed Forces have served with distinction as uniformed members of the Armed Forces in support of the Nation's defense missions during every conflict in the history of the United States.

(3) 400 United States military chaplains have died in combat, some as a result of direct fire while ministering to fallen Americans, while others made the ultimate sacrifice as a prisoner of war.

(4) Military chaplains currently serve in humanitarian operations, rotational deployments, and in the war on terrorism.

(5) Religious organizations make up the very fabric of religious diversity and represent unparalleled levels of freedom of conscience, speech, and worship that set the United States apart from any other nation on Earth.

(6) Religious organizations have richly blessed the uniformed services by sending clergy to comfort and encourage all persons of faith in the Armed Forces.

(7) During the sinking of the USS Dorchester in February 1943 during World War II, four chaplains (Reverend Fox, Reverend Poling, Father Washington, and Rabbi Goode) gave their lives so that others might live.

(8) All military chaplains aid and assist members of the Armed Forces and their family members with the challenging issues of today's world.

(9) The current war against terrorism has brought to the shores of the United States new threats and concerns that strike at the beliefs and emotions of Americans.

(10) Military chaplains must, as never before, deal with the spiritual well-being of the members of the Armed Forces and their families.

(b) Commendation.—Congress, on behalf of the Nation, expresses its appreciation for the outstanding contribution that all military chaplains make to the members of the Armed Forces and their families.

(c) Presidential Proclamation.—The President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to recognize the distinguished service of the Nation's military chaplains.

Subtitle F—Administrative Matters

SEC. 551. STAFFING AND FUNDING FOR DEFENSE PRISONER OF WAR/MISSING PERSONNEL OFFICE.

(a) Requirement for Staffing and Funding at Levels Required for Performance of Full Range of Missions.—Subsection (a) of section 1501 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(5)(A) The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the office is provided sufficient military and civilian personnel, and sufficient funding, to enable the office to fully perform the complete range of missions of the office. The Secretary shall ensure that Department of Defense programming, planning, and budgeting procedures are structured so as to ensure compliance with the preceding sentence for each fiscal year.

''(B) For any fiscal year, the number of military and civilian personnel assigned or detailed to the office may not be less than the number requested in the President's budget for fiscal year 2003, unless a level below such number is expressly required by law.

''(C) For any fiscal year, the level of funding allocated to the office within the Department of Defense may not be below the level requested for such purposes in the President's budget for fiscal year 2003, unless such a level of funding is expressly required by law.''.

(b) Name of Office.—Such subsection is further amended by inserting after the first sentence of paragraph (1) the following new sentence: ''Such office shall be known as the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office.''.

SEC. 552. THREE-YEAR FREEZE ON REDUCTIONS OF PERSONNEL OF AGENCIES RESPONSIBLE FOR REVIEW AND CORRECTION OF MILITARY RECORDS.

(a) In General.—Chapter 79 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

''§1559. Personnel limitation

''(a) Limitation.—During fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005, the Secretary of a military department may not carry out any reduction in the number of military and civilian personnel assigned to duty with the service review agency for that military department below the baseline number for that agency until—

''(1) the Secretary submits to Congress a report that—

''(A) describes the reduction proposed to be made;

''(B) provides the Secretary's rationale for that reduction; and

''(C) specifies the number of such personnel that would be assigned to duty with that agency after the reduction; and

''(2) a period of 90 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is submitted.

''(b) Baseline Number.—The baseline number for a service review agency under this section is—

''(1) for purposes of the first report with respect to a service review agency under this section, the number of military and civilian personnel assigned to duty with that agency as of January 1, 2002; and

''(2) for purposes of any subsequent report with respect to a service review agency under this section, the number of such personnel specified in the most recent report with respect to that agency under this section.

''(c) Service Review Agency Defined.—In this section, the term 'service review agency' means—

''(1) with respect to the Department of the Army, the Army Review Boards Agency;

''(2) with respect to the Department of the Navy, the Board for Correction of Naval Records; and

''(3) with respect to the Department of the Air Force, the Air Force Review Boards Agency.''.

SEC. 561. SURVEYS OF RACIAL AND ETHNIC ISSUES AND OF GENDER ISSUES IN THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) Division of Annual Survey Into Four Quadrennial Surveys.—(1) Section 481 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§481. Racial and ethnic issues; gender issues: surveys

''(a) In General.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall carry out four quadrennial surveys (each in a separate year) in accordance with this section to identify and assess racial and ethnic issues and discrimination, and to identify and assess gender issues and discrimination, among members of the armed forces. Each such survey shall be conducted so as to identify and assess the extent (if any) of activity among such members that may be seen as so-called 'hate group' activity.

''(2) The four surveys shall be as follows:

''(A) To identify and assess racial and ethnic issues and discrimination among members of the armed forces serving on active duty.

''(B) To identify and assess racial and ethnic issues and discrimination among members of the armed forces in the reserve components.

''(C) To identify and assess gender issues and discrimination among members of the armed forces serving on active duty.

''(D) To identify and assess gender issues and discrimination members of the armed forces in the reserve components.

''(3) The surveys under this section relating to racial and ethnic issues and discrimination shall be known as the 'Armed Forces Workplace and Equal Opportunity Surveys'. The surveys under this section relating to gender issues and discrimination shall be known as the 'Armed Forces Workplace and Gender Relations Surveys'.

''(4) Each survey under this section shall be conducted separately from any other survey conducted by the Department of Defense.

''(b) Armed Forces Workplace and Equal Opportunity Surveys.—The Armed Forces Workplace and Equal Opportunity Surveys shall be conducted so as to solicit information on racial and ethnic issues, including issues relating to harassment and discrimination, and the climate in the armed forces for forming professional relationships among members of the armed forces of various racial and ethnic groups. Both such surveys shall be conducted so as to solicit information on the following:

''(1) Indicators of positive and negative trends for professional and personal relationships among members of all racial and ethnic groups.

''(2) The effectiveness of Department of Defense policies designed to improve relationships among all racial and ethnic groups.

''(3) The effectiveness of current processes for complaints on and investigations into racial and ethnic discrimination.

"(c) ARMED FORCES WORKPLACE AND GENDER RELATIONS SURVEYS.—The Armed Forces Workplace and Gender Relations Surveys shall be conducted so as to solicit information on gender issues, including issues relating to gender-based harassment and discrimination, and the climate in the armed forces for forming professional relationships between male and female members of the armed forces. Both such surveys shall be conducted so as to solicit information on the following:

"(1) Indicators of positive and negative trends for professional and personal relationships between male and female members of the armed forces.

"(2) The effectiveness of Department of Defense policies designed to improve professional relationships between male and female members of the armed forces.

"(3) The effectiveness of current processes for complaints on and investigations into gender-based discrimination.

"(d) SURVEYS TO BE CONDUCTED IN DIFFERENT YEARS.—Each of the four quadrennial surveys conducted under this section shall be conducted in a different year from any other survey conducted under this section, so that one such survey is conducted during each year.

"(e) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Upon the completion of a survey under this section, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the survey.

"(f) INAPPLICABILITY TO COAST GUARD.—This section does not apply to the Coast Guard.".

(2) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 23 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"481. Racial and ethnic issues; gender issues: surveys.".

SEC. 562. ANNUAL REPORT ON STATUS OF FEMALE MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress, for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2006, a report on the status of female members of the Armed Forces. Information in the annual report shall be shown for the Department of Defense as a whole and separately for each of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

(b) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The report for a fiscal year under subsection (a) shall include the following information:

(1) The positions, weapon systems, and fields of skills for which, by policy, female members are not eligible for assignment, as follows:

(A) In the report for fiscal year 2002—

(i) an identification of each position, weapon system, and field of skills for which, by policy, female members are not eligible; and

(ii) the rationale for the applicability of the policy to each such position, weapon system, and field.

(B) In the report for each fiscal year after fiscal year 2002, the positions, weapon systems, and fields for which policy on the eligibility of female members for assignment has changed during that fiscal year, including a discussion of how the policy has changed and the rationale for the change.

(2) Information on joint spouse assignments, as follows:

(A) The number of cases in which members of the Armed Forces married to each other are in assignments to which they were jointly assigned during that fiscal year, as defined in the applicable Department of Defense and military department personnel assignment policies.

(B) The number of cases in which members of the Armed Forces married to each other are in assignments to which they were assigned during that fiscal year, but were not jointly assigned (as so defined).

(3) Promotion selection rates for female members, for male members, and for all personnel in the reports submitted by promotion selection boards in that fiscal year for promotion to grades E–7, E–8, and E–9, and, in the case of commissioned officers, promotion to grades O–4, O–5, and O–6.

(4) Retention rates for female members in each grade and for male members in each grade during that fiscal year.

(5) Selection rates for female members and for male members for assignment to grade O–6 and grade O–5 command positions in reports of command selection boards that were submitted during that fiscal year.

(6) Selection rates for female members and for male members for attendance at intermediate service schools (ISS) and, separately, for attendance at senior service schools (SSS) in reports of selection boards that were submitted during that fiscal year.

(7) The extent of assignments of female members during that fiscal year in each field in which at least 80 percent of the Armed Forces personnel assigned in the field are men.

(8) The incidence of sexual harassment complaints made during that fiscal year, stated as the number of cases in which complaints of sexual harassment were filed under procedures of military departments that are applicable to the submission of sexual harassment complaints, together with the number and percent of the complaints that were substantiated.

(9) Satisfaction (based on surveys) of female active-duty members, female dependents of active-duty members, and female dependents of nonactive duty members entitled to health care provided by the Department of Defense with access to, and quality of, women's health care benefits provided by the Department of Defense.

(c) TIME FOR REPORT.—The report for a fiscal year under this section shall be submitted not later than 120 days after the end of that fiscal year.

SEC. 563. WEAR OF ABAYAS BY FEMALE MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES IN SAUDI ARABIA.

(a) PROHIBITION RELATING TO WEAR OF ABAYAS.—No member of the Armed Forces having authority over a member of the Armed Forces and no officer or employee of the United States having authority over a member of the Armed Forces may require or encourage that member to wear the abaya garment or any part of the abaya garment while the member is in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia pursuant to a permanent change of station or orders for temporary duty.

(b) INSTRUCTION.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall provide each female member of the Armed Forces ordered to a permanent change of station or temporary duty in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia with instruction regarding the prohibition in subsection (a). Such instruction shall be provided immediately upon or not more than 48 hours prior to the arrival of the member at a United States military installation within the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The instruction shall be presented orally and in writing. The written instruction shall include the full text of this section.

(2) In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary shall act through the Commander in Chief, United States Central Command and Joint Task Force Southwest Asia, and the commanders of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps components of the United States Central Command and Joint Task Force Southwest Asia.

(c) PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR PROCUREMENT OF ABAYAS.—Funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense may not be used to procure abayas for regular or routine issuance to members of the Armed Forces serving in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia or for any personnel of contractors accompanying the Armed Forces in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in the performance of contracts entered into by the United States with such contractors.

Subtitle H—Benefits

SEC. 571. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE SUPPORT FOR PERSONS PARTICIPATING IN MILITARY FUNERAL HONORS DETAILS.

Section 1491(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "To provide a" after "SUPPORT.—" and inserting "(1) To support a";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (1) as subparagraph (A) and amending such subparagraph, as so redesignated, to read as follows:

"(A) For a person who participates in a funeral honors detail (other than a person who is a member of the armed forces not in a retired status or an employee of the United States), either transportation (or reimbursement for transportation) and expenses or the daily stipend prescribed under paragraph (2).";

(3) by redesignating paragraph (2) as subparagraph (B) and in that subparagraph—

(A) by striking "Materiel, equipment, and training for" and inserting "For"; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end "and for members of the armed forces in a retired status, materiel, equipment, and training";

(A) by striking "Articles of clothing for" and inserting "For"; and

(B) by inserting ", articles of clothing" after "subsection (b)(2)"; and

(5) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe annually a flat rate daily stipend for purposes of paragraph (1)(A). Such stipend shall be set at a rate so as to encompass typical costs for transportation and other miscellaneous expenses for persons participating in funeral honors details who are members of the armed forces in a retired status and other persons who are not members of the armed forces or employees of the United States.

"(3) A stipend paid under this subsection to a member of the armed forces in a retired status is in addition to any compensation to which the member is entitled under section 435(a)(2) of title 37 and any other compensation to which the member may be entitled.".

SEC. 572. EMERGENCY LEAVE OF ABSENCE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 40 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 709. Emergency leave of absence

"(a) EMERGENCY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The Secretary concerned may grant a member of the armed forces emergency leave of absence for a qualifying emergency.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—An emergency leave of absence under this section—

"(1) may be granted only once for any member;

"(2) may be granted only to prevent the member from entering unearned leave status or excess leave status; and

"(3) may not extend for a period of more than 14 days.

"(c) QUALIFYING EMERGENCY.—In this section, the term 'qualifying emergency', with respect to a member of the armed forces, means a circumstance that—

"(1) is due to—

"(A) a medical condition of a member of the immediate family of the member; or

"(B) any other hardship that the Secretary concerned determines appropriate for purposes of this section; and

"(2) is verified to the Secretary's satisfaction based upon information or opinion from a source in addition to the member that the Secretary considers to be objective and reliable.

"(d) MILITARY DEPARTMENT REGULATIONS.—Regulations prescribed under this section by the Secretaries of the military department shall be as uniform as practicable and shall be subject to approval by the Secretary of Defense.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'unearned leave status' means leave approved to be used by a member of the armed forces that exceeds the amount of leave credit that has been accrued as a result of the member's active service and that has not been previously used by the member.

"(2) The term 'excess leave status' means leave approved to be used by a member of the armed forces that is unearned leave for which a member is unable to accrue leave credit during the member's current term of service before the member's separation.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"709. Emergency leave of absence.".

SEC. 573. ENHANCED FLEXIBILITY IN MEDICAL LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM.

(a) ELIGIBLE PERSONS.—Subsection (d) of section 2173 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "Participants" and all that follows through "and students" and inserting "Students".

(b) LOAN REPAYMENT AMOUNTS.—Subsection (e)(2) of such section is amended by striking the last sentence.

SEC. 574. DESTINATIONS AUTHORIZED FOR GOVERNMENT PAID TRANSPORTATION OF ENLISTED PERSONNEL FOR REST AND RECUPERATION ABSENCE UPON EXTENDING DUTY AT DESIGNATED LOCATIONS OVERSEAS.

(a) EXPANSION OF BENEFITS.—Subsection (b)(2) of section 705 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", or to an alternative destination and return at a cost not to exceed the cost of round-trip transportation from the location of the extended tour of duty to such nearest port".

(b) CHANGE IN TERMINOLOGY.—(1) Subsection (b) of such section is further amended by striking "recuperative" in paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting "recuperation".

(2)(A) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

"§ 705. Rest and recuperation absence: qualified enlisted members extending duty at designated locations overseas".

(B) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 40 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"705. Rest and recuperation absence: qualified enlisted members extending duty at designated locations overseas.".

SEC. 575. VEHICLE STORAGE IN LIEU OF TRANSPORTATION WHEN MEMBER IS ORDERED TO A NONFOREIGN DUTY STATION OUTSIDE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES.

(a) STORAGE COSTS AUTHORIZED.—Subsection (b) of section 2634 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following:

"(b)(1) When a member receives a vehicle storage qualifying order, the member may elect to have a motor vehicle described in subsection (a) stored at the expense of the United States at a location approved by the Secretary concerned. In the case of a vehicle storage qualifying order that is to make a change of permanent station, such storage is in lieu of transportation authorized by subsection (a).

"(2) In this subsection, the term 'vehicle storage qualifying order' means any of the following:

"(A) An order to make a change of permanent station to a foreign country in a case in which the laws, regulations, or other restrictions imposed by the foreign country or by the United States either—

"(i) preclude entry of a motor vehicle described in subsection (a) into that country; or

"(ii) would require extensive modification of the vehicle as a condition to entry.

"(B) An order to make a change of permanent station to a nonforeign area outside the continental United States in a case in which the laws, regulations, or other restrictions imposed by that area or by the United States either—

"(i) preclude entry of a motor vehicle described in subsection (a) into that area; or

"(ii) would require extensive modification of the vehicle as a condition to entry.

"(C) An order under which a member is transferred or assigned in connection with a contingency operation to duty at a location other than the permanent station of the member for a period of more than 30 consecutive days but which is not considered a change of permanent station.".

(b) NONFOREIGN AREA OUTSIDE THE CONTINENTAL UNITED STATES DEFINED.—Subsection (h) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) The term 'nonforeign area outside the continental United States' means any of the following: the States of Alaska and Hawaii, the Commonwealths of Puerto Rico and the Northern Mariana Islands, and any possession of the United States.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section apply to orders to make a change of permanent station to a nonforeign area outside the continental United States (as such term is defined in subsection (h)(3) of section 2634 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (b)) that are issued on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle I—Reports

SEC. 581. QUADRENNIAL QUALITY OF LIFE REVIEW.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REVIEW.—(1) Chapter 2 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 118 the following new section:

"§ 118a. Quadrennial quality of life review

"(a) REVIEW REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall every four years conduct a comprehensive examination of the quality of life of the members of the armed forces (to be known as the 'quadrennial quality of life review'). The review shall include examination of the programs, projects, and activities of the Department of Defense, including the morale, welfare, and recreation activities.

"(2) The quadrennial quality of life review shall be designed to result in determinations, and to foster policies and actions, that reflect the priority given the quality of life of members of the armed forces as a primary concern of the Department of Defense leadership.

"(b) CONDUCT OF REVIEW.—Each quadrennial quality of life review shall be conducted so as—

"(1) to assess quality of life priorities and issues consistent with the most recent National Security Strategy prescribed by the President pursuant to section 108 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a);

"(2) to identify actions that are needed in order to provide members of the armed forces with the quality of life reasonably necessary to encourage the successful execution of the full range of missions that the members are called on to perform under the national security strategy; and

"(3) to identify other actions that have the potential for improving the quality of life of the members of the armed forces.

"(c) CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider addressing the following matters as part of the quadrennial quality of life review:

"(1) Infrastructure.

"(2) Military construction.

"(3) Physical conditions at military installations and other Department of Defense facilities.

"(4) Budget plans.

"(5) Adequacy of medical care for members of the armed forces and their dependents.

"(6) Adequacy of housing and the basic allowance for housing and basic allowance for subsistence.

"(7) Housing-related utility costs.

"(8) Educational opportunities and costs.

"(9) Length of deployments.

"(10) Rates of pay and pay differentials between the pay of members and the pay of civilians.

"(11) Retention and recruiting efforts.

"(12) Workplace safety.

"(13) Support services for spouses and children.

"(14) Other elements of Department of Defense programs and Government policies and programs that affect the quality of life of members.

"(d) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—(1) The Secretary shall submit a report on each quadrennial quality of life review to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives. The report shall include the following:

"(A) The assumptions used in the review.

"(B) The results of the review, including a comprehensive discussion of how the quality of life of members of the armed forces affects the national security strategy of the United States.

"(2) The report shall be submitted in the year following the year in which the review is conducted, but not later than the date on which the President submits the budget for the next fiscal year to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 118 the following new item:

"118a. Quadrennial quality of life review.".

(b) FIRST QUADRENNIAL QUALITY OF LIFE REVIEW.—The first quadrennial quality of life review under section 118a of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall be conducted during 2003, and the report on that review required to be submitted to Congress under subsection (d) of such section shall be submitted not later than the date on which the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2005 to Congress.

SEC. 582. REPORT ON DESIRABILITY AND FEASIBILITY OF CONSOLIDATING SEPARATE COURSES OF BASIC INSTRUCTION FOR JUDGE ADVOCATES.

Not later than February 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on the desirability and feasibility of consolidating the separate Army, Navy, and Air Force courses of basic instruction for judge advocates into a single course to be conducted at a single location. The report shall include—

(1) an assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of such a consolidation;

(2) a recommendation as to whether such a consolidation is desirable and feasible; and

(3) any proposal for legislative action that the Secretary considers appropriate for carrying out such a consolidation.

SEC. 583. REPORTS ON EFFORTS TO RESOLVE STATUS OF CAPTAIN MICHAEL SCOTT SPEICHER, UNITED STATES NAVY.

(a) Reports.— Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 120 days thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the efforts of the United States Government to determine the status of Captain Michael Scott Speicher, United States Navy, whose aircraft was shot down over Iraq on the night of January 17, 1991. Each such report shall be prepared in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Director of Central Intelligence.

(b) Period Covered by Reports.—The first report under subsection (a) shall cover efforts described in that subsection from the time that Michael Scott Speicher's aircraft was shot down over Iraq until the date of the report, and each subsequent report shall cover efforts described in that subsection since the last such report.

(c) Report Elements.—Each report under subsection (a) shall describe, for the period covered by such report, the following:

(1) All direct and indirect contacts by the United States Government with the Government of Iraq regarding the status of Michael Scott Speicher.

(2) Any request made by the United States Government to the government of another country, including the intelligence service of such country, for assistance in resolving the status of Michael Scott Speicher, including the response to such request.

(3) Each current lead on the status of Michael Scott Speicher, including an assessment of the utility of such lead in resolving the status of Michael Scott Speicher.

(4) Any cooperation with nongovernmental organizations or international organizations in resolving the status of Michael Scott Speicher, including the results of such cooperation.

(d) Form of Reports.—Each report under subsection (a) shall be submitted in classified or unclassified form. To the extent submitted in classified form, such report shall include an unclassified summary.

(e) Duration.—The requirement to submit reports under this section shall cease to be effective upon a final determination regarding the status of Michael Scott Speicher by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 584. REPORT ON VOLUNTEER SERVICES OF MEMBERS OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS IN EMERGENCY RESPONSE TO THE TERRORIST ATTACKS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001.

(a) Requirement for Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on volunteer services described in subsection (b) that were provided by members of the reserve components of the Armed Forces, while not in a duty status pursuant to orders, during the period of September 11 through September 14, 2001. The report shall include a discussion of any recognition that the Secretary considers appropriate for those members regarding the provision of such services.

(b) Covered Volunteer Services.—The volunteer services referred to in subsection (a) are volunteer services of a military-unique nature that were provided—

(1) in the vicinity of the site of the World Trade Center, New York, New York, in support of emergency response to the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001;

(2) in the vicinity of the Pentagon, Arlington, Virginia, in support of emergency response to the terrorist attack on the Pentagon on September 11, 2001; or

(3) in the vicinity of Shanksville, Pennsylvania, in support of emergency response to the terrorist-caused crash of United Airlines Flight 93 in Shanksville, Pennsylvania, on September 11, 2001.

(a) REQUIREMENT TO ESTABLISH PROCESS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe in regulations a process for resolving issues relating to patient safety and continuity of care for covered beneficiaries who are concurrently entitled to health care under the TRICARE program and eligible for health care services provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs. The Secretary shall—

(A) ensure that the process provides for coordination of, and access to, health care from the two sources in a manner that prevents diminution of access to health care from either source; and

(B) in consultation with the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, prescribe a clear definition of an "episode of care" for use in the resolution of patient safety and continuity of care issues under such process.

(2) Not later than May 1, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and of the House of Representatives a report describing the process prescribed under paragraph (1).

(3) While prescribing the process under paragraph (1) and upon completion of the report under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall provide to the Comptroller General information that would be relevant in carrying out the study required by subsection (b).

(b) Comptroller General Study and Report.—(1) The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the health care issues of covered beneficiaries described in subsection (a). The study shall include the following:

(A) An analysis of whether covered beneficiaries who seek services through the Department of Veterans Affairs are receiving needed health care services in a timely manner from the Department of Veterans Affairs, as compared to the timeliness of the care available to covered beneficiaries under TRICARE Prime (as set forth in access to care standards under TRICARE program policy that are applicable to the care being sought).

(B) An evaluation of the quality of care for covered beneficiaries who do not receive needed services from the Department of Veterans Affairs within a time period that is comparable to the time period provided for under such access to care standards and who then must seek alternative care under the TRICARE program.

(C) Recommendations to improve access to, and timeliness and quality of, care for covered beneficiaries described in subsection (a).

(D) An evaluation of the feasibility and advisability of making access to care standards applicable jointly under the TRICARE program and the Department of Veterans Affairs health care system.

(E) A review of the process prescribed by the Secretary of Defense under subsection (a) to determine whether the process ensures the adequacy and quality of the health care services provided to covered beneficiaries under the TRICARE program and through the Department of Veterans Affairs, together with timeliness of access to such services and patient safety.

(2) Not later than 60 days after the congressional committees specified in subsection (a)(2) receive the report required under that subsection, the Comptroller General shall submit to those committees a report on the study conducted under this subsection.

(c) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "covered beneficiary" has the meaning provided by section 1072(5) of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term "TRICARE program" has the meaning provided by section 1072(7) of such title.

(3) The term "TRICARE Prime" has the meaning provided by section 1097a(f) of such title.

SEC. 709. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION ON PROJECT 112 TO DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.

(a) Plan for Disclosure of Information.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs a comprehensive plan for the review, declassification, and submittal to the Department of Veterans Affairs of all records and information of the Department of Defense on Project 112 that are relevant to the provision of benefits by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to members of the Armed Forces who participated in that project.

(b) Plan Requirements.—(1) The records and information covered by the plan under subsection (a) shall be the records and information necessary to permit the identification of members of the Armed Forces who were or may have been exposed to chemical or biological agents as a result of Project 112.

(2) The plan shall provide for completion of all activities contemplated by the plan not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Identification of Other Projects or Tests.—The Secretary of Defense also shall work with veterans and veterans service organizations to identify other projects or tests conducted by the Department of Defense that may have exposed members of the Armed Forces to chemical or biological agents.

(d) GAO Reports on Plan and Implementation.—(1) Not later than 30 days after submission of the plan under subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report reviewing the plan. The report shall include an examination of whether adequate resources have been committed, the timeliness of the information to be released to the Department of Veterans Affairs, and the adequacy of the procedures to notify affected veterans of potential exposure.

(2) Not later than six months after implementation of the plan begins, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report evaluating the progress in the implementation of the plan.

(e) DOD Reports on Implementation.—(1) Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, and upon completion of all activities contemplated by the plan under subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs a report on progress in the implementation of the plan.

(2) Each report under paragraph (1) shall include, for the period covered by such report—

(A) the number of records reviewed;

(B) each test, if any, under Project 112 identified during such review;

(C) for each test so identified—

(i) the test name;

(ii) the test objective;

(iii) the chemical or biological agent or agents involved; and

(iv) the number of members of the Armed Forces, and civilian personnel, potentially effected by such test; and

(D) the extent of submittal of records and information to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under this section.

(f) Project 112.—For purposes of this section, Project 112 refers to the chemical and biological weapons vulnerability-testing program of the Department of Defense conducted by the Deseret Test Center from 1963 to 1969. The project included the Shipboard Hazard and Defense (SHAD) project of the Navy.

Subtitle B—Reports

SEC. 711. CLAIMS INFORMATION.

(a) Correspondence to Medicare Claims Information Requirements.—Section 1095c of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) Correspondence to Medicare Claims Information Requirements.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the other administering Secretaries, shall limit the information required in support of claims for payment for health care items and services provided under the TRICARE program to that information that is identical to the information that would be required for claims for reimbursement for those items and services under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.) except for that information, if any, that is uniquely required by the TRICARE program. The Secretary of Defense shall report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives any information that is excepted under this provision, and the justification for that exception.".

(b) Applicability.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the other administering Secretaries referred to in section 1072(3) of title 10, United States Code, shall apply the limitations required under subsection (d) of section 1095c of such title (as added by subsection (a)) with respect to contracts entered into under the TRICARE program on or after October 1, 2002.

(c) Comptroller General Report on TRICARE Claims Processing.—Not later than March 31, 2003, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress an evaluation of the continuing impediments to cost effective claims processing under the TRICARE program. The evaluation shall include a discussion of the following:

(1) The extent of progress implementing improvements in claims processing, particularly regarding the application of best industry practices.

(2) The extent of progress in simplifying claims processing procedures, including the elimination of, or reduction in, the complexity of the Health Care Service Record requirements.

(3) The cost effectiveness of the data collection and fraud prevention capabilities of existing claims processing practices.

(4) Recommendations for improving the claims processing system that will reduce processing and administration costs, create greater competition, and improve fraud-prevention activities.

SEC. 712. COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON PROVISION OF CARE UNDER THE TRICARE PROGRAM.

Not later than March 31, 2003, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress an evaluation of the nature of, reasons for, extent of, and trends regarding network provider instability under the TRICARE program, and the effectiveness of efforts by the Department of Defense and managed care support contractors to measure and mitigate such instability. The evaluation shall include a discussion of the following:

(1) The adequacy of measurement tools of TRICARE network instability and their use by the Department of Defense and managed care support contractors to assess network adequacy and stability.

(2) Recommendations for improvements needed in measurement tools or their application.

(3) The relationship of reimbursement rates and administration requirements (including preauthorization requirements) to TRICARE network instability.

(4) The extent of problems under the TRICARE program and likely future trends with and without intervention using existing authority.

(5) Use of existing authority by the Department of Defense and TRICARE managed care support contractors to apply higher reimbursement rates in specific geographic areas.

(6) Recommendations for specific fiscally prudent measures that could mitigate negative trends or improve provider and network stability.

SEC. 713. REPEAL OF REPORT REQUIREMENT.

Notwithstanding subsection (f)(2) of section 712 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A–179), the amendment made by subsection (e) of such section shall not take effect and the paragraph amended by such subsection is repealed.

Subtitle C—Department of Defense-Department of Veterans Affairs Health Resources Sharing

SEC. 721. REVISED COORDINATION AND SHARING GUIDELINES.

(a) In General.—(1) Section 8111 of title 38, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§8111. Sharing of Department of Veterans Affairs and Department of Defense health care resources

"(a) Required Coordination and Sharing of Health Care Resources.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense shall enter into agreements and contracts for the mutually beneficial coordination, use, or exchange of use of the health care resources of the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Department of Defense with the goal of improving the access to, and quality and cost effectiveness of, the health care provided by the Veterans Health Administration and the Military Health System to the beneficiaries of both Departments.

"(b) JOINT REQUIREMENTS FOR SECRETARIES OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND DEFENSE.—To facilitate the mutually beneficial coordination, use, or exchange of use of the health care resources of the two Departments, the two Secretaries shall carry out the following functions:

"(1) Develop and publish a joint strategic vision statement and a joint strategic plan to shape, focus, and prioritize the coordination and sharing efforts among appropriate elements of the two Departments and incorporate the goals and requirements of the joint sharing plan into the strategic and performance plan of each Department under the Government Performance and Results Act.

"(2) Jointly fund the interagency committee provided for under subsection (c).

"(3) Continue to facilitate and improve sharing between individual Department of Veterans Affairs and Department of Defense health care facilities, but giving priority of effort to initiatives (A) that improve sharing and coordination of health resources at the intraregional and nationwide levels, and (B) that improve the ability of both Departments to provide coordinated health care.

"(4) Establish a joint incentive program under subsection (d).

"(c) DOD–VA HEALTH EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—(1) There is established an interagency committee to be known as the Department of Veterans Affairs-Department of Defense Health Executive Committee (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Committee'). The Committee is composed of—

"(A) the Deputy Secretary of Veterans Affairs and such other officers and employees of the Department of Veterans Affairs as the Secretary of Veterans Affairs may designate; and

"(B) the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness and such other officers and employees of the Department of Defense as the Secretary of Defense may designate.

"(2)(A) During odd-numbered fiscal years, the Deputy Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall chair the Committee. During even-numbered fiscal years, the Under Secretary of Defense shall chair the Committee.

"(B) The Deputy Secretary and the Under Secretary shall determine the size and structure of the Committee, as well as the administrative and procedural guidelines for the operation of the Committee. The two Departments shall share equally the Committee's cost of personnel and administrative support and services. Support for such purposes shall be provided at a level sufficient for the efficient operation of the Committee, including a permanent staff and, as required, other temporary working groups of appropriate departmental staff and outside experts.

"(3) The Committee shall recommend to the Secretaries strategic direction for the joint coordination and sharing efforts between and within the two Departments under this section and shall oversee implementation of those efforts.

"(4) The Committee shall submit to the two Secretaries and to Congress an annual report containing such recommendations as the Committee considers appropriate.

"(5) In order to enable the Committee to make recommendations in its annual report under paragraph (4), the Committee shall do the following:

"(A) Review existing policies, procedures, and practices relating to the coordination and sharing of health care resources between the two Departments.

"(B) Identify changes in policies, procedures, and practices that, in the judgment of the Committee, would promote mutually beneficial coordination, use, or exchange of use of the health care resources of the two Departments, with the goal of improving the access to, and quality and cost effectiveness of, the health care provided by the Veterans Health Administration and the Military Health System to the beneficiaries of both Departments.

"(C) Identify and assess further opportunities for the coordination and sharing of health care resources between the Departments that, in the judgment of the Committee, would not adversely affect the range of services, the quality of care, or the established priorities for care provided by either Department.

"(D) Review the plans of both Departments for the acquisition of additional health care resources, especially new facilities and major equipment and technology, in order to assess the potential effect of such plans on further opportunities for the coordination and sharing of health care resources.

"(E) Review the implementation of activities designed to promote the coordination and sharing of health care resources between the Departments.

"(6) The Committee chairman, under procedures jointly developed by the two Secretaries, may require the Inspector General of either or both Departments to assist in activities under paragraph (5)(E).

"(d) JOINT INCENTIVES PROGRAM.—(1) Pursuant to subsection (b)(4), the two Secretaries shall carry out a program to identify, provide incentives to, implement, fund, and evaluate creative coordination and sharing initiatives at the facility, intraregional, and nationwide levels. The program shall be administered by the Committee established in subsection (c), under procedures jointly prescribed by the two Secretaries.

"(2) To facilitate the incentive program, effective October 1, 2003, there is established in the Treasury a fund to be known as the 'DOD–VA Health Care Sharing Incentive Fund'. Each Secretary shall annually contribute to the fund a minimum of $15,000,000 from the funds appropriated to that Secretary's Department. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

"(3)(A) For each fiscal year during which the program under this subsection is in effect, the Comptroller General shall conduct a review of the implementation and effectiveness of the incentives program under this subsection. Upon completion of each such annual review, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services and Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a report on the results of that review. Each such report shall be submitted not later than February 28 of the year following the fiscal year covered by the report. In addition, the Comptroller General shall conduct such a review during the first five months of fiscal year 2004 and, not later than February 28, 2004, shall submit to those committees a report on the implementation and effectiveness of the incentives program under this subsection to that date.

"(B) Each report under this paragraph shall describe activities carried out under the program under this subsection during the preceding fiscal year (or, in the case of the first such report, to the date of the submission of the report). Each report shall include at least the following:

"(i) An analysis of the initiatives funded by the Committee, and the funds so expended by such initiatives, from the DOD-VA Health Care Sharing Incentive Fund, including the purposes and effects of those initiatives on improving access to care by beneficiaries, improvements in the quality of care received by those beneficiaries, and efficiencies gained in delivering services to those beneficiaries.

"(ii) Other matters of interest, including recommendations from the Comptroller General for legislative improvements to the program.

"(4) The program under this subsection shall terminate on September 30, 2007.

"(e) GUIDELINES AND POLICIES FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF COORDINATION AND SHARING RECOMMENDATIONS, CONTRACTS, AND AGREEMENTS.—(1) To implement the recommendations made by the Committee under subsection (c)(2), as well as to carry out other health care contracts and agreements for coordination and sharing initiatives as they consider appropriate, the two Secretaries shall jointly issue guidelines and policy directives. Such guidelines and policies shall provide for coordination and sharing that—

"(A) is consistent with the health care responsibilities of the Department of Veterans Affairs under this title and with the health care responsibilities of the Department of Defense under chapter 55 of title 10;

"(B) will not adversely affect the range of services, the quality of care, or the established priorities for care provided by either Department; and

"(C) will not reduce capacities in certain specialized programs of the Department of Veterans Affairs that the Secretary is required to maintain in accordance with section 1706(b) of this title.

"(2) To facilitate the sharing and coordination of health care services between the two Departments, the two Secretaries shall jointly develop and implement guidelines for a standardized, uniform payment and reimbursement schedule for those services. Such schedule shall be implemented no later than October 1, 2003, and shall be revised periodically as necessary. The two Secretaries, following implementation of the schedule, may on a case-by-case basis waive elements of the schedule if they jointly agree that such a waiver is in the best interests of both Departments.

"(3)(A) The guidelines established under paragraph (1) shall authorize the heads of individual Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs medical facilities and service regions to enter into health care resources coordination and sharing agreements.

"(B) Under any such agreement, an individual who is a primary beneficiary of one Department may be provided health care, as provided in the agreement, at a facility or in the service region of the other Department that is a party to the sharing agreement.

"(C) Each such agreement shall identify the health care resources to be shared.

"(D) Each such agreement shall provide, and shall specify procedures designed to ensure, that the availability of direct health care to individuals who are not primary beneficiaries of the providing Department is (i) on a referral basis from the facility or service region of the other Department, and (ii) does not (as determined by the head of the providing facility or region) adversely affect the range of services, the quality of care, or the established priorities for care provided to the primary beneficiaries of the providing Department.

"(E) Each such agreement shall provide that a providing Department or service region shall be reimbursed for the cost of the health care resources provided under the agreement and that the rate of such reimbursement shall be as determined in accordance with paragraph (2).

"(F) Each proposal for an agreement under this paragraph shall be effective (i) on the 46th day after the receipt of such proposal by the Committee, unless earlier disapproved, or (ii) if earlier approved by the Committee, on the date of such approval.

"(G) Any funds received through such a uniform payment and reimbursement schedule shall be credited to funds that have been allotted to the facility of either Department that provided the care or services, or is due the funds from, any such agreement.

"(f) ANNUAL JOINT REPORT.—(1) At the time the President's budget is transmitted to Congress in any year pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, the two Secretaries shall submit to Congress a joint report on health care coordination and sharing activities under this section during the fiscal year that ended during the previous calendar year.

"(2) Each report under this section shall include the following:

"(A) The guidelines prescribed under subsection (e) (and any revision of such guidelines).

"(B) The assessment of further opportunities identified under subparagraph (C) of subsection (c)(5) for the sharing of health-care resources between the two Departments.

"(C) Any recommendation made under subsection (c)(4) during such fiscal year.

"(D) A review of the sharing agreements entered into under subsection (e) and a summary of activities under such agreements during such fiscal year and a description of the results of such agreements in improving access to, and the quality and cost effectiveness of, the health care provided by the Veterans Health Administration and the Military Health System to the beneficiaries of both Departments.

"(E) A summary of other planning and activities involving either Department in connection with promoting the coordination and sharing of Federal health-care resources during the preceding fiscal year.

"(F) Such recommendations for legislation as the two Secretaries consider appropriate to facilitate the sharing of health-care resources between the two Departments.

"(3) In addition to the matters specified in paragraph (2), the two Secretaries shall include in the annual report under this subsection an overall status report of the progress of health resources sharing between the two Departments as a consequence of subtitle C of title VII of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003 and of other sharing initiatives taken during the period covered by the report. Such status report shall indicate the status of such sharing and shall include appropriate data as well as analyses of that data. The annual report shall include the following:

"(A) Enumerations and explanations of major policy decisions reached by the two Secretaries during the period covered by the report period with respect to sharing between the two Departments.

"(B) A description of progress made in new ventures or particular areas of sharing and coordination that would be of policy interest to Congress consistent with the intent of such subtitle.

"(C) A description of enhancements of access to care of beneficiaries of both Departments that came about as a result of new sharing approaches brought about by such subtitle.

"(D) A description of proposals for which funds are provided through the joint incentives program under subsection (d), together with a description of their results or status at the time of the report, including access improvements, savings, and quality-of-care enhancements they brought about, and a description of any additional use of funds made available under subsection (d).

"(4) In addition to the matters specified in paragraphs (2) and (3), the two Secretaries shall include in the annual report under this subsection for each year through 2008 the following:

"(A) A description of the measures taken, or planned to be taken, to implement the health resources sharing project under section 722 of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003 and any cost savings anticipated, or cost sharing achieved, at facilities participating in the project, including information on improvements in access to care, quality, and timeliness, as well as impediments encountered and legislative recommendations to ameliorate such impediments.

"(B) A description of the use of the waiver authority provided by section 722(d)(1) of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003, including—

"(i) a statement of the numbers and types of requests for waivers under that section of administrative policies that have been made during the period covered by the report and, for each such request, an explanation of the content of each request, the intended purpose or result of the requested waiver, and the disposition of each request; and

"(ii) descriptions of any new administrative policies that enhance the success of the project.

"(5) In addition to the matters specified in paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), the two Secretaries shall include in the annual report under this subsection for each year through 2009 a report on the pilot program for graduate medical education under section 725 of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003, including activities under the program during the preceding year and each Secretary's assessment of the efficacy of providing education and training under that program.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'beneficiary' means a person who is a primary beneficiary of the Department of Veterans Affairs or of the Department of Defense.

"(2) The term 'direct health care' means health care provided to a beneficiary in a medical facility operated by the Department of Veterans Affairs or the Department of Defense.

"(3) The term 'head of a medical facility' (A) with respect to a medical facility of the Department of Veterans Affairs, means the director of the facility, and (B) with respect to a medical facility of the Department of Defense, means the medical or dental officer in charge or the contract surgeon in charge.

"(4) The term 'health-care resource' includes hospital care, medical services, and rehabilitative services, as those terms are defined in paragraphs (5), (6), and (8), respectively, of section 1701 of this title, services under sections 1782 and 1783 of this title, any other health-care service, and any health-care support or administrative resource.

"(5) The term 'primary beneficiary' (A) with respect to the Department means a person who is eligible under this title (other than under section 1782, 1783, or 1784 or subsection (d) of this section) or any other provision of law for care or services in Department medical facilities, and (B) with respect to the Department of Defense, means a member or former member of the Armed Forces who is eligible for care under section 1074 of title 10.

"(6) The term 'providing Department' means the Department of Veterans Affairs, in the case of care or services furnished by a facility of the Department of Veterans Affairs, and the Department of Defense, in the case of care or services furnished by a facility of the Department of Defense.

"(7) The term 'service region' means a geographic service area of the Veterans Health Administration, in the case of the Department of Veterans Affairs, and a service region, in the case of the Department of Defense.".

(2) The item relating to that section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 81 of title 38, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"8111. Sharing of Department of Veterans Affairs and Department of Defense health care resources.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1104(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "may" and inserting "shall".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 2003.

SEC. 722. HEALTH CARE RESOURCES SHARING AND COORDINATION PROJECT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—(1) The Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense shall conduct a health care resources sharing project to serve as a test for evaluating the feasibility, and the advantages and disadvantages, of measures and programs designed to improve the sharing and coordination of health care and health care resources between the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Department of Defense. The project shall be carried out, as a minimum, at the sites identified under subsection (b).

(2) Reimbursement between the two Departments with respect to the project under this section shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 8111(e)(2) of title 38, United States Code, as amended by section 721(a).

(b) SITE IDENTIFICATION.—(1) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretaries shall jointly identify not less than three sites for the conduct of the project under this section.

(2) For purposes of this section, a site at which the resource sharing project shall be carried out is an area in the United States in which—

(A) one or more military treatment facilities and one or more VA health care facilities are situated in relative proximity to each other, including facilities engaged in joint ventures as of the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(B) for which an agreement to coordinate care and programs for patients at those facilities could be implemented not later than October 1, 2004.

(c) CONDUCT OF PROJECT.—(1) At sites at which the project is conducted, the Secretaries shall provide a test of a coordinated management system for the military treatment facilities and VA health care facilities participating in the project. Such a coordinated management system for a site shall include at least one of the elements specified in paragraph (2), and each of the elements specified in that paragraph must be included in the coordinated management system for at least one of the participating sites.

(2) Elements of a coordinated management system referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

(A) A budget and financial management system for those facilities that—

(i) provides managers with information about the costs of providing health care by both Departments at the site; and

(ii) allows managers to assess the advantages and disadvantages (in terms of relative costs, benefits, and opportunities) of using resources of either Department to provide or enhance health care to beneficiaries of either Department.

(B) A coordinated staffing and assignment system for the personnel (including contract personnel) employed at or assigned to those facilities, including clinical practitioners of either Department.

(C) Medical information and information technology systems for those facilities that—

(i) are compatible with the purposes of the project;

(ii) communicate with medical information and information technology systems of corresponding elements of those facilities; and

(iii) incorporate minimum standards of information quality that are at least equivalent to those adopted for the Departments at large in their separate health care systems.

(d) Authority To Waive Certain Administrative Policies.—(1)(A) In order to carry out subsection (c), the Secretary of Defense may, in the Secretary's discretion, waive any administrative policy of the Department of Defense otherwise applicable to that subsection that specifically conflicts with the purposes of the project, in instances in which the Secretary determines that the waiver is necessary for the purposes of the project.

(B) In order to carry out subsection (c), the Secretary of Veterans Affairs may, in the Secretary's discretion, waive any administrative policy of the Department of Veterans Affairs otherwise applicable to that subsection that specifically conflicts with the purposes of the project, in instances in which the Secretary determines that the waiver is necessary for the purposes of the project.

(C) The two Secretaries shall establish procedures for resolving disputes that may arise from the effects of policy changes that are not covered by other agreements or existing procedures.

(2) No waiver under paragraph (1) may alter any labor-management agreement in effect as of the date of the enactment of this Act or adopted by either Department during the period of the project.

(e) Use by DOD of Certain Title 38 Personnel Authorities.—(1) In order to carry out subsection (c), the Secretary of Defense may apply to civilian personnel of the Department of Defense assigned to or employed at a military treatment facility participating in the project any of the provisions of subchapters I, III, and IV of chapter 74 of title 38, United States Code, determined appropriate by the Secretary.

(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), any reference in chapter 74 of title 38, United States Code—

(A) to the "Secretary" or the "Under Secretary for Health" shall be treated as referring to the Secretary of Defense; and

(B) to the "Veterans Health Administration" shall be treated as referring to the Department of Defense.

(f) Funding.—From amounts available for health care for a fiscal year, each Secretary shall make available to carry out the project not less than—

(1) $3,000,000 for fiscal year 2003;

(2) $6,000,000 for fiscal year 2004; and

(3) $9,000,000 for each succeeding year during which the project is in effect.

(g) Definitions.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "military treatment facility" means a medical facility under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of a military department.

(2) The term "VA health care facility" means a facility under the jurisdiction of the Veterans Health Administration of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(h) Performance Review.—(1) The Comptroller General shall provide for an annual onsite review at each of the project locations selected by the Secretaries under this section.

(2) Not later than 90 days after completion of the annual review under paragraph (1), the Comptroller General shall submit a report on such review to the Committees on Armed Services and Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives.

(3) Each such report shall include the following:

(A) The strategic mission coordination between shared activities.

(B) The accuracy and validity of performance data used to evaluate sharing performance and changes in standards of care or services at the shared facilities.

(C) A statement that all appropriated funds designated for sharing activities are being used for direct support of sharing initiatives.

(D) Recommendations concerning continuance of the project at each site for the succeeding 12-month period.

(4) Whenever there is a recommendation under paragraph (3)(D) to discontinue a resource sharing project under this section, the two Secretaries shall act upon that recommendation as soon as practicable.

(5) In the initial report under this subsection, the Comptroller General shall validate the baseline information used for comparative analysis.

(i) Termination.—(1) The project, and the authority provided by this section, shall terminate on September 30, 2007.

(2) The two Secretaries jointly may terminate the performance of the project at any site when the performance of the project at that site fails to meet performance expectations of the Secretaries, based on recommendations from the Comptroller General under subsection (h) or on other information available to the Secretaries to warrant such action.

SEC. 723. REPORT ON IMPROVED COORDINATION AND SHARING OF HEALTH CARE AND HEALTH CARE RESOURCES FOLLOWING DOMESTIC ACTS OF TERRORISM OR DOMESTIC USE OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) Joint Review.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly review the adequacy of current processes and existing statutory authorities and policy governing the capability of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to provide health care to members of the Armed Forces following domestic acts of terrorism or domestic use of weapons of mass destruction, both before and after any declaration of national emergency. Such review shall include a determination of the adequacy of current authorities in providing for the coordination and sharing of health care resources between the two Departments in such cases, particularly before the declaration of a national emergency.

(b) Report to Congress.—The two Secretaries shall include a joint report on the review under subsection (a), including any recommended legislative changes, shall be submitted to Congress as part of the fiscal year 2004 budget submission to Congress.

SEC. 724. INTEROPERABILITY OF DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PHARMACY DATA SYSTEMS.

(a) Interoperability.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense shall seek to ensure that on or before October 1, 2004, the Department of Veterans Affairs pharmacy data system and the Department of Defense pharmacy data system (known as the "Pharmacy Data Transaction System") are interoperable for both Department of Defense beneficiaries and Department of Veterans Affairs beneficiaries by achieving real-time interface, data exchange, and checking of prescription drug data of outpatients, and using national standards for the exchange of outpatient medication information.

(b) Alternative Requirement.—If the interoperability specified in subsection (a) is not achieved by October 1, 2004, as determined jointly by the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall adopt the Department of Defense Pharmacy Data Transaction System for use by the Department of Veterans Affairs health care system. Such system shall be fully operational not later than October 1, 2005.

(c) Implementation Funding for Alternative Requirement.—The Secretary of Defense shall transfer to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, or shall otherwise bear the cost of, an amount sufficient to cover three-fourths of the cost to the Department of Veterans Affairs for computer programming activities and relevant staff training expenses related to implementation of subsection (b). Such amount shall be determined in such manner as agreed to by the two Secretaries.

SEC. 725. JOINT PILOT PROGRAM FOR PROVIDING GRADUATE MEDICAL EDUCATION AND TRAINING FOR PHYSICIANS.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly carry out a pilot program under which graduate medical education and training is provided to military physicians and physician employees of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs through one or more programs carried out in military medical treatment facilities of the Department of Defense and medical centers of the Department of Veterans Affairs. The pilot program shall begin not later than January 1, 2003.

(b) Cost-Sharing Agreement.—The Secretaries shall enter into an agreement for carrying out the pilot program. The agreement shall establish means for each Secretary to assist in paying the costs, with respect to individuals under the jurisdiction of that Secretary, incurred by the other Secretary in providing medical education and training under the pilot program.

(c) Use of Existing Authorities.—To carry out the pilot program, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs may use authorities provided to them under this subtitle, section 8111 of title 38, United States Code (as amended by section 721(a)), and other laws relating to the furnishing or support of medical education and the cooperative use of facilities.

(d) Termination of Program.—The pilot program under this section shall terminate on July 31, 2008.

(e) Repeal of Superseded Provision.—Section 738 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 10 U.S.C. 1094 note; 115 Stat.1173) is repealed.

SEC. 726. REPEAL OF CERTAIN LIMITS ON DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS RESOURCES.

(a) Repeal of VA Bed Limits.—Section 8110(a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking "at not more than 125,000 and not less than 100,000";

(2) in the third sentence, by striking "shall operate and maintain a total of not less than 90,000 hospital beds and nursing home beds and"; and

(3) in the fourth sentence, by striking "to enable the Department to operate and maintain a total of not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds in accordance with this paragraph and".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 2003.

TITLE VIII—ACQUISITION POLICY, ACQUISITION MANAGEMENT, AND RELATED MATTERS

Subtitle A—Acquisition Policy and Management

Sec. 828. Report on effects of Army Contracting Agency.

Sec. 829. Authorization to take actions to correct the industrial resource shortfall for radiation-hardened electronics.

Subtitle A—Acquisition Policy and Management

SEC. 801. BUY-TO-BUDGET ACQUISITION OF END ITEMS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—(1) Chapter 137 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2307 the following new section:

"§2308. Buy-to-budget acquisition: end items

"(a) AUTHORITY TO ACQUIRE ADDITIONAL END ITEMS.—Using funds available to the Department of Defense for the acquisition of an end item, the head of an agency making the acquisition may acquire a higher quantity of the end item than the quantity specified for the end item in a law providing for the funding of that acquisition if that head of an agency makes each of the following findings:

"(1) The agency has an established requirement for the end item that is expected to remain substantially unchanged throughout the period of the acquisition.

"(2) It is possible to acquire the higher quantity of the end item without additional funding because of production efficiencies or other cost reductions.

"(3) The amount of the funds used for the acquisition of the higher quantity of the end item will not exceed the amount provided under that law for the acquisition of the end item.

"(4) The amount so provided is sufficient to ensure that each unit of the end item acquired within the higher quantity is fully funded as a complete end item.

"(b) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations for the administration of this section. The regulations shall include, at a minimum, the following:

"(1) The level of approval within the Department of Defense that is required for a decision to acquire a higher quantity of an end item under subsection (a).

"(2) Authority (subject to subsection (a)) to acquire up to 10 percent more than the quantity of an end item approved in a justification and approval of the use of procedures other than competitive procedures for the acquisition of the end item under section 2304 of this title.

"(c) NOTIFICATION OF CONGRESS.—The head of an agency is not required to notify Congress in advance regarding a decision under the authority of this section to acquire a higher quantity of an end item than is specified in a law described in subsection (a), but shall notify the congressional defense committees of the decision not later than 30 days after the date of the decision.

"(d) WAIVER BY OTHER LAW.—A provision of law may not be construed as prohibiting the acquisition of a higher quantity of an end item under this section unless that provision of law—

"(1) specifically refers to this section; and

"(2) specifically states that the acquisition of the higher quantity of the end item is prohibited notwithstanding the authority provided in this section.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—(1) For the purposes of this section, a quantity of an end item shall be considered specified in a law if the quantity is specified either in a provision of that law or in any related representation that is set forth separately in a table, chart, or explanatory text included in a joint explanatory statement or governing committee report accompanying the law.

"(2) In this section:

"(A) The term 'congressional defense committees' means—

"(i) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate; and

"(ii) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

"(B) The term 'end item' means a production product assembled, completed, and ready for issue or deployment.

"(C) The term 'head of an agency' means the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Air Force.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2307 the following new item:

"2308. Buy-to-budget acquisition: end items.".

(b) TIME FOR ISSUANCE OF FINAL REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall issue the final regulations under section 2308(b) of title 10, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 802. REPORT TO CONGRESS ON EVOLUTIONARY ACQUISITION OF MAJOR DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—(1) Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the approach that the Secretary plans to take to apply the requirements listed in paragraph (2) to major defense acquisition programs that follow the evolutionary acquisition process.

(2) The requirements referred to in paragraph (1) are—

(A) the requirements of chapter 144 of title 10, United States Code;

(B) sections 139, 181, 2366, 2399, and 2400 of such title;

(C) Department of Defense Directive 5000.1;

(D) Department of Defense Instruction 5000.2;

(E) Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Instruction 3170.01B; and

(F) other provisions of law and regulations (including successor documents) that are applicable to such programs.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report shall, at a minimum, address the following matters:

(1) The manner in which the Secretary plans to establish and approve, for each increment of an evolutionary acquisition process—

(A) operational requirements; and

(B) cost and schedule goals.

(2) The manner in which the Secretary plans, for each increment of an evolutionary acquisition process—

(A) to meet requirements for operational testing and live fire testing;

(B) to monitor cost and schedule performance; and

(C) to comply with laws requiring reports to Congress on results testing and on cost and schedule performance.

(3) The manner in which the Secretary plans to ensure that each increment of an evolutionary acquisition process is designed—

(A) to achieve interoperability within and among United States forces and United States coalition partners; and

(B) to optimize total system performance and minimize total ownership costs by giving appropriate consideration to—

(i) logistics planning;

(ii) manpower, personnel, and training;

(iii) human, environmental, safety, occupational health, accessibility, survivability, operational continuity, and security factors;

(iv) protection of critical program information; and

(v) spectrum management.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "evolutionary acquisition process" means a process by which an acquisition program is conducted through discrete phases or blocks, with each phase or block consisting of the planned definition, development, production or acquisition, and fielding of hardware or software that provides operationally useful capability.

(2) The term "increment", with respect to an evolutionary acquisition program, means one of the discrete phases or blocks of such program.

(3) The term "major defense acquisition program" has the meaning given such term in section 139(a)(2)(B) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 803. SPIRAL DEVELOPMENT UNDER MAJOR DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Defense is authorized to conduct major defense acquisition programs as spiral development programs.

(b) LIMITATION ON SPIRAL DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS.—A research and development program for a major defense acquisition program of a military department or Defense Agency may not be conducted as a spiral development program unless the Secretary of Defense approves the spiral development plan for that research and development program in accordance with subsection (c). The Secretary of Defense may delegate authority to approve the plan to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, or to the senior acquisition executive of the military department or Defense Agency concerned, but such authority may not be further delegated.

(c) Spiral Development Plans.—A spiral development plan for a research and development program for a major defense acquisition program shall, at a minimum, include the following matters:

(1) A rationale for dividing the research and development program into separate spirals, together with a preliminary identification of the spirals to be included.

(2) A program strategy, including overall cost, schedule, and performance goals for the total research and development program.

(3) Specific cost, schedule, and performance parameters, including measurable exit criteria, for the first spiral to be conducted.

(4) A testing plan to ensure that performance goals, parameters, and exit criteria are met.

(5) An appropriate limitation on the number of prototype units that may be produced under the research and development program.

(6) Specific performance parameters, including measurable exit criteria, that must be met before the major defense acquisition program proceeds into production of units in excess of the limitation on the number of prototype units.

(d) Guidance.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall issue guidance for the implementation of spiral development programs authorized by this section. The guidance shall include appropriate processes for ensuring the independent validation of exit criteria being met, the operational assessment of fieldable prototypes, and the management of spiral development programs.

(e) Reporting Requirement.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress by September 30 of each of 2003 through 2008 a status report on each research and development program that is a spiral development program. The report shall contain information on unit costs that is similar to the information on unit costs under major defense acquisition programs that is required to be provided to Congress under chapter 144 of title 10, United States Code, except that the information on unit costs shall address projected prototype costs instead of production costs.

(f) Applicability of Existing Law.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt any program of the Department of Defense from the application of any provision of chapter 144 of title 10, United States Code, section 139, 181, 2366, 2399, or 2400 of such title, or any requirement under Department of Defense Directive 5000.1, Department of Defense Instruction 5000.2, or Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Instruction 3170.01B in accordance with the terms of such provision or requirement.

(g) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "spiral development program", with respect to a research and development program, means a program that—

(A) is conducted in discrete phases or blocks, each of which will result in the development of fieldable prototypes; and

(B) will not proceed into acquisition until specific performance parameters, including measurable exit criteria, have been met.

(2) The term "spiral" means one of the discrete phases or blocks of a spiral development program.

(3) The term "major defense acquisition program" has the meaning given such term in section 139(a)(2)(B) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 804. IMPROVEMENT OF SOFTWARE ACQUISITION PROCESSES.

(a) Establishment of Programs.—(1) The Secretary of each military department shall establish a program to improve the software acquisition processes of that military department.

(2) The head of each Defense Agency that manages a major defense acquisition program with a substantial software component shall establish a program to improve the software acquisition processes of that Defense Agency.

(3) The programs required by this subsection shall be established not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Program Requirements.—A program to improve software acquisition processes under this section shall, at a minimum, include the following:

(1) A documented process for software acquisition planning, requirements development and management, project management and oversight, and risk management.

(2) Efforts to develop appropriate metrics for performance measurement and continual process improvement.

(3) A process to ensure that key program personnel have an appropriate level of experience or training in software acquisition.

(4) A process to ensure that each military department and Defense Agency implements and adheres to established processes and requirements relating to the acquisition of software.

(c) Department of Defense Guidance.—The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence, in consultation with the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, shall—

(1) prescribe uniformly applicable guidance for the administration of all of the programs established under subsection (a) and take such actions as are necessary to ensure that the military departments and Defense Agencies comply with the guidance; and

(2) assist the Secretaries of the military departments and the heads of the Defense Agencies to carry out such programs effectively by—

(A) ensuring that the criteria applicable to the selection of sources provides added emphasis on past performance of potential sources, as well as on the maturity of the software products offered by the potential sources; and

(B) identifying, and serving as a clearinghouse for information regarding, best practices in software development and acquisition in both the public and private sectors.

(d) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "Defense Agency" has the meaning given the term in section 101(a)(11) of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The term "major defense acquisition program" has the meaning given such term in section 139(a)(2)(B) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 805. PERFORMANCE GOALS FOR PROCURING SERVICES PURSUANT TO MULTIPLE AWARD CONTRACTS.

(a) Performance Goals.—Subsection (a) of section 802 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1178; 10 U.S.C. 2330 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Goals.—(1) It shall be an objective of the Department of Defense to achieve efficiencies in procurements of services pursuant to multiple award contracts through the use of—

"(A) performance-based services contracting;

"(B) appropriate competition for task orders under services contracts;

"(C) program review, spending analyses, and improved management of services contracts.

"(2) In furtherance of such objective, the Department of Defense shall have the following goals:

"(A) To increase, as a percentage of all of the individual purchases of services made by or for the Department of Defense under multiple award contracts for a fiscal year (calculated on the basis of dollar value), the volume of the individual purchases of services that are made on a competitive basis and involve receipt of more than one offer from qualified contractors to a percentage as follows:

"(i) For fiscal year 2003, a percentage not less than 40 percent.

"(ii) For fiscal year 2004, a percentage not less than 50 percent.

"(iii) For fiscal year 2011, a percentage not less than 75 percent.

"(B) To increase, as a percentage of all of the individual purchases of services made by or for the Department of Defense under multiple award contracts for a fiscal year (calculated on the basis of dollar value), the use of performance-based purchasing specifying firm fixed prices for the specific tasks to be performed to a percentage as follows:

"(i) For fiscal year 2003, a percentage not less than 25 percent.

"(ii) For fiscal year 2004, a percentage not less than 35 percent.

"(iii) For fiscal year 2005, a percentage not less than 50 percent.

"(iv) For fiscal year 2011, a percentage not less than 70 percent.

"(3) The Secretary of Defense may adjust any percentage goal established in paragraph (2) if the Secretary determines in writing that such a goal is too high and cannot reasonably be achieved. In the event that the Secretary chooses to adjust such a goal, the Secretary shall—

"(A) establish a percentage goal that the Secretary determines would create an appropriate incentive for Department of Defense components to use competitive procedures or performance-based services contracting, as the case may be; and

"(B) submit to the congressional defense committees a report containing an explanation of the reasons for the Secretary's determination and a statement of the new goal that the Secretary has established.".

(b) Extension and Revision of Reporting Requirement.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended—

(1) by striking "March 1, 2006" and inserting "March 1, 2011"; and

(2) by amending paragraph (5) to read as follows:

"(5) Regarding the individual purchases of services that were made by or for the Department of Defense under multiple award contracts in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year in which the report is required to be submitted, information (determined using the data collection system established under section 2330a of title 10, United States Code) as follows:

"(A) The percentage (calculated on the basis of dollar value) of such purchases that are purchases that were made on a competitive basis and involved receipt of more than one offer from qualified contractors.

"(B) The percentage (calculated on the basis of dollar value) of such purchases that are performance-based purchases specifying firm fixed prices for the specific tasks to be performed.".

(c) Definitions.—Such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) Definitions.—(1) In this section, the terms 'individual purchase' and 'multiple award contract' have the meanings given such terms in section 803(c) of this Act.

"(2) For the purposes of this section, an individual purchase of services is made on a competitive basis only if it is made pursuant to procedures described in paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of section 803(b) of this Act.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The heading for such section is amended by striking "SAVINGS GOALS" and inserting "PERFORMANCE GOALS".

SEC. 806. RAPID ACQUISITION AND DEPLOYMENT PROCEDURES.

(a) REQUIREMENT TO ESTABLISH PROCEDURES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe procedures for the rapid acquisition and deployment of items that are—

(1) currently under development by the Department of Defense or available from the commercial sector; and

(2) urgently needed to react to an enemy threat or to respond to significant and urgent safety situations.

(b) ISSUES TO BE ADDRESSED.—The procedures prescribed under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A process for streamlined communications between the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the acquisition community, and the research and development community, including—

(A) a process for the commanders of the combatant commands and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to communicate their needs to the acquisition community and the research and development community; and

(B) a process for the acquisition community and the research and development community to propose items that meet the needs communicated by the combatant commands and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

(2) Procedures for demonstrating, rapidly acquiring, and deploying items proposed pursuant to paragraph (1)(B), including—

(A) a process for demonstrating performance and evaluating for current operational purposes the existing capability of an item;

(B) a process for developing an acquisition and funding strategy for the deployment of an item; and

(C) a process for making deployment determinations based on information obtained pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(c) TESTING REQUIREMENT.—(1) The process for demonstrating performance and evaluating for current operational purposes the existing capability of an item prescribed under subsection (b)(2)(A) shall include—

(A) an operational assessment in accordance with procedures prescribed by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation; and

(B) a requirement to provide information about any deficiency of the item in meeting the original requirements for the item (as stated in an operational requirements document or similar document) to the deployment decisionmaking authority.

(2) The process may not include a requirement for any deficiency of an item to be the determining factor in deciding whether to deploy the item.

(d) LIMITATION.—The quantity of items of a system procured using the procedures prescribed pursuant to this section may not exceed the number established for low-rate initial production for the system. Any such items shall be counted for purposes of the number of items of the system that may be procured through low-rate initial production.

SEC. 807. QUICK-REACTION SPECIAL PROJECTS ACQUISITION TEAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall establish a team of highly qualified acquisition professionals who shall be available to advise the Under Secretary on actions that can be taken to expedite the acquisition of urgently needed systems.

(b) DUTIES.—The issues on which the team may provide advice shall include the following:

(1) Industrial base issues, including the limited availability of suppliers.

(2) Technology development and technology transition issues.

(3) Issues of acquisition policy, including the length of the acquisition cycle.

(4) Issues of testing policy and ensuring that weapon systems perform properly in combat situations.

(5) Issues of procurement policy, including the impact of socio-economic requirements.

(6) Issues relating to compliance with environmental requirements.

Subtitle B—Amendments to General Contracting Authorities, Procedures, and Limitations

SEC. 811. LIMITATION PERIOD FOR TASK AND DELIVERY ORDER CONTRACTS.

(a) LIMITATION PERIOD.—Section 2306c of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) LIMITATION PERIOD FOR TASK AND DELIVERY ORDER CONTRACTS.—(1) The authority and restrictions of this section, including the authority to enter into contracts for periods of not more than five years, shall apply with respect to task order and delivery order contracts entered into under the authority of section 2304a, 2304b, or 2304c of this title.

"(2) The regulations implementing this subsection shall establish a preference that, to the maximum extent practicable, multi-year requirements for task order and delivery order contracts be met with separate awards to two or more sources under the authority of section 2304a(d)(1)(B) of this title.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subsection (g) of section 2306c of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall apply to all task order and delivery order contracts entered into on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT.—Not later than March 15, 2003, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on the contract periods (including any options or extensions) for all single and multiple contract awards entered into under section 2304a(d) of title 10, United States Code, before the effective date in subsection (b).

SEC. 812. ONE-YEAR EXTENSION OF PROGRAM APPLYING SIMPLIFIED PROCEDURES TO CERTAIN COMMERCIAL ITEMS; REPORT.

(a) EXTENSION OF PILOT PROGRAM.—Section 4202 of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104–106; 10 U.S.C. 2304 note) is amended in subsection (e) by striking "January 1, 2003" and inserting "January 1, 2004".

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—(1) Not later than March 15, 2003, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the authority to issue solicitations for purchases of commercial items in excess of the simplified acquisition threshold pursuant to the special simplified procedures authorized by section 2304(g)(1) of title 10, United States Code, and section 31(a) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 427(a)).

(2) The report required by paragraph (1) shall address, at a minimum—

(A) the extent to which such authority has been used by the Secretary of Defense;

(B) the benefits realized by the Department of Defense through the use of such authority;

(C) the impact of the use of such authority on competition for contracts with the Department of Defense; and

(D) any recommendations of the Comptroller General for the continuation or modification of such authority.

SEC. 813. EXTENSION AND IMPROVEMENT OF PERSONNEL DEMONSTRATION POLICIES AND PROCEDURES APPLICABLE TO THE CIVILIAN ACQUISITION WORKFORCE.

(a) PLAN REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall develop a plan for improving the personnel management policies and procedures applicable to the Department of Defense civilian acquisition workforce based on the results of the demonstration project described in section 4308 of the Clinger–Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104–106; 10 U.S.C. 1701 note).

(2) Not later than February 15, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to Congress the plan required under paragraph (1) and a report on the plan, including any recommendations for legislative action necessary to implement the plan.

(b) EXTENSION OF DEMONSTRATION PROJECT AUTHORITY.—Section 4308 of the Clinger–Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104–106; 10 U.S.C. 1701 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2)(C), by striking "subsection (d)(1)(A)" and inserting "subsection (d)(1)";

(2) by amending subparagraph (B) of subsection (b)(3) to read as follows:

"(B) commences before October 1, 2007."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority to conduct a demonstration program under this section shall terminate on September 30, 2012.".

SEC. 814. PAST PERFORMANCE GIVEN SIGNIFICANT WEIGHT IN RENEWAL OF PROCUREMENT TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.

Section 2413 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) In conducting a competition for the award of a cooperative agreement under subsection (a), and in determining the level of funding to provide under an agreement under subsection (b), the Secretary shall give significant weight to successful past performance of eligible entities under a cooperative agreement under this section.".

SEC. 815. INCREASED MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF ASSISTANCE FOR TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS OR ECONOMIC ENTERPRISES CARRYING OUT PROCUREMENT TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS IN TWO OR MORE SERVICE AREAS.

Section 2414(a)(4) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "$300,000" and inserting "$600,000".

SEC. 816. EXTENSION OF CONTRACT GOAL FOR SMALL DISADVANTAGED BUSINESSES AND CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION.

Section 2323(k) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "2003" both places it appears and inserting "2006".

SEC. 817. GRANTS OF EXCEPTIONS TO COST OR PRICING DATA CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS AND WAIVERS OF COST ACCOUNTING STANDARDS.

(a) GUIDANCE FOR EXCEPTIONS IN EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall issue guidance on the circumstances under which it is appropriate to grant an exceptional case exception or waiver with respect to certified cost and pricing data and cost accounting standards.

(b) DETERMINATION REQUIRED FOR EXCEPTIONAL CASE EXCEPTION OR WAIVER.—The guidance shall, at a minimum, include a limitation that a grant of an exceptional case exception or waiver is appropriate with respect to a contract, subcontract, or (in the case of submission of certified cost and pricing data) modification only upon a determination that—

(1) the property or services cannot reasonably be obtained under the contract, subcontract, or modification, as the case may be, without the grant of the exception or waiver;

(2) the price can be determined to be fair and reasonable without the submission of certified cost and pricing data or the application of cost accounting standards, as the case may be; and

(3) there are demonstrated benefits to granting the exception or waiver.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF NEW GUIDANCE.—The guidance issued under subsection (a) shall apply to each exceptional case exception or waiver that is granted on or after the date on which the guidance is issued.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT ON BOTH COMMERCIAL ITEM AND EXCEPTIONAL CASE EXCEPTIONS AND WAIVERS WITH PRICE OR VALUE GREATER THAN $15,000,000.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall transmit to the congressional defense committees promptly after the end of each fiscal year a report on commercial item exceptions, and exceptional case exceptions and waivers, described in paragraph (2) that were granted during that fiscal year.

(2) The report for a fiscal year shall include—

(A) with respect to any commercial item exception granted in the case of a contract, subcontract, or contract or subcontract modification that is expected to have a price of $15,000,000 or more, an explanation of the basis for the determination that the products or services to be purchased are commercial items, including an identification of the specific steps taken to ensure price reasonableness; and

(B) with respect to any exceptional case exception or waiver granted in the case of a contract or subcontract that is expected to have a value of $15,000,000 or more, an explanation of the basis for the determination described in subsection (b), including an identification of the specific steps taken to ensure that the price was fair and reasonable.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "exceptional case exception or waiver" means either of the following:

(A) An exception pursuant to section 2306a(b)(1)(C) of title 10, United States Code, relating to submission of certified cost and pricing data.

(B) A waiver pursuant to section 26(f)(5)(B) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 422(f)(5)(B)), relating to the applicability of cost accounting standards to contracts and subcontracts.

(2) The term "commercial item exception" means an exception pursuant to section 2306a(b)(1)(B) of title 10, United States Code, relating to submission of certified cost and pricing data.

SEC. 818. TIMING OF CERTIFICATION IN CONNECTION WITH WAIVER OF SURVIVABILITY AND LETHALITY TESTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) CERTIFICATION FOR EXPEDITED PROGRAMS.—Paragraph (1) of subsection (c) of section 2366 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) The Secretary of Defense may waive the application of the survivability and lethality tests of this section to a covered system, munitions program, missile program, or covered product improvement program if the Secretary determines that live-fire testing of such system or program would be unreasonably expensive and impractical and submits a certification of that determination to Congress—

"(A) before Milestone B approval for the system or program; or

"(B) in the case of a system or program initiated at—

"(i) Milestone B, as soon as is practicable after the Milestone B approval; or

"(ii) Milestone C, as soon as is practicable after the Milestone C approval.".

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Subsection (e) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(8) The term 'Milestone B approval' means a decision to enter into system development and demonstration pursuant to guidance prescribed by the Secretary of Defense for the management of Department of Defense acquisition programs.

"(9) The term 'Milestone C approval' means a decision to enter into production and deployment pursuant to guidance prescribed by the Secretary of Defense for the management of Department of Defense acquisition programs.".

SEC. 819. CONTRACTING WITH FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES.

(a) ASSURANCE OF BEST VALUE FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE.—(1) Section 2410n of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)—

(i) by amending the heading to read as follows: "MARKET RESEARCH.—"; and

(ii) by striking "comparable in price, quality, and time of delivery to products available from the private sector" and inserting "comparable to products available from the private sector that best meet the Department's needs in terms of price, quality, and time of delivery";

(B) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"(b) COMPETITION REQUIREMENT.—If the Secretary determines that a Federal Prison Industries product is not comparable in price, quality, or time of delivery to products available from the private sector that best meet the Department's needs in terms of price, quality, and time of delivery, the Secretary shall use competitive procedures for the procurement of the product or shall make an individual purchase under a multiple award contract. In conducting such a compeititon or making such a purchase, the Secretary shall consider a timely offer from Federal Prison Industries."; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(c) IMPLEMENTATION BY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that—

"(1) the Department of Defense does not purchase a Federal Prison Industries product or service unless a contracting officer of the Department determines that the product or service is comparable to products or services available from the private sector that best meet the Department's needs in terms of price, quality, and time of delivery; and .

"(A) retain money, securities, and the proceeds of the sale of securities, in the National Defense University Gift Fund; and

"(B) invest money and reinvest the proceeds of the sale of securities in that fund in securities of the United States or in securities guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States.

"(2) The interest and profits accruing from those securities shall be deposited to the credit of the fund and may be disbursed as provided in subsection (b).

"(e) In this section:

"(1) the term 'gift' includes a devise of real property or a bequest of personal property and any gift of an interest in real property.

"(2) The term 'National Defense University' includes any school or other component of the National Defense University specified under section 2165(b) of this title.

"(f) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section.".

"2612. National Defense University: acceptance of gifts.".

SEC. 932. WESTERN HEMISPHERE INSTITUTE FOR SECURITY COOPERATION.

(a) AUTHORITY TO ACCEPT FOREIGN GIFTS AND DONATIONS.—Section 2166 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (f), (g), and (h), as subsections (g), (h), and (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection (f):

"(f) AUTHORITY TO ACCEPT FOREIGN GIFTS AND DONATIONS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may, on behalf of the Institute, accept foreign gifts or donations in order to defray the costs of, or enhance the operation of, the Institute.

"(2) Funds received by the Secretary under paragraph (1) shall be credited to appropriations available for the Department of Defense for the Institute. Funds so credited shall be merged with the appropriations to which credited and shall be available for the Institute for the same purposes and same period as the appropriations with which merged.

"(3) The Secretary of Defense shall notify Congress if the total amount of money accepted under paragraph (1) exceeds $1,000,000 in any fiscal year. Any such notice shall list each of the contributors of such money and the amount of each contribution in such fiscal year.

"(4) For the purposes of this subsection, a foreign gift or donation is a gift or donation of funds, materials (including research materials), property, or services (including lecture services and faculty services) from a foreign government, a foundation or other charitable organization in a foreign country, or an individual in a foreign country.".

(b) CONTENT OF ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Subsection (i) of such section, as redesignated by subsection (a)(1), is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "The report shall include a copy of the latest report of the Board of Visitors received by the Secretary under subsection (e)(5), together with any comments of the Secretary on the Board's report.".

SEC. 1001. TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER AUTHORIZATIONS.—(1) Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary may transfer amounts of authorizations made available to the Department of Defense in this division for fiscal year 2003 between any such authorizations for that fiscal year (or any subdivisions thereof). Amounts of authorizations so transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes as the authorization to which transferred.

(2) The total amount of authorizations that the Secretary may transfer under the authority of paragraph (1) may not exceed $2,000,000,000.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—The authority provided by subsection (a) to transfer authorizations—

(1) may only be used to provide authority for items that have a higher priority than the items from which authority is transferred; and

(2) may not be used to provide authority for an item that has been denied authorization by Congress.

(c) EFFECT ON AUTHORIZATION AMOUNTS.—A transfer made from one account to another under the authority of subsection (a) shall be deemed to increase the amount authorized for the account to which the amount is transferred by an amount equal to the amount transferred.

(d) NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall promptly notify Congress of each transfer made under subsection (a).

(e) INCREASE IN AMOUNT OF TRANSFER AUTHORITY AUTHORIZED FOR FY02.—Section 1001 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1201) is amended by striking "$2,000,000,000" and inserting "$2,500,000,000".

SEC. 1002. AUTHORIZATION OF SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002.

(a) DOD Authorizations.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2002 in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) are hereby adjusted, with respect to any such authorized amount, by the amount by which appropriations pursuant to such authorization are increased (by a supplemental appropriation) or decreased (by a rescission), or both, or are increased by a transfer of funds, pursuant to chapter 3 or chapter 10 of title I of Public Law 107–206 (116 Stat. 835, 878).

(b) NNSA Authorizations.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2002 in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) are hereby adjusted, with respect to any such authorized amount, by the amount by which appropriations pursuant to such authorization are increased (by a supplemental appropriation) or decreased (by a rescission), or both, or are increased by a transfer of funds, pursuant to chapter 5 of title I of Public Law 107–206 (116 Stat. 848).

(c) Report on Fiscal Year 2002 Transfers.—Not later than January 15, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report stating, for each transfer during fiscal year 2002 of an amount provided for the Department of Defense for that fiscal year through a so-called "transfer account", including the Defense Emergency Response Fund or any other similar account, the amount of the transfer, the appropriation account to which the transfer was made, and the specific purpose for which the transferred funds were used.

SEC. 1003. UNITED STATES CONTRIBUTION TO NATO COMMON-FUNDED BUDGETS IN FISCAL YEAR 2003.

(a) Fiscal Year 2003 Limitation.—The total amount contributed by the Secretary of Defense in fiscal year 2003 for the common-funded budgets of NATO may be any amount up to, but not in excess of, the amount specified in subsection (b) (rather than the maximum amount that would otherwise be applicable to those contributions under the fiscal year 1998 baseline limitation).

(b) Total Amount.—The amount of the limitation applicable under subsection (a) is the sum of the following:

(1) The amounts of unexpended balances, as of the end of fiscal year 2002, of funds appropriated for fiscal years before fiscal year 2003 for payments for those budgets.

(2) The amount specified in subsection (c)(1).

(3) The amount specified in subsection (c)(2).

(4) The total amount of the contributions authorized to be made under section 2501.

(c) Authorized Amounts.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated by titles II and III of this Act are available for contributions for the common-funded budgets of NATO as follows:

(1) Of the amount provided in section 201(1), $750,000 for the Civil Budget.

(2) Of the amount provided in section 301(1), $205,623,000 for the Military Budget.

(d) Definitions.—For purposes of this section:

(1) Common-funded budgets of NATO.—The term "common-funded budgets of NATO" means the Military Budget, the Security Investment Program, and the Civil Budget of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (and any successor or additional account or program of NATO).

(2) Fiscal year 1998 baseline limitation.—The term "fiscal year 1998 baseline limitation" means the maximum annual amount of Department of Defense contributions for common-funded budgets of NATO that is set forth as the annual limitation in section 3(2)(C)(ii) of the resolution of the Senate giving the advice and consent of the Senate to the ratification of the Protocols to the North Atlantic Treaty of 1949 on the Accession of Poland, Hungary, and the Czech Republic (as defined in section 4(7) of that resolution), approved by the Senate on April 30, 1998.

SEC. 1004. DEVELOPMENT AND IMPLEMENTATION OF FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT ENTERPRISE ARCHITECTURE.

(a) Requirement for Enterprise Architecture and for Transition Plan.—Not later than May 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall develop—

(1) a financial management enterprise architecture for all budgetary, accounting, finance, enterprise resource planning, and mixed information systems of the Department of Defense; and

(2) a transition plan for implementing that financial management enterprise architecture.

(b) Composition of Enterprise Architecture.—(1) The financial management enterprise architecture developed under subsection (a)(1) shall describe an information infrastructure that, at a minimum, would enable the Department of Defense to—

(A) comply with all Federal accounting, financial management, and reporting requirements;

(B) routinely produce timely, accurate, and reliable financial information for management purposes;

(C) integrate budget, accounting, and program information and systems; and

(D) provide for the systematic measurement of performance, including the ability to produce timely, relevant, and reliable cost information.

(2) That enterprise architecture shall also include policies, procedures, data standards, and system interface requirements that are to apply uniformly throughout the Department of Defense.

(c) Composition of Transition Plan.—The transition plan developed under subsection (a)(2) shall include the following:

(1) The acquisition strategy for the enterprise architecture, including specific time-phased milestones, performance metrics, and financial and nonfinancial resource needs.

(2) A listing of the mission critical or mission essential operational and developmental financial and nonfinancial management systems of the Department of Defense, as defined by the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), consistent with budget justification documentation, together with—

(A) the costs to operate and maintain each of those systems during fiscal year 2002; and

(B) the estimated cost to operate and maintain each of those systems during fiscal year 2003.

(3) A listing of the operational and developmental financial management systems of the Department of Defense as of the date of the enactment of this Act (known as "legacy systems") that will not be part of the objective financial and nonfinancial management system, together with the schedule for terminating those legacy systems that provides for reducing the use of those legacy systems in phases.

(d) Conditions for Obligation of Significant Amounts for Financial System Improvements.—An amount in excess of $1,000,000 may be obligated for a defense financial system improvement only if the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) makes a determination regarding that improvement as follows:

(1) Before the date of an approval specified in paragraph (2), a determination that the defense financial system improvement is necessary for either of the following reasons:

(A) To achieve a critical national security capability or address a critical requirement in an area such as safety or security.

(B) To prevent a significant adverse effect (in terms of a technical matter, cost, or schedule) on a project that is needed to achieve an essential capability, taking into consideration in the determination the alternative solutions for preventing the adverse effect.

(2) On and after the date of any approval by the Secretary of Defense of a financial management enterprise architecture and a transition plan that satisfy the requirements of this section, a determination that the defense financial system improvement is consistent with both the enterprise architecture and the transition plan.

(e) Congressional Reports.—Not later than March 15 of each year from 2004 through 2007, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the progress of the Department of Defense in implementing the enterprise architecture and transition plan required by this section. Each report shall include, at a minimum—

(1) a description of the actions taken during the preceding fiscal year to implement the enterprise architecture and transition plan (together with the estimated costs of such actions);

(2) an explanation of any action planned in the enterprise architecture and transition plan to be taken during the preceding fiscal year that was not taken during that fiscal year;

(3) a description of the actions taken and planned to be taken during the current fiscal year to implement the enterprise architecture and transition plan (together with the estimated costs of such actions); and

(4) a description of the actions taken and planned to be taken during the next fiscal year to implement the enterprise architecture and transition plan (together with the estimated costs of such actions).

(f) Comptroller General Review.—Not later than 60 days after the approval of an enterprise architecture and transition plan in accordance with the requirements of subsection (a), and not later than 60 days after the submission of an annual report required by subsection (e), the Comptroller General shall submit to the congressional defense committees an assessment of the extent to which the actions taken by the Department comply with the requirements of this section.

(g) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "defense financial system improvement" means the acquisition of a new budgetary, accounting, finance, enterprise resource planning, or mixed information system for the Department of Defense or a modification of an existing budgetary, accounting, finance, enterprise resource planning, or mixed information system of the Department of Defense. Such term does not include routine maintenance and operation of any such system.

(2) The term "mixed information system" means an information system that supports financial and non-financial functions of the Federal Government as defined in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–127 (Financial management Systems).

(h) Repeal.—(1) Section 2222 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed. The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 131 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to such section.

(2) Section 185(d) of such title is amended by striking "has the meaning given that term in section 2222(c)(2) of this title" and inserting "means an automated or manual system from which information is derived for a financial management system or an accounting system".

SEC. 1005. ACCOUNTABLE OFFICIALS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) Accountable Officials Within the Department of Defense.—Chapter 165 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2773 the following new section:

"§2773a. Departmental accountable officials

"(a) DESIGNATION BY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.—The Secretary of Defense may designate any civilian employee of the Department of Defense or member of the armed forces under the Secretary's jurisdiction who is described in subsection (b) as an employee or member who, in addition to any other potential accountability, may be held accountable through personal monetary liability for an illegal, improper, or incorrect payment made the Department of Defense described in subsection (c). Any such designation shall be in writing. Any employee or member who is so designated may be referred to as a 'departmental accountable official'.

"(b) COVERED EMPLOYEES AND MEMBERS.—An employee or member of the armed forces described in this subsection is an employee or member who—

"(1) is responsible in the performance of the employee's or member's duties for providing to a certifying official of the Department of Defense information, data, or services that are directly relied upon by the certifying official in the certification of vouchers for payment; and

"(2) is not otherwise accountable under subtitle III of title 31 or any other provision of law for payments made on the basis of such vouchers.

"(c) PECUNIARY LIABILITY.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may subject a departmental accountable official to pecuniary liability for an illegal, improper, or incorrect payment made by the Department of Defense if the Secretary determines that such payment—

"(A) resulted from information, data, or services that that official provided to a certifying official and upon which that certifying official directly relies in certifying the voucher supporting that payment; and

"(B) was the result of fault or negligence on the part of that departmental accountable official.

"(2) Pecuniary liability under this subsection shall apply in the same manner and to the same extent as applies to an official accountable under subtitle III of title 31.

"(3) Any pecuniary liability of a departmental accountable official under this subsection for a loss to the United States resulting from an illegal, improper, or incorrect payment is joint and several with that of any other officer or employee of the United States or member of the uniformed services who is pecuniarily liable for such loss.

"(d) CERTIFYING OFFICIAL DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'certifying official' means an employee who has the responsibilities specified in section 3528(a) of title 31.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2773 the following new item:

"2773a. Departmental accountable officials.".

(c) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED PROVISIONS.—(1) Sections 4835 and 9835 of title 10, United States Code, are repealed.

(2) The tables of sections at the beginning of chapters 453 and 953 of such title are amended by striking the items relating to sections 4835 and 9835, respectively.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to the loss, spoilage, unserviceability, unsuitability, or destruction of, or damage to, property of the United States under the control of the Department of Defense occurring on or after the effective date of regulations prescribed pursuant to section 2787 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a).

SEC. 1007. IMPROVEMENTS IN PURCHASE CARD MANAGEMENT.

(a) PURCHASE CARD MANAGEMENT IMPROVEMENTS.—Section 2784 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking ", acting through the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller),"; and

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (b) the following:

"(7) That periodic reviews are performed to determine whether each purchase card holder has a need for the purchase card.

"(8) That the Inspector General of the Department of Defense, the Inspector General of the Army, the Naval Inspector General, and the Inspector General of the Air Force perform periodic audits to identify—

"(A) potentially fraudulent, improper, and abusive uses of purchase cards;

"(B) any patterns of improper card holder transactions, such as purchases of prohibited items; and

"(C) categories of purchases that should be made by means other than purchase cards in order to better aggregate purchases and obtain lower prices.

"(9) That appropriate training is provided to each purchase card holder and each official with responsibility for overseeing the use of purchase cards issued by the Department of Defense.

"(10) That the Department of Defense has specific policies regarding the number of purchase cards issued by various organizations and categories of organizations, the credit limits authorized for various categories of card holders, and categories of employees eligible to be issued purchase cards, and that those policies are designed to minimize the financial risk to the Federal Government of the issuance of the purchase cards and to ensure the integrity of purchase card holders.

"(c) PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS.—The regulations prescribed under subsection (a) shall—

"(1) provide for appropriate adverse personnel actions or other punishment to be imposed in cases in which employees of the Department of Defense violate such regulations or are negligent or engage in misuse, abuse, or fraud with respect to a purchase card, including removal in appropriate cases; and

"(2) provide that a violation of such regulations by a person subject to chapter 47 of this title (the Uniform Code of Military Justice) is punishable as a violation of section 892 of this title (article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice).".

(b) CONFORMING AND CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 2784 of such title is further amended—

(B) in the heading of subsection (a), by striking "CREDIT" and inserting "PURCHASE"; and

(C) in subsection (a) and paragraphs (1) through (6) of subsection (b), by striking "credit" and inserting "purchase" each place it appears.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 165 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2784 and inserting the following:

"2784. Management of purchase cards.".

SEC. 1008. IMPROVEMENTS IN TRAVEL CARD MANAGEMENT.

(a) TRAVEL CARD MANAGEMENT IMPROVEMENTS.—Chapter 165 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2784 the following new section:

"§2784a. Management of travel cards

"(a) DISBURSEMENT OF TRAVEL ALLOWANCES DIRECTLY TO CREDITORS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may require that any part of a travel or transportation allowance of an employee of the Department of Defense or a member of the armed forces be disbursed directly to the issuer of a Defense travel card if the amount is disbursed to the issuer in payment of amounts of expenses of official travel that are charged by the employee or member on the Defense travel card.

"(2) For the purposes of this subsection, the travel and transportation allowances referred to in paragraph (1) are amounts to which an employee of the Department of Defense is entitled under section 5702 of title 5 or a member of the armed forces is entitled under section 404 of title 37.

"(b) OFFSETS FOR DELINQUENT TRAVEL CARD CHARGES.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may require that there be deducted and withheld from any basic pay payable to an employee of the Department of Defense or a member of the armed forces any amount that is owed by the employee or member to a creditor by reason of one or more charges of expenses of official travel of the employee or member on a Defense travel card issued by the creditor if the employee or member—

"(A) is delinquent in the payment of such amount under the terms of the contract under which the card is issued; and

"(B) does not dispute the amount of the delinquency.

"(2) The amount deducted and withheld from pay under paragraph (1) with respect to a debt owed a creditor as described in that paragraph shall be disbursed to the creditor to reduce the amount of the debt.

"(3) The amount of pay deducted and withheld from the pay owed to an employee or member with respect to a pay period under paragraph (1) may not exceed 15 percent of the disposable pay of the employee or member for that pay period, except that a higher amount may be deducted and withheld with the written consent of the employee or member.

"(4) The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe procedures for deducting and withholding amounts from pay under this subsection. The procedures shall be substantially equivalent to the procedures under section 3716 of title 31.

"(c) Offsets of Retired Pay.—In the case of a former employee of the Department of Defense or a retired member of the armed forces who is receiving retired pay and who owes an amount to a creditor by reason of one or more charges on a Defense travel card that were made before the retirement of the employee or member, the Secretary may require amounts to be deducted and withheld from any retired pay of the former employee or retired member in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as the Secretary deducts and withholds amounts from basic pay payable to an employee or member under subsection (b).

"(d) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'Defense travel card' means a charge or credit card that—

"(A) is issued to an employee of the Department of Defense or a member of the armed forces under a contract entered into by the Department of Defense with the issuer of the card; and

"(B) is to be used for charging expenses incurred by the employee or member in connection with official travel.

"(2) The term 'disposable pay', with respect to a pay period, means the amount equal to the excess of the amount of basic pay or retired pay, as the case may be, payable for the pay period over the total of the amounts deducted and withheld from such pay.

"(3) The term 'retired pay' means—

"(A) in the case of a former employee of the Department of Defense, any retirement benefit payable to that individual, out of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, based (in whole or in part) on service performed by such individual as a civilian employee of the Department of Defense; and

"(B) in the case of a retired member of the armed forces or member of the Fleet Reserve or Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, retired or retainer pay to which the member is entitled.

"(e) Exclusion of Coast Guard.—This section does not apply to the Coast Guard.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 165 of such title is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2784 the following new item:

"2784a. Management of travel cards.".

SEC. 1009. CLEARANCE OF CERTAIN TRANSACTIONS RECORDED IN TREASURY SUSPENSE ACCOUNTS AND RESOLUTION OF CERTAIN CHECK ISSUANCE DISCREPANCIES.

(a) Clearance of Certain Suspense Accounts.—(1) In the case of any transaction that was entered into by or on behalf of the Department of Defense before March 1, 2001, that is recorded in the Department of Treasury Budget Clearing Account (Suspense) designated as account F3875, the Unavailable Check Cancellations and Overpayments Account (Suspense) designated as account F3880, or an Undistributed Intergovernmental Payments account designated as account F3885, and for which no appropriation for the Department of Defense has been identified—

(A) any undistributed collection credited to such account in such case shall be deposited to the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury; and

(B) subject to paragraph (2), any undistributed disbursement recorded in such account in such case shall be canceled.

(2) An undistributed disbursement may not be canceled under paragraph (1)(B) until the Secretary of Defense has made a written determination that the appropriate official or officials of the Department of Defense have attempted without success to locate the documentation necessary to identify which appropriation should be charged with such disbursement and that further efforts to do so are not in the best interests of the United States.

(b) Resolution of Check Issuance Discrepancies.—(1) In the case of any check drawn on the Treasury that was issued by or on behalf of the Department of Defense before October 31, 1998, for which the Secretary of the Treasury has reported to the Department of Defense a discrepancy between the amount paid and the amount of the check as transmitted to the Department of Treasury, and for which no specific appropriation for the Department of Defense can be identified as being associated with the check, the discrepancy shall be canceled, subject to paragraph (2).

(2) A discrepancy may not be canceled under paragraph (1) until the Secretary of Defense has made a written determination that the appropriate official or officials of the Department of Defense have attempted without success to locate the documentation necessary to identify which appropriation should be charged with the amount of the check and that further efforts to do so are not in the best interests of the United States.

(c) Consultation.—The Secretary of Defense shall consult the Secretary of the Treasury in the exercise of the authority granted by subsections (a) and (b).

(d) Duration of Cancellation Authority Following Determination.—(1) A particular undistributed disbursement may not be canceled under paragraph (1)(B) of subsection (a) more than 30 days after the date of the written determination made by the Secretary of Defense under paragraph (2) of such subsection regarding that undistributed disbursement.

(2) A particular discrepancy may not be canceled under paragraph (1) of subsection (b) more than 30 days after the date of the written determination made by the Secretary of Defense under paragraph (2) of such subsection regarding that discrepancy.

(e) Program Termination.—No authority may be exercised under this section after the date that is two years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1010. AUTHORIZATION OF FUNDS FOR BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE PROGRAMS OR COMBATING TERRORISM PROGRAMS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) Authorization.—There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for the military functions of the Department of Defense, in addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated in titles I, II, and III, the amount of $814,300,000, to be available, in accordance with subsection (b), for the following purposes:

(1) Research, development, test, and evaluation for ballistic missile defense programs of the Missile Defense Agency of the Department of Defense.

(2) Activities of the Department of Defense for combating terrorism at home and abroad.

(b) Allocation by President.—(1) The amount authorized to be appropriated by subsection (a) shall be allocated between the purposes stated in paragraphs (1) and (2) of that subsection in such manner as may be determined by the President based upon the national security interests of the United States. The amount authorized in subsection (a) shall not be available for any other purpose.

(2) Upon an allocation of such amount by the President, the amount so allocated shall be transferred to the appropriate regular authorization account under this division in the same manner as provided in section 1001. Transfers under this paragraph shall not be counted for the purposes of section 1001(a)(2).

(3) Not later than 15 days after an allocation is made under this subsection, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report describing the President's allocation, the basis for the President's determination in making such allocation, and the Secretary's plan for the use by the Department of Defense of the funds made available pursuant to such allocation.

SEC. 1011. REDUCTION IN OVERALL AUTHORIZATION DUE TO INFLATION SAVINGS.

(a) Reduction.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated by titles I, II, and III is the amount equal to the sum of the individual authorizations in those titles reduced by $1,000,000,000.

(b) Source of Savings.—Reductions required in order to comply with subsection (a) shall be derived from savings resulting from lower-than-expected inflation as a result of the midsession review of the budget conducted by the Office of Management and Budget.

(c) Allocation of Reduction.—The Secretary of Defense shall allocate the reduction required by subsection (a) among the accounts in titles I, II, and III to reflect the extent to which net inflation savings are available in those accounts.

Subtitle B—Naval Vessels and Shipyards

SEC. 1021. NUMBER OF NAVY COMBATANT SURFACE VESSELS IN ACTIVE AND RESERVE SERVICE.

(a) Contingent Requirement for Report.—(1) If, on the date of the enactment of this Act, the number of combatant surface vessels of the Navy is less than 116, the Secretary of the Navy shall, not later than 90 days after such date, submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the size of the force of combatant surface vessels of the Navy. The report shall include a risk assessment for a force of combatant surface vessels in the number as of the date of the enactment of this Act that is based on the same assumptions as were applied in the QDR 2001 combatant surface force risk assessment.

(2) The definitions in subsection (c) of section 7296 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (b), apply to this subsection.

(b) Number of Combatant Surface Vessels.—(1) Chapter 633 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 7295 the following new section:

"§7296. Combatant surface vessels: notice before reduction in number; preservation of surge capability

"(a) Notice-and-Wait Before Reductions.—(1) A reduction described in paragraph (2) in the number of combatant surface vessels may only be carried out after—

"(A) the Secretary of the Navy submits to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a written notification of the proposed reduction; and

"(B) a period of 90 days has expired after the date on which such notification is received.

"(2) A reduction described in this paragraph in the number of combatant surface vessels is a reduction—

"(A) from 116, or a number greater than 116, to a number less than 116; or

"(B) from a number less than 116 to a lesser number.

"(3) Any notification under paragraph (1)(A) shall include the following:

"(A) The schedule for the proposed reduction.

"(B) The number of vessels that are to comprise the force of combatant surface vessels after the reduction.

"(C) A risk assessment for a force of combatant surface vessels of the number specified under subparagraph (B) that is based on the same assumptions as were applied in the QDR 2001 combatant surface force risk assessment.

"(b) PRESERVATION OF SURGE CAPABILITY.—Whenever the number of combatant surface vessels is less than 116, the Secretary of the Navy shall maintain on the Naval Vessel Register a sufficient number of combatant surface vessels to enable the Navy to regain a force of combatant surface vessels numbering not less than 116 within 120 days after the date of any decision by the President to increase the number of combatant surface vessels.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'combatant surface vessels' means cruisers, destroyers, and frigates that are in active service in the Navy or in active reserve service in the Navy.

"(2) The term 'QDR 2001 combatant surface force risk assessment' means the risk assessment associated with a force of combatant surface vessels numbering 116 that is set forth in the report on the quadrennial defense review submitted to Congress on September 30, 2001, under section 118 of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 7295 the following new item:

"7296. Combatant surface vessels: notice before reduction in number; preservation of surge capability.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE FOR 90-DAY WAITING PERIOD.—The provisions of subparagraph (B) of subsection (a)(1) of section 7296 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (b)(1) of this section, shall apply only with respect to notifications submitted under subparagraph (A) of that subsection on or after January 15, 2003.

SEC. 1022. ANNUAL LONG-RANGE PLAN FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF NAVAL VESSELS.

(a) ANNUAL NAVAL VESSEL CONSTRUCTION PLAN.—(1) Chapter 9 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§231. Budgeting for construction of naval vessels: annual plan and certification

"(a) ANNUAL NAVAL VESSEL CONSTRUCTION PLAN AND CERTIFICATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall include with the defense budget materials for a fiscal year—

"(1) a plan for the construction of combatant and support vessels for the Navy developed in accordance with this section; and

"(2) a certification by the Secretary that both the budget for that fiscal year and the future-years defense program submitted to Congress in relation to such budget under section 221 of this title provide for funding of the construction of naval vessels at a level that is sufficient for the procurement of the vessels provided for in the plan under paragraph (1) on the schedule provided in that plan.

"(b) ANNUAL NAVAL VESSEL CONSTRUCTION PLAN.—(1) The annual naval vessel construction plan developed for a fiscal year for purposes of subsection (a)(1) should be designed so that the naval vessel force provided for under that plan is capable of supporting the national security strategy of the United States as set forth in the most recent national security strategy report of the President under section 108 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a), except that, if at the time such plan is submitted with the defense budget materials for that fiscal year, a national security strategy report required under such section 108 has not been submitted to Congress as required by paragraph (2) or paragraph (3), if applicable, of subsection (a) of such section, then such annual plan should be designed so that the naval vessel force provided for under that plan is capable of supporting the ship force structure recommended in the report of the most recent Quadrennial Defense Review.

"(2) Each such naval vessel construction plan shall include the following:

"(A) A detailed program for the construction of combatant and support vessels for the Navy over the next 30 fiscal years.

"(B) A description of the necessary naval vessel force structure to meet the requirements of the national security strategy of the United States or the most recent Quadrennial Defense Review, whichever is applicable under paragraph (1).

"(C) The estimated levels of annual funding necessary to carry out the program, together with a discussion of the procurement strategies on which such estimated levels of annual funding are based.

"(c) ASSESSMENT WHEN VESSEL CONSTRUCTION BUDGET IS INSUFFICIENT TO MEET APPLICABLE REQUIREMENTS.—If the budget for a fiscal year provides for funding of the construction of naval vessels at a level that is not sufficient to sustain the naval vessel force structure specified in the naval vessel construction plan for that fiscal year under subsection (a), the Secretary shall include with the defense budget materials for that fiscal year an assessment that describes and discusses the risks associated with the reduced force structure of naval vessels that will result from funding naval vessel construction at such level. Such assessment shall be coordinated in advance with the commanders of the combatant commands.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'budget', with respect to a fiscal year, means the budget for that fiscal year that is submitted to Congress by the President under section 1105(a) of title 31.

"(2) The term 'defense budget materials', with respect to a fiscal year, means the materials submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Defense in support of the budget for that fiscal year.

"(3) The term 'Quadrennial Defense Review' means the review of the defense programs and policies of the United States that is carried out every four years under section 118 of this title.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"231. Budgeting for construction of naval vessels: annual plan and certification.".

SEC. 1023. ASSESSMENT OF THE FEASIBILITY OF THE EXPEDITED EQUIPPING OF A NAVY SHIP WITH A VERSION OF THE 155-MILLIMETER ADVANCED GUN SYSTEM.

(a) FEASIBILITY ASSESSMENT REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy shall conduct an assessment of the feasibility of the expedited equipping of a Navy ship in active or inactive service with a version of the 155-millimeter Advanced Gun System that is being developed for the DD(X) next generation, multi-mission, land attack surface combatant vessel.

(2) The assessment shall include an analysis of—

(A) the actions required to achieve such equipping and the technical and programmatic risks associated with those actions;

(B) the plan, schedule, and funding required to achieve such equipping; and

(C) the effect (if any) that such equipping might have on the development program and schedule for the DD(X) vessel.

(b) EQUIPPING ON EXPEDITED SCHEDULE.—The schedule to be considered in the assessment under subsection (a) shall provide for equipping of a ship with a version of the 155-millimeter Advanced Gun System on an expedited schedule that is consistent with the achievement of safety of operation, but not later than October 1, 2006.

(c) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the results of the assessment under subsection (a). The report shall be submitted at the same time that the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2004 to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 1024. REPORT ON INITIATIVES TO INCREASE OPERATIONAL DAYS OF NAVY SHIPS.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT ON INITIATIVES.—(1) The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on Department of Defense initiatives to increase the number of operational days of Navy ships as described in subsection (b).

(2) The report shall cover the ongoing Department of Defense initiatives as well as any potential initiatives that are under consideration within the Department of Defense.

(b) INITIATIVES WITHIN LIMITS OF EXISTING FLEET AND DEPLOYMENT POLICY.—In the report, the Under Secretary shall assess the feasibility and identify the projected effects of conducting initiatives that have the potential to increase the number of operational days of Navy ships available to the commanders-in-chief of the regional unified combatant commands without increasing the number of Navy ships and without increasing the routine lengths of deployments of Navy ships above six months.

(c) REQUIRED FOCUS AREAS.—The report shall address, at a minimum, the following focus areas:

(1) Assignment of additional ships, including submarines, to home ports closer to the areas of operation for the ships (known as "forward homeporting").

(2) Assignment of ships to remain in a forward area of operations, together with rotation of crews for each ship so assigned.

(3) Retention of ships for use until the end of the full service life, together with investment of the funds necessary to support retention to that extent.

(4) Prepositioning of additional ships with, under normal circumstances, small crews in a forward area of operations.

(d) SHIP MAINTENANCE.—The report shall include an assessment of how routine programmed ship maintenance would be accomplished for Navy ships that would remain in a forward area of operations.

(e) TIME FOR SUBMITTAL.—The report shall be submitted at the same time that the President submits the budget for fiscal year 2004 to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 1025. SHIP COMBAT SYSTEM INDUSTRIAL BASE.

(a) REVIEW.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a review of the effect of the contract award announced on April 29, 2002, for the lead design agent for the DD(X) ship program on the industrial base for ship combat system development, including the industrial base for each of the following: ship systems integration, radar, electronic warfare, and launch systems.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than March 31, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report based on the review under subsection (a). The report shall include the following:

(1) The Secretary's assessment of the effect of the contract award referred to in that subsection on ship combat system development and on the associated industrial base.

(2) A description of any actions that the Secretary proposes to ensure future competition in the ship combat system development and industrial base.

SEC. 1026. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING AIRCRAFT CARRIER FORCE STRUCTURE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The aircraft carrier has been an integral component in Operation Enduring Freedom and in the homeland defense mission of Operation Noble Eagle beginning on September 11, 2001. The aircraft carriers that have participated in Operation Enduring Freedom, as of May 1, 2002, are the USS Enterprise (CVN–65), the USS Carl Vinson (CVN–70), the USS Kitty Hawk (CV–63), the USS Theodore Roosevelt (CVN–71), the USS John C. Stennis (CVN–74), and the USS John F. Kennedy (CV–67). The aircraft carriers that have participated in Operation Noble Eagle, as of May 1, 2002, are the USS George Washington (CVN–73), the USS John F. Kennedy (CV–67), and the USS John C. Stennis (CVN–74).

(2) Since 1945, the United States has built 172 bases overseas, of which only 24 are currently in use.

(3) The aircraft carrier provides an independent base of operations should no land base be available for aircraft, with carrier air wings providing the United States sea-based forward-deployed offensive strike capability.

(4) The aircraft carrier is an essential component of the Navy.

(5) The naval tactical aircraft modernization programs are proceeding on schedule.

(6) As established by the Navy, the United States requires the service of 15 aircraft carriers to completely fulfill all the naval commitments assigned to the Navy without gapping carrier presence.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the number of aircraft carriers of the Navy in active service should not be less than 12.

(c) OPERATION ENDURING FREEDOM AND OPERATION NOBLE EAGLE COMMENDATION.—Congress hereby commends the military and civilian personnel who have participated in Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Noble Eagle.

SEC. 1027. CONVEYANCE, NAVY DRYDOCK, PORTLAND, OREGON.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may sell Navy Drydock No. YFD–69, located in Portland, Oregon, to Portland Shipyard, LLC, which is the current user of the drydock.

(b) CONDITION OF CONVEYANCE.—The conveyance under subsection (a) shall be subject to the condition that the purchaser agree to retain the drydock on Swan Island in Portland, Oregon, until at least September 30, 2007.

(c) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the conveyance of the drydock under subsection (a), the purchaser shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the fair market value of the drydock at the time of the conveyance, as determined by the Secretary.

(d) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

Subtitle C—Strategic Matters

SEC. 1031. STRATEGIC FORCE STRUCTURE PLAN FOR NUCLEAR WEAPONS AND DELIVERY SYSTEMS.

(a) PLAN REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Energy shall jointly prepare a plan for the United States strategic force structure for nuclear weapons and nuclear weapons delivery systems for the period of fiscal years from 2003 through 2012. The plan shall—

(1) define the range of missions assigned to strategic nuclear forces in the national defense strategy consistent with—

(A) the Quadrennial Defense Review dated September 30, 2001, under section 118 of title 10, United States Code;

(B) the Nuclear Posture Review dated December 2001 under section 1041 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–262); and

(C) other relevant planning documents;

(2) delineate a baseline strategic force structure for such weapons and systems over such period consistent with such Nuclear Posture Review;

(3) define sufficient force structure, force modernization and life extension plans, infrastructure, and other elements of the defense program of the United States associated with such weapons and systems that would be required to execute successfully the full range of missions defined under paragraph (1);

(4) identify the budget plan that would be required to provide sufficient resources to execute successfully the full range of missions using such force structure called for in that national defense strategy; and

(5)(A) evaluate options for achieving, prior to fiscal year 2012, a posture under which the United States maintains a number of operationally deployed nuclear warheads at a level of from 1,700 to 2,200 such warheads, as outlined in the Nuclear Posture Review referred to in paragraph (1)(B); and

(B) contain an assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of options for achieving such posture as early as 2007, including effects on cost, the dismantlement workforce, and any other affected matter.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than March 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Energy shall submit a report on the plan to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 1032. ANNUAL REPORT ON WEAPONS TO DEFEAT HARDENED AND DEEPLY BURIED TARGETS.

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than April 1 of each year, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Energy, and the Director of Central Intelligence shall jointly submit to the congressional defense committees, the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives a report on the research and development, procurement, and other activities undertaken during the preceding fiscal year by the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, and the intelligence community to develop weapons to defeat hardened and deeply buried targets.

(b) REPORT ELEMENTS.—The report for a fiscal year under subsection (a) shall—

(1) include a discussion of the integration and interoperability of the activities referred to in that subsection that were undertaken during that fiscal year, including a discussion of the relevance of such activities to applicable recommendations by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, assisted under section 181(b) of title 10, United States Code, by the Joint Requirements Oversight Council; and

(2) set forth separately a description of the activities referred to in that subsection, if any, that were undertaken during such fiscal year by each element of—

(A) the Department of Defense;

(B) the Department of Energy; and

(C) the intelligence community.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "intelligence community" has the meaning given such term in section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a(4)).

(d) TERMINATION.—No report is required under this section after the submission of the report that is due on April 1, 2007.

SEC. 1033. REPORT ON EFFECTS OF NUCLEAR EARTH-PENETRATOR WEAPON AND OTHER WEAPONS.

(a) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES STUDY.—The Secretary of Defense shall request the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study and prepare a report on the following:

(1) The anticipated short-term effects and long-term effects of the use by the United States of a nuclear earth-penetrator weapon on the target area, including the effects on civilian populations in proximity to the target area at the time of or after such use and the effects on United States military personnel who after such use carry out operations or battle damage assessments in the target area.

(2) The anticipated short-term and long-term effects on civilian population in proximity to a target area—

(A) if a non-penetrating nuclear weapon is used to attack a hard or deeply-buried target; and

(B) if a conventional high-explosive weapon is used to attack an adversary's facilities for storage or production of weapons of mass destruction and, as a result of such attack, radioactive, nuclear, biological, or chemical weapons materials, agents, or other contaminants are released or spread into populated areas.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress the report under subsection (a), together with any comments the Secretary may consider appropriate on the report. The report shall be submitted in unclassified form to the maximum extent possible, with a classified annex if needed.

Subtitle D—Reports

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 131 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§2228. Military equipment and infrastructure: prevention and mitigation of corrosion

"(a) DESIGNATION OF RESPONSIBLE OFFICIAL OR ORGANIZATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall designate an officer or employee of the Department of Defense, or a standing board or committee of the Department of Defense, as the senior official or organization responsible in the Department to the Secretary of Defense (after the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics) for the prevention and mitigation of corrosion of the military equipment and infrastructure of the Department.

"(b) DUTIES.—(1) The official or organization designated under subsection (a) shall oversee and coordinate efforts throughout the Department of Defense to prevent and mitigate corrosion of the military equipment and infrastructure of the Department. The duties under this paragraph shall include the duties specified in paragraphs (2) through (5).

"(2) The designated official or organization shall develop and recommend any policy guidance on the prevention and mitigation of corrosion to be issued by the Secretary of Defense.

"(3) The designated official or organization shall review the programs and funding levels proposed by the Secretary of each military department during the annual internal Department of Defense budget review process as those programs and funding proposals relate to programs and funding for the prevention and mitigation of corrosion and shall submit to the Secretary of Defense recommendations regarding those programs and proposed funding levels.

"(4) The designated official or organization shall provide oversight and coordination of the efforts within the Department of Defense to prevent or mitigate corrosion during—

"(A) the design, acquisition, and maintenance of military equipment; and

"(B) the design, construction, and maintenance of infrastructure.

"(5) The designated official or organization shall monitor acquisition practices within the Department of Defense—

"(A) to ensure that the use of corrosion prevention technologies and the application of corrosion prevention treatments are fully considered during research and development in the acquisition process; and

"(B) to ensure that, to the extent determined appropriate for each acquisition program, such technologies and treatments are incorporated into that program, particularly during the engineering and design phases of the acquisition process.

"(c) LONG-TERM STRATEGY.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall develop and implement a long-term strategy to reduce corrosion and the effects of corrosion on the military equipment and infrastructure of the Department of Defense.

"(2) The strategy under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

"(A) Expansion of the emphasis on corrosion prevention and mitigation within the Department of Defense to include coverage of infrastructure.

"(B) Application uniformly throughout the Department of Defense of requirements and criteria for the testing and certification of new corrosion-prevention technologies for equipment and infrastructure with similar characteristics, similar missions, or similar operating environments.

"(C) Implementation of programs, including supporting databases, to ensure that a focused and coordinated approach is taken throughout the Department of Defense to collect, review, validate, and distribute information on proven methods and products that are relevant to the prevention of corrosion of military equipment and infrastructure.

"(D) Establishment of a coordinated research and development program for the prevention and mitigation of corrosion for new and existing military equipment and infrastructure that includes a plan to transition new corrosion prevention technologies into operational systems.

"(3) The strategy shall include, for the matters specified in paragraph (2), the following:

"(A) Policy guidance.

"(B) Performance measures and milestones.

"(C) An assessment of the necessary personnel and funding necessary to accomplish the long-term strategy.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'corrosion' means the deterioration of a material or its properties due to a reaction of that material with its chemical environment.

"(2) The term 'military equipment' includes all weapon systems, weapon platforms, vehicles, and munitions of the Department of Defense, and the components of such items.

"(3) The term 'infrastructure' includes all buildings, structures, airfields, port facilities, surface and subterranean utility systems, heating and cooling systems, fuel tanks, pavements, and bridges.".

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraphs (2) and (3)";

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph (3):

"(3) In the case of defense personnel of a developing country that is not a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and that is participating in the Partnership for Peace program of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), expenses authorized to be paid under subsection (a) may be paid in connection with travel of personnel to the territory of any of the countries participating in the Partnership for Peace program or the territory of any NATO member country.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to travel performed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1203. LIMITATION ON FUNDING FOR JOINT DATA EXCHANGE CENTER IN MOSCOW.

(a) Limitation.—Not more than 50 percent of the funds made available to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003 for activities associated with the Joint Data Exchange Center in Moscow, Russia, may be obligated or expended for any such activity until—

(1) the United States and the Russian Federation enter into a cost-sharing agreement as described in subsection (d) of section 1231 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106-398; 114 Stat. 1654A-329);

(2) the United States and the Russian Federation enter into an agreement or agreements exempting the United States and any United States person from Russian taxes, and from liability under Russian laws, with respect to activities associated with the Joint Data Exchange Center;

(3) the Secretary of Defense submits to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a copy of each agreement referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2); and

(4) a period of 30 days has expired after the date of the final submission under paragraph (3).

(b) Joint Data Exchange Center.—For purposes of this section, the term "Joint Data Exchange Center" means the United States-Russian Federation joint center for the exchange of data to provide early warning of launches of ballistic missiles and for notification of such launches that is provided for in a joint United States-Russian Federation memorandum of agreement signed in Moscow in June 2000.

SEC. 1204. SUPPORT OF UNITED NATIONS-SPONSORED EFFORTS TO INSPECT AND MONITOR IRAQI WEAPONS ACTIVITIES.

(a) Limitation on Amount of Assistance in Fiscal Year 2003.—The total amount of the assistance for fiscal year 2003 that is provided by the Secretary of Defense under section 1505 of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Control Act of 1992 (22 U.S.C. 5859a) as activities of the Department of Defense in support of activities under that Act may not exceed $15,000,000.

(b) Extension of Authority To Provide Assistance.—Subsection (f) of section 1505 of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Control Act of 1992 (22 U.S.C. 5859a) is amended by striking "2002" and inserting "2003".

SEC. 1205. COMPREHENSIVE ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS ON COORDINATION AND INTEGRATION OF ALL UNITED STATES NONPROLIFERATION ACTIVITIES.

Section 1205 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107-107; 115 Stat. 1247) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) Annual Report on Implementation of Plan.—(1) Not later than January 31, 2003, and each year thereafter, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the plan required by subsection (a) during the preceding year.

"(2) Each report under paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) a discussion of progress made during the year covered by such report in the matters of the plan required by subsection (a);

"(B) a discussion of consultations with foreign nations, and in particular the Russian Federation, during such year on joint programs to implement the plan;

"(C) a discussion of cooperation, coordination, and integration during such year in the implementation of the plan among the various departments and agencies of the United States Government, as well as private entities that share objectives similar to the objectives of the plan; and

"(D) any recommendations that the President considers appropriate regarding modifications to law or regulations, or to the administration or organization of any Federal department or agency, in order to improve the effectiveness of any programs carried out during such year in the implementation of the plan.".

SEC. 1206. REPORT REQUIREMENT REGARDING RUSSIAN PROLIFERATION TO IRAN AND OTHER COUNTRIES OF PROLIFERATION CONCERN.

(a) Report Requirement.—Not later than March 15 of 2003 through 2009, the President shall submit to Congress a report (in unclassified and classified form as necessary) describing in detail Russian proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missile goods, technology, expertise, and information, and of dual-use items that may contribute to the development of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, to Iran and to other countries of proliferation concern during the year preceding the year in which the report is submitted. The report shall include a detailed description of the following, for the year covered by the report:

(1) The number, type, and quality of direct and dual-use weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missile goods, technology, expertise, and information transferred.

(2) The form, location, and manner in which such transfers took place.

(3) The contribution that such transfers could make to the recipient countries' weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missile programs, and an estimate of how soon such countries will test, possess, and deploy weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles.

(4) The impact and consequences that such transfers have, and could have over the next 10 years—

(A) on United States national security;

(B) on United States military forces deployed in the region to which such transfers are being made;

(C) on United States allies, friends, and interests in that region; and

(D) on the military capabilities of the country receiving such transfers from Russia.

(5) The policy and strategy that the President intends to employ to halt Russian proliferation, the policy tools that the President intends to use to carry out that policy and strategy, the rationale for employing such tools, and the timeline by which the President expects to see material progress in ending Russian proliferation of direct and dual-use weapons of mass destruction and missile goods, technology, expertise, and information.

(b) Definition.—In this section, the term "country of proliferation concern" means any country identified by the Director of Central Intelligence as having engaged in the acquisition of dual-use and other technology useful for the development or production of weapons of mass destruction (including nuclear weapons, chemical weapons, and biological weapons) or advanced conventional munitions—

(1) in the most recent report under section 721 of the Combatting Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996 (title VII of Public Law 104-293; 50 U.S.C. 2366); or

(2) in any successor report on the acquisition by foreign countries of dual-use and other technology useful for the development or production of weapons of mass destruction.

SEC. 1207. MONITORING OF IMPLEMENTATION OF 1979 AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA ON COOPERATION IN SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of State shall—

(1) monitor the implementation of the Agreement specified in subsection (c);

(2) keep a systematic account of the protocols to the Agreement;

(3) coordinate the activities of all agencies of the United States Government that carry out cooperative activities under the Agreement; and

(4) ensure that all activities conducted under the Agreement comply with applicable laws and regulations concerning the transfer of militarily sensitive technologies and dual-use technologies.

(b) Responsibilities of the Office of Science and Technology Cooperation.—Except as otherwise provided by the Secretary of State, the functions of the Secretary under this section shall be carried out through the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Cooperation of the Department of State.

(c) Agreement Defined.—For purposes of this section, the term "Agreement" means the agreement between the United States and the People's Republic of China known as the "Agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China on Cooperation in Science and Technology", signed in Washington on January 31, 1979, and its protocols.

(d) Biennial Report to Congress.—(1) Not later than April 1 of each even-numbered year, the Secretary of State shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the Agreement and on activities under the Agreement. Each such report shall be submitted in both classified and unclassified form, as necessary.

(2) Each report under this subsection shall provide an evaluation of the benefits of the Agreement to the economy, to the military, and to the industrial base of the People's Republic of China and shall include the following:

(A) An accounting of all activities conducted under the Agreement since the previous report (or, in the case of the first report, since the Agreement was entered into) and a projection of activities to be undertaken under the Agreement during the next two years.

(B) An estimate of the costs to the United States to administer the Agreement during the period covered by the report.

(C) An assessment of how the Agreement has influenced the foreign and domestic policies of the People's Republic of China and the policy of the People's Republic of China toward scientific and technological cooperation with the United States.

(D) An analysis by the Director of Central Intelligence of the involvement of military specialists, weapons specialists, and intelligence specialists of the People's Republic of China in the activities of the Joint Commission established under the Agreement and in other activities conducted under the Agreement.

(E) A determination by the Secretary of Defense, developed with the assistance of the Director of Central Intelligence, of the extent to which the activities conducted under the Agreement have enhanced the military and defense industrial base of the People's Republic of China, and an assessment of the effect that projected activities under the Agreement for the next two years, including the transfer of technology and know-how, could have on the economic and military capabilities of the People's Republic of China.

(F) An assessment by the Inspector General of the Department of Commerce of—

(i) the extent to which programs or activities carried out under the Agreement provide access to technology, information, or know-how that could enhance military capabilities of the People's Republic of China; and

(ii) the extent to which those programs or activities are carried out in compliance with export control laws and regulations of the United States, especially those laws and regulations governing so-called "deemed exports".

(G) Any recommendations of the Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, or Director of Central Intelligence for improving the monitoring of the activities of the Joint Commission established under the Agreement.

(3) The Secretary of State shall prepare each report under this subsection in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Energy, the Director of Central Intelligence, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the Director of the National Science Foundation.

(e) Interagency Working Group.—The President shall establish an interagency working group to oversee the implementation of the Agreement by departments and agencies of the United States. The working group shall consist of representatives of such departments, agencies, and offices of the executive branch as the President considers appropriate. The working group shall perform the following functions:

(1) Assisting the Secretary of State and other appropriate officials in setting standards under the Agreement for science and technology transfers between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

(2) Monitoring ongoing programs and activities under the Agreement and recommending future programs and activities under the Agreement.

(3) Developing a comprehensive database of all government-to-government programs and United States Government-funded programs under the Agreement.

(4) Coordinating activities under the Agreement between United States Government agencies, including elements of the intelligence community, as appropriate.

SEC. 1208. EXTENSION OF CERTAIN COUNTERPROLIFERATION ACTIVITIES AND PROGRAMS.

(a) Extension of Interagency Counterproliferation Program Review Committee.—Section 1605(f) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (22 U.S.C. 2751 note) is amended by striking "September 30, 2004" and inserting "September 30, 2008".

(b) Later Deadline for Submission of Annual Report.—Subsection (a) of section 1503 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (22 U.S.C. 2751 note) is amended by striking "February 1 of each year" and inserting "May 1 each year".

(c) Additional Matters To Be Included in Annual Report.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) A discussion of the limitations and impediments to the biological weapons counterproliferation efforts of the Department of Defense (including legal, policy, and resource constraints) and recommendations for the removal or mitigation of such impediments and for ways to make such efforts more effective:".

(d) Technical Amendment To Reflect Change in Position Title.—Section 1605(a)(4) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (22 U.S.C. 2751 note) is amended by striking "Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology" in the first sentence and inserting "Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logisitics".

SEC. 1209. SEMIANNUAL REPORT BY DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE ON CONTRIBUTIONS BY FOREIGN PERSONS TO EFFORTS BY COUNTRIES OF PROLIFERATION CONCERN TO OBTAIN WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION AND THEIR DELIVERY SYSTEMS.

(a) Content of Semiannual Report.—The Combatting Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996 (title VII of Public Law 104–293) is amended by inserting after section 721 (50 U.S.C. 2366) the following new section:

"SEC. 722. SEMIANNUAL REPORT ON CONTRIBUTIONS OF FOREIGN PERSONS TO WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION AND DELIVERY SYSTEMS EFFORTS OF COUNTRIES OF PROLIFERATION CONCERN.

"(a) Reports.—The Director of Central Intelligence shall submit to Congress a semiannual report identifying each foreign person that, during the period covered by the report, made a material contribution to the research, development, production, or acquisition by a country of proliferation concern of—

"(1) weapons of mass destruction (including nuclear weapons, chemical weapons, or biological weapons); or

"(2) ballistic or cruise missile systems.

"(b) Period of Semiannual Reports.—Semiannual reports under subsection (a) shall be submitted as follows:

"(1) One semiannual report shall cover the first six months of the calendar year and shall be submitted not later than January 1 of the following year.

"(2) The other semiannual report shall cover the second six months of the calendar year and shall be submitted not later than July 1 of the following year.

"(c) Form of Reports.—(1) A report under subsection (a) may be submitted in classified form, in whole or in part, if the Director of Central Intelligence determines that submittal in that form is advisable.

"(2) Any portion of a report under subsection (a) that is submitted in classified form shall be accompanied by an unclassified summary of such portion.

"(d) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'foreign person' means any of the following:

"(A) A natural person who is not a citizen of the United States.

"(B) A corporation, business association, partnership, society, trust, or other nongovernmental entity, organization, or group that is organized under the laws of a foreign country or has its principal place of business in a foreign country.

"(C) Any foreign government or foreign governmental entity operating as a business enterprise or in any other capacity.

"(D) Any successor, subunit, or subsidiary of any entity described in subparagraph (B) or (C).

"(2) The term 'country of proliferation concern' means any country identified by the Director of Central Intelligence as having engaged in the acquisition of dual-use and other technology useful for the development or production of weapons of mass destruction (including nuclear weapons, chemical weapons, and biological weapons) or advanced conventional munitions—

"(A) in the most recent report under section 721; or

"(B) in any successor report on the acquisition by foreign countries of dual-use and other technology useful for the development or production of weapons of mass destruction.".

(b) Effective Date.—Section 722 of the Combatting Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996, as added by subsection (a), shall take effect with the report with respect to the first six months of 2003 required to be submitted under that section not later than January 1, 2004.

SEC. 1210. REPORT ON FEASIBILITY AND ADVISABILITY OF SENIOR OFFICER EXCHANGES BETWEEN THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE MILITARY FORCES OF TAIWAN.

(a) Presidential Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report on—

(1) the feasibility and advisability of conducting combined operational training with, and exchanges of general and flag officers between, the Armed Forces of the United States and the military forces of Taiwan; and

(2) the progress being made in meeting United States commitments to the security of Taiwan.

(b) Classification of Report.—The report required by this section shall be submitted in unclassified form and, as necessary, in classified form.

SEC. 1211. REPORT ON UNITED STATES FORCE STRUCTURE IN THE PACIFIC.

(a) Secretary of Defense Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the plans of the Department of Defense to maintain adequate United States force structure in the Pacific, including any efforts (1) to augment current basing arrangements, and (2) to implement the recommendations from the most recent Quadrennial Defense Review to improve United States military capabilities in the Pacific.

(b) Classification of Report.—The report required by this section shall be submitted in unclassified form and, as necessary, in classified form.

TITLE XIII—COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION WITH STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION

Sec. 1301. Specification of Cooperative Threat Reduction programs and funds.
Sec. 1302. Funding allocations.
Sec. 1303. Prohibition against use of funds until submission of reports.
Sec. 1304. Report on use of revenue generated by activities carried out under Cooperative Threat Reduction programs.
Sec. 1305. Prohibition against use of funds for second wing of fissile material storage facility.
Sec. 1306. Limited waiver of restrictions on use of funds for threat reduction in states of the former Soviet Union.

SEC. 1301. SPECIFICATION OF COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAMS AND FUNDS.

(a) Specification of CTR Programs.—For purposes of section 301 and other provisions of this Act, Cooperative Threat Reduction programs are the programs specified in section 1501(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104–201; 110 Stat. 2731; 50 U.S.C. 2362 note).

(b) Fiscal Year 2003 Cooperative Threat Reduction Funds Defined.—As used in this title, the term "fiscal year 2003 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds" means the funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 301 for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs.

(c) Availability of Funds.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 301 for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs shall be available for obligation for three fiscal years.

SEC. 1302. FUNDING ALLOCATIONS.

(a) Funding for Specific Purposes.—Of the $416,700,000 authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003 in section 301(23) for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs, the following amounts may be obligated for the purposes specified:

(1) For strategic offensive arms elimination in Russia, $70,500,000.

(2) For strategic nuclear arms elimination in Ukraine, $6,500,000.

(3) For nuclear weapons transportation security in Russia, $19,700,000.

(4) For nuclear weapons storage security in Russia, $40,000,000.

(5) For activities designated as Other Assessments/Administrative Support, $14,700,000.

(6) For defense and military contacts, $18,900,000.

(7) For weapons of mass destruction infrastructure elimination activities in Kazakhstan, $9,000,000.

(8) For weapons of mass destruction infrastructure elimination activities in Ukraine, $8,800,000.

(9) For chemical weapons destruction in Russia, $50,000,000.

(10) For biological weapons proliferation prevention in the former Soviet Union, $55,000,000.

(11) For weapons of mass destruction proliferation prevention in the States of the former Soviet Union, $40,000,000.

(b) Additional Funds Authorized for Certain Purposes.—Of the funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003 in section 301(23) for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs, $83,600,000 may be obligated for any of the purposes specified in paragraphs (1) through (4) and (9) of subsection (a) in addition to the amounts specifically authorized in such paragraphs.

(c) Report on Obligation or Expenditure of Funds for Other Purposes.—No fiscal year 2003 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds may be obligated or expended for a purpose other than a purpose listed in paragraphs (1) through (11) of subsection (a) until 30 days after the date that the Secretary of Defense submits to Congress a report on the purpose for which the funds will be obligated or expended and the amount of funds to be obligated or expended. Nothing in the preceding sentence shall be construed as authorizing the obligation or expenditure of fiscal year 2003 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds for a purpose for which the obligation or expenditure of such funds is specifically prohibited under this title or any other provision of law.

(d) Limited Authority To Vary Individual Amounts.—(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), in any case in which the Secretary of Defense determines that it is necessary to do so in the national interest, the Secretary may obligate amounts appropriated for fiscal year 2003 for a purpose listed in any of the paragraphs in subsection (a) in excess of the specific amount authorized for that purpose.

(2) An obligation of funds for a purpose stated in any of the paragraphs in subsection (a) in excess of the specific amount authorized for such purpose may be made using the authority provided in paragraph (1) only after—

(A) the Secretary submits to Congress notification of the intent to do so together with a complete discussion of the justification for doing so; and

(B) 15 days have elapsed following the date of the notification.

(3) The Secretary may not, under the authority provided in paragraph (1), obligate amounts for a purpose stated in any of paragraphs (5) through (10) of subsection (a) in excess of 125 percent of the specific amount authorized for such purpose.

(4) In this section, the term "specific amount authorized" means, with respect to a purpose listed in any paragraph in subsection (a)—

(A) the amount specifically authorized for that purpose in subsection (a), plus

(B) in the case of a purpose listed in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (9) of subsection (a), any amount obligated under subsection (b) for that purpose.

SEC. 1303. PROHIBITION AGAINST USE OF FUNDS UNTIL SUBMISSION OF REPORTS.

Not more than 50 percent of fiscal year 2003 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds may be obligated or expended until 30 days after the date of the submission of—

(1) the report required to be submitted in fiscal year 2002 under section 1308(a) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–341); and

(2) the update for the multiyear plan required to be submitted for fiscal year 2001 under section 1205 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337; 22 U.S.C. 5952 note).

SEC. 1304. REPORT ON USE OF REVENUE GENERATED BY ACTIVITIES CARRIED OUT UNDER COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAMS.

(a) Additional Report Requirements.—Section 1308(c) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–341) is amended by inserting at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(6) To the maximum extent practicable, a description of how revenue generated by activities carried out under Cooperative Threat Reduction programs in recipient States is being utilized, monitored, and accounted for.

"(7) A description of the defense and military activities carried out under Cooperative Threat Reduction programs during the fiscal year ending in the year preceding the year of the report, including—

"(A) the amounts obligated or expended for such activities;

"(B) the purposes, goals, and objectives for which such amounts were obligated and expended;

"(C) a description of the activities carried out, including the forms of assistance provided, and the justification for each form of assistance provided;

"(D) the success of each activity, including the goals and objectives achieved for each;

"(E) a description of participation by private sector entities in the United States in carrying out such activities, and the participation of any other Federal department or agency in such activities; and

"(F) any other information that the Secretary considers relevant to provide a complete description of the operation and success of activities carried out under Cooperative Threat Reduction programs.".

(b) Effective Date.—Paragraphs (6) and (7) of section 1308(c) of such Act, as added by subsection (a), shall apply beginning with the report submitted under that section in 2004.

SEC. 1305. PROHIBITION AGAINST USE OF FUNDS FOR SECOND WING OF FISSILE MATERIAL STORAGE FACILITY.

No funds authorized to be appropriated for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs for any fiscal year may be used for the design, planning, or construction of a second wing for a storage facility for Russian fissile material.

SEC. 1306. LIMITED WAIVER OF RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF FUNDS FOR THREAT REDUCTION IN STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

(a) Authority To Waive Restrictions and Eligibility Requirements.—If the President submits the certification and report described in subsection (b) with respect to an independent state of the former Soviet Union for a fiscal year—

(1) the restrictions in subsection (d) of section 1203 of the Cooperative Threat Reduction Act of 1993 (22 U.S.C. 5952) shall cease to apply, and funds may be obligated and expended under that section for assistance, to that state during that fiscal year; and

(2) funds may be obligated and expended during that fiscal year under section 502 of the FREEDOM Support Act (22 U.S.C. 5852) for assistance or other programs and activities for that state even if that state has not met one or more of the requirements for eligibility under paragraphs (1) through (4) of that section.

(b) Certification and Report.—(1) The certification and report referred to in subsection (a) are a written certification submitted by the President to Congress that the waiver of the restrictions and requirements described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of that subsection during such fiscal year is important to the national security interests of the United States, together with a report containing the following:

(A) A description of the activity or activities that prevent the President from certifying that the state is committed to the matters set forth in the provisions of law specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) in such fiscal year.

(B) An explanation of why the waiver is important to the national security interests of the United States.

(C) A description of the strategy, plan, or policy of the President for promoting the commitment of the state to, and compliance by the state with, such matters, notwithstanding the waiver.

(2) The matter included in the report under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(c) Fiscal Years Covered.—The authority under subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005.

(d) Expiration of Authority.—The authority under subsection (a) shall expire on September 30, 2005.

(e) Administration of Restrictions on Assistance.—Subsection (d) of section 1203 of the Cooperative Threat Reduction Act of 1993 (title XII of Public Law 103–160; 107 Stat. 1778; 22 U.S.C. 5952) is amended—

(1) by striking "any year" and inserting "any fiscal year"; and

(2) by striking "that year" and inserting "such fiscal year".

TITLE XIV—HOMELAND SECURITY

Sec. 1401. Transfer of technology items and equipment in support of homeland security.
Sec. 1402. Comprehensive plan for improving the preparedness of military installations for terrorist incidents.
Sec. 1403. Additional Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams.
Sec. 1404. Report on the role of the Department of Defense in supporting homeland security.
Sec. 1405. Sense of Congress on Department of Defense assistance to local first responders.

SEC. 1401. TRANSFER OF TECHNOLOGY ITEMS AND EQUIPMENT IN SUPPORT OF HOMELAND SECURITY.

(a) Responsible Senior Official.—The Secretary of Defense shall designate a senior official of the Department of Defense to coordinate all Department of Defense efforts to identify, evaluate, deploy, and transfer to Federal, State, and local first responders technology items and equipment in support of homeland security.

(b) Duties.—The official designated pursuant to subsection (a) shall—

(1) identify technology items and equipment developed or being developed by Department of Defense components that have the potential to enhance public safety and improve homeland security;

(2) cooperate with appropriate Federal Government officials outside the Department of Defense to evaluate whether such technology items and equipment would be useful to first responders;

(3) facilitate the timely transfer, through identification of appropriate private sector manufacturers, of appropriate technology items and equipment to Federal, State, and local first responders, in coordination with appropriate Federal Government officials outside the Department of Defense;

(4) identify and eliminate redundant and unnecessary research efforts within the Department of Defense with respect to technologies to be deployed to first responders;

(5) expedite the advancement of high priority Department of Defense projects from research through implementation of initial manufacturing; and

(6) participate in outreach programs established by appropriate Federal Government officials outside the Department of Defense to communicate with first responders and to facilitate awareness of available technology items and equipment to support responses to crises.

(c) Support Agreement.—The official designated pursuant to subsection (a) shall enter into an appropriate agreement with a nongovernment entity for such entity to assist the official designated under subsection (a) in carrying out that official's duties under this section. Any such agreement shall be entered into using competitive procedures in compliance with applicable requirements of law and regulation.

(d) Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the actions taken to carry out this section. The report shall include the following:

(1) Identification of the senior official designated pursuant to subsection (a).

(2) A summary of the actions taken or planned to be taken to implement subsection (b), including a schedule for planned actions.

(3) An initial list of technology items and equipment identified pursuant to subsection (b)(1), together with a summary of any program schedule for the development, deployment, or transfer of such items and equipment.

(4) A description of any agreement entered into pursuant to subsection (c).

SEC. 1402. COMPREHENSIVE PLAN FOR IMPROVING THE PREPAREDNESS OF MILITARY INSTALLATIONS FOR TERRORIST INCIDENTS.

(a) Comprehensive Plan.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop a comprehensive plan for improving the preparedness of military installations for preventing and responding to terrorist attacks, including attacks involving the use or threat of use of weapons of mass destruction.

(b) Preparedness Strategy.—The plan under subsection (a) shall include a preparedness strategy that includes each of the following:

(1) Identification of long-term goals and objectives for improving the preparedness of military installations for preventing and responding to terrorist attacks.

(2) Identification of budget and other resource requirements necessary to achieve those goals and objectives.

(3) Identification of factors beyond the control of the Secretary that could impede the achievement of those goals and objectives.

(4) A discussion of the extent to which local, regional, or national military response capabilities are to be developed, integrated, and used.

(5) A discussion of how the Secretary will coordinate the capabilities referred to in paragraph (4) with local, regional, or national civilian and other military capabilities.

(c) Performance Plan.—The plan under subsection (a) shall include a performance plan that includes each of the following:

(1) A reasonable schedule, with milestones, for achieving the goals and objectives of the strategy under subsection (b).

(2) Performance criteria for measuring progress in achieving those goals and objectives.

(3) A description of the process, together with a discussion of the resources, necessary to achieve those goals and objectives.

(4) A description of the process for evaluating results in achieving those goals and objectives.

(d) Submittal to Congress.—The Secretary shall submit the comprehensive plan developed under subsection (a) to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Comptroller General Review and Report.—Not later than 60 days after the date on which the Secretary submits the comprehensive plan under subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall review the plan and submit to the committees referred to in subsection (d) the Comptroller General's assessment of the plan.

(f) Annual Report.—(1) In each of 2004, 2005, and 2006, the Secretary of Defense shall include a report on the comprehensive plan developed under subsection (a) with the materials that the Secretary submits to Congress in support of the budget submitted by the President that year pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(2) Each such report shall include—

(A) a discussion of any revision that the Secretary has made in the comprehensive plan developed under subsection (a) since the last report under this subsection or, in the case of the first such report, since the plan was submitted under subsection (d); and

(B) an assessment of the progress made in achieving the goals and objectives of the strategy set forth in the plan.

(3) If the Secretary includes in the report for 2004 or 2005 under this subsection a declaration that the goals and objectives of the preparedness strategy set forth in the comprehensive plan have been achieved, no further report is required under this subsection.

SEC. 1403. ADDITIONAL WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION CIVIL SUPPORT TEAMS.

(a) Establishment of Additional Teams.—The Secretary of Defense shall—

(1) establish 23 additional teams designated as Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams, for a total of 55 such teams; and

(2) ensure that of such 55 teams, there is at least one team established in each State and territory.

(b) Plan.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan, in furtherance of subsection (a), for establishing at least one Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Team in each State and territory that does not have such a team as of the date of the enactment of this Act. The plan shall include the following:

(1) A schedule and budget for manning, training, and equipping the new teams as rapidly as is possible without jeopardizing the attainment of full effectiveness by the new teams.

(2) A discussion of whether the mission of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams should be expanded and, if so, how.

(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Team" means a team of members of the reserve components of the Armed Forces that is established under section 12310(c) of title 10, United States Code, in support of emergency preparedness programs to prepare for or to respond to any emergency involving the use of a weapon of mass destruction.

(2) The term "State and territory" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.

SEC. 1404. REPORT ON THE ROLE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE IN SUPPORTING HOMELAND SECURITY.

(a) Report Required.—Not later than March 1, 2003, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on Department of Defense responsibilities, mission, and plans for military support of homeland security.

(b) Contents of Report.—The report shall include, at a minimum, a discussion of the following:

(1) The Department of Defense definition of its homeland security mission, particularly with respect to how it relates to providing military support to civil authorities, managing the consequences of terrorist attacks, and homeland defense, and the actions the Department is taking to implement the homeland security mission as so defined.

(2) Changes in the roles, missions, responsibilities, organization, and capabilities of the following organizations in order to conduct their homeland security support mission, and the reasons for such changes:

(A) The Office of the Secretary of Defense.

(B) The Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

(C) The Army National Guard and the Air National Guard.

(D) The combatant commands of the Department of Defense.

(3) The relationship between the Department of Defense, including its combatant commands, and the following with regard to homeland security:

(A) Other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

(B) State and local governments.

(C) The National Guard and Reserve components.

(4) The current capability of the Department of Defense to respond to terrorist attacks employing chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, high explosive or cyberterrorism weapons against personnel and critical infrastructure of the Department, including identification of the goals of the Department for being fully capable of responding to such attacks, current deficiencies in that capability, the resources required to achieve that capability, and a long-term plan to reach that capability.

(5) The roles, missions, and responsibilities of the intelligence components of the Department of Defense in support of its homeland security mission, including the policies and plans for—

(A) collecting and analyzing information related to homeland security;

(B) sharing that information with other agencies of the Federal Government; and

(C) preparing threat and risk assessments and issuing warnings.

(6) A discussion of plans of the Department of Defense for training, exercising, and preparing to perform its homeland security mission, including—

(A) individual and collective training for civilian and military personnel of the Department involved in homeland security;

(B) integrated training with other agencies of the Federal Government, and with State and local governments, as appropriate;

(C) interagency exercises and simulations; and

(D) the development of a permanent "terrorist opposing force" capable of challenging the Department's plans, policies, and capabilities during training events and exercises.

(7) A discussion of how the Department of Defense biological defense research program supports its homeland security mission.

(8) A discussion of the efforts by the Department of Defense to develop, either within the Department or through contracts with private entities, anticyberterrorism technology, including an assessment of whether and how such efforts should be increased.

(9) An assessment of the need for and feasibility of developing and fielding Department of Defense regional chemical-biological incident response teams across the United States, including options for providing the resources and personnel necessary for developing and fielding any such teams.

(10) A discussion of the Department of Defense plans and efforts to place new emphasis on the unique operational demands associated with homeland security while ensuring that defense of the United States remains the primary mission of the Department of Defense.

(11) The resource constraints and legal impediments to implementing any of the activities discussed under paragraphs (1) through (10).

SEC. 1405. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ASSISTANCE TO LOCAL FIRST RESPONDERS.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should, to the extent the Secretary considers appropriate and feasible, provide assistance, in accordance with otherwise applicable provisions of law, to entities that are local first responders for domestic terrorist incidents in order to assist those entities in improving their capabilities to respond to such incidents.

TITLE XV—AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE WAR ON TERRORISM

(b) PLANNING AND DESIGN.—Using amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 2304(a)(6)(A), the Secretary of the Air Force may carry out architectural and engineering services and construction design activities with respect to the construction or improvement of military family housing units in an amount not to exceed $34,188,000.

SEC. 2303. IMPROVEMENTS TO MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING UNITS.

Subject to section 2825 of title 10, Unites States Code, and using amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 2304(a)(6)(A), the Secretary of the Air Force may improve existing military family housing units in an amount not to exceed $226,068,000.

SEC. 2304. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS, AIR FORCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 2002, for military construction, land acquisition, and military family housing functions of the Department of the Air Force in the total amount of $2,633,738,000, as follows:

(1) For military construction projects inside the United States authorized by section 2301(a), $717,300,000.

(2) For military construction projects outside the United States authorized by section 2301(b), $238,251,000.

(3) For military construction projects at unspecified worldwide locations authorized by section 2301(c), $24,993,000.

(4) For unspecified minor construction projects authorized by section 2805 of title 10, United States Code, $11,500,000.

(5) For architectural and engineering services and construction design under section 2807 of title 10, United States Code, $82,820,000.

(6) For military housing functions:

(A) For construction and acquisition, planning and design, and improvement of military family housing and facilities, $689,824,000.

(B) For support of military family housing (including functions described in section 2833 of title 10, United States Code), $869,050,000.

(b) LIMITATION ON TOTAL COST OF CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.—Notwithstanding the cost variations authorized by section 2853 of title 10, United States Code, and any other cost variation authorized by law, the total cost of all projects carried out under section 2301 of this Act may not exceed—

(1) the total amount authorized to be appropriated under paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) of subsection (a); and

(2) $7,100,000 (the balance of the amount authorized under section 2301(a) for construction of a consolidated base engineer complex at Altus Air Force Base, Oklahoma).

(c) ADJUSTMENTS.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to paragraphs (1) through (6) of subsection (a) is the sum of the amounts authorized to be appropriated in such paragraphs, reduced by the following:

(1) $19,063,000, which represents savings resulting from adjustments to foreign currency exchange rates for military construction, military family housing construction, and military family housing support outside the United States.

(2) $15,306,000, which represents savings resulting from reductions in supervision, inspection, and overhead costs.

(3) $16,000,000, which represents savings resulting from lower-than-expected inflation.

SEC. 2305. AUTHORITY FOR USE OF MILITARY CONSTRUCTION FUNDS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC ROAD NEAR AVIANO AIR BASE, ITALY, TO REPLACE ROAD CLOSED FOR FORCE PROTECTION PURPOSES.

(a) AUTHORITY TO USE FUNDS.—Using amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 2304(a)(2), the Secretary of the Air Force may carry out a project to provide a public road, and associated improvements, to replace a public road adjacent to Aviano Air Base, Italy, that has been closed for force protection purposes.

(b) SCOPE OF AUTHORITY.—(1) The authority of the Secretary to carry out the project referred to in subsection (a) shall include authority as follows:

(A) To acquire property for the project for transfer to a host nation authority.

(B) To provide funds to a host nation authority to acquire property for the project.

(C) To make a contribution to a host nation authority for purposes of carrying out the project.

(D) To provide vehicle and pedestrian access to landowners affected by the project.

(2) The acquisition of property using the authority in subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) may be made regardless of whether or not ownership of such property will vest in the United States.

(c) INAPPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN REAL PROPERTY MANAGEMENT REQUIREMENT.—Section 2672(a)(1)(B) of title 10, United States Code, shall not apply with respect to any acquisition of interests in land for purposes of the project authorized by subsection (a).

"2874. Leasing of housing.".

(c) REPEAL OF INTERIM LEASE AUTHORITY.—(1) Section 2879 of such title is repealed.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter IV of chapter 169 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2879.

SEC. 2803. PILOT HOUSING PRIVATIZATION AUTHORITY FOR ACQUISITION OR CONSTRUCTION OF MILITARY UNACCOMPANIED HOUSING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Subchapter IV of chapter 169 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2881 the following new section:

"§2881a. Pilot projects for acquisition or construction of military unaccompanied housing

"(a) PILOT PROJECTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may carry out not more than three pilot projects under the authority of this section or another provision of this subchapter to use the private sector for the acquisition or construction of military unaccompanied housing in the United States, including any territory or possession of the United States.

"(b) TREATMENT OF HOUSING; ASSIGNMENT OF MEMBERS.—The Secretary of the Navy may assign members of the armed forces without dependents to housing units acquired or constructed under the pilot projects, and such housing units shall be considered as quarters of the United States or a housing facility under the jurisdiction of the Secretary for purposes of section 403 of title 37.

"(c) BASIC ALLOWANCE FOR HOUSING.—(1) The Secretary of Defense may prescribe and, under section 403(n) of title 37, pay for members of the armed forces without dependents in privatized housing acquired or constructed under the pilot projects higher rates of partial basic allowance for housing than the rates authorized under paragraph (2) of such section.

"(2) The partial basic allowance for housing paid for a member at a higher rate under this subsection may be paid directly to the private sector source of the housing to whom the member is obligated to pay rent or other charge for residing in such housing if the private sector source credits the amount so paid against the amount owed by the member for the rent or other charge.

"(d) FUNDING.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy shall use the Department of Defense Military Unaccompanied Housing Improvement Fund to carry out activities under the pilot projects.

"(2) Subject to 90 days prior notification to the appropriate committees of Congress, such additional amounts as the Secretary of Defense considers necessary may be transferred to the Department of Defense Military Unaccompanied Housing Improvement Fund from amounts appropriated for construction of military unaccompanied housing in military construction accounts. The amounts so transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same period of time as amounts appropriated directly to the Fund.

"(e) REPORTS.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy shall transmit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report describing—

"(A) each contract for the acquisition of military unaccompanied housing that the Secretary proposes to solicit under the pilot projects;

"(B) each conveyance or lease proposed under section 2878 of this title in furtherance of the pilot projects; and

"(C) the proposed partial basic allowance for housing rates for each contract as they vary by grade of the member and how they compare to basic allowance for housing rates for other contracts written under the authority of the pilot programs.

"(2) The report shall describe the proposed contract, conveyance, or lease and the intended method of participation of the United States in the contract, conveyance, or lease and provide a justification of such method of participation. The report shall be submitted not later than 90 days before the date on which the Secretary issues the contract solicitation or offers the conveyance or lease.

"(f) EXPIRATION.—Notwithstanding section 2885 of this title, the authority of the Secretary of the Navy to enter into a contract under the pilot programs shall expire September 30, 2007.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such subchapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2881 the following new item:

"2881a. Pilot projects for acquisition or construction of military unaccompanied housing.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 2871(7) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "and transient housing intended to be occupied by members of the armed forces on temporary duty".

SEC. 2804. REPEAL OF SOURCE REQUIREMENTS FOR FAMILY HOUSING CONSTRUCTION OVERSEAS.

SEC. 2805. AVAILABILITY OF ENERGY COST SAVINGS REALIZED AT MILITARY INSTALLATIONS.

Section 2865(b) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "through the end of the fiscal year following the fiscal year for which the funds were appropriated" and inserting "until expended".

Subtitle B—Real Property and Facilities Administration

SEC. 2811. AGREEMENTS TO LIMIT ENCROACHMENTS AND OTHER CONSTRAINTS ON MILITARY TRAINING, TESTING, AND OPERATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 159 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2684 the following new section:

"§2684a. Agreements to limit encroachments and other constraints on military training, testing, and operations

"(a) AGREEMENTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department may enter into an agreement with an eligible entity described in subsection (b) to address the use or development of real property in the vicinity of a military installation for purposes of—

"(1) limiting any development or use of the property that would be incompatible with the mission of the installation; or

"(2) preserving habitat on the property in a manner that—

"(A) is compatible with environmental requirements; and

"(B) may eliminate or relieve current or anticipated environmental restrictions that would or might otherwise restrict, impede, or otherwise interfere, whether directly or indirectly, with current or anticipated military training, testing, or operations on the installation.

"(b) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—An agreement under this section may be entered into with any of the following:

"(1) A State or political subdivision of a State.

"(2) A private entity that has as its stated principal organizational purpose or goal the conservation, restoration, or preservation of land and natural resources, or a similar purpose or goal, as determined by the Secretary concerned.

"(c) INAPPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS.—Chapter 63 of title 31 shall not apply to any agreement entered into under this section.

"(d) ACQUISITION AND ACCEPTANCE OF PROPERTY AND INTERESTS.—(1) An agreement with an eligible entity under this section may provide for—

"(A) the acquisition by the entity of all right, title, and interest in and to any real property, or any lesser interest in the property, as may be appropriate for purposes of this section; and

"(B) the sharing by the United States and the entity of the acquisition costs.

"(2) Property or interests may not be acquired pursuant to the agreement unless the owner of the property or interests consents to the acquisition.

"(3) The agreement shall require the entity to transfer to the United States, upon the request of the Secretary concerned, all or a portion of the property or interest acquired under the agreement or a lesser interest therein. The Secretary shall limit such transfer request to the minimum property or interests necessary to ensure that the property concerned is developed and used in a manner appropriate for purposes of this section.

"(4) The Secretary concerned may accept on behalf of the United States any property or interest to be transferred to the United States under the agreement.

"(5) For purposes of the acceptance of property or interests under the agreement, the Secretary concerned may accept an appraisal or title documents prepared or adopted by a non-Federal entity as satisfying the applicable requirements of section 301 of the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4651) or section 3111 of title 40, if the Secretary concerned finds that the appraisal or title documents substantially comply with the requirements.

"(e) ACQUISITION OF WATER RIGHTS.—The authority of the Secretary concerned to enter into an agreement under this section for the acquisition of real property (or an interest therein) includes the authority to support the purchase of water rights from any available source when necessary to support or protect the mission of a military installation.

"(f) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary concerned may require such additional terms and conditions in an agreement under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

"(g) Funding.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), funds authorized to be appropriated for operation and maintenance of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, or Defense-wide activities may be used to enter into agreements under this section.

"(2) In the case of a military installation operated primarily with funds authorized to be appropriated for research, development, test, and evaluation, funds authorized to be appropriated for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, or Defense-wide activities for research, development, test, and evaluation may be used to enter into agreements under this section with respect to the installation.

"(h) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'Secretary concerned' means the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department.

"(2) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, and the territories and possessions of the United States.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2684 the following new item:

"2684a. Agreements to limit encroachments and other constraints on military training, testing, and operations.".

SEC. 2812. CONVEYANCE OF SURPLUS REAL PROPERTY FOR NATURAL RESOURCE CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

(a) Conveyance Authority.—(1) Chapter 159 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 2694 the following new section:

"§2694a. Conveyance of surplus real property for natural resource conservation

"(a) Authority to Convey.—The Secretary of a military department may convey to an eligible entity described in subsection (b) any surplus real property that—

"(1) is under the administrative control of the Secretary;

"(2) is suitable and desirable for conservation purposes;

"(3) has been made available for public benefit transfer for a sufficient period of time to potential claimants; and

"(4) is not subject to a pending request for transfer to another Federal agency or for conveyance to any other qualified recipient for public benefit transfer under the real property disposal processes and authorities under subtitle I of title 40.

"(b) Eligible Entities.—The conveyance of surplus real property under this section may be made to any of the following:

"(1) A State or political subdivision of a State.

"(2) A nonprofit organization that exists for the primary purpose of conservation of natural resources on real property.

"(c) Revisionary Interest and Other Deed Requirements.—(1) The deed of conveyance of any surplus real property conveyed under this section shall require the property to be used and maintained for the conservation of natural resources in perpetuity. If the Secretary concerned determines at any time that the property is not being used or maintained for such purpose, then, at the option of the Secretary, all or any portion of the property shall revert to the United States.

"(2) The deed of conveyance may permit the recipient of the property—

"(A) to convey the property to another eligible entity, subject to the approval of the Secretary concerned and subject to the same covenants and terms and conditions as provided in the deed from the United States; and

"(B) to conduct incidental revenue-producing activities on the property that are compatible with the use of the property for conservation purposes.

"(3) The deed of conveyance may contain such additional terms, reservations, restrictions, and conditions as the Secretary concerned considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

"(d) Release of Covenants.—With the concurrence of the Secretary of Interior, the Secretary concerned may grant a release from a covenant included in the deed of conveyance of real property conveyed under this section, subject to the condition that the recipient of the property pay the fair market value, as determined by the Secretary concerned, of the property at the time of the release of the covenant. The Secretary concerned may reduce the amount required to be paid under this subsection to account for the value of the natural resource conservation benefit that has accrued to the United States during the period the covenant was in effect, if the benefit was not taken into account in determining the original consideration for the conveyance.

"(e) Congressional Notification.—The Secretary concerned may not approve of the reconveyance of real property under subsection (c) or grant the release of a covenant under subsection (d) until the Secretary notifies the appropriate committees of Congress of the proposed reconveyance or release and a period of 21 days elapses from the date the notification is received by the committees.

"(f) Limitations.—The conveyance of real property under this section shall not be used as a condition of allowing any defense activity under any Federal, State, or local permitting or review process. The Secretary concerned may make the conveyance, with the restrictions specified in subsection (c), to establish a mitigation bank, but only if the establishment of the mitigation bank does not occur in order to satisfy any condition for permitting military activity under a Federal, State, or local permitting or review process.

"(g) Consideration.—In fixing the consideration for the conveyance of real property under this section, or in determining the amount of any reduction of the amount to be paid for the release of a covenant under subsection (d), the Secretary concerned shall take into consideration any benefit that has accrued or may accrue to the United States from the use of such property for the conservation of natural resources.

"(h) Relation to Other Conveyance Authorities.—(1) The Secretary concerned may not make a conveyance under this section of any real property to be disposed of under a base closure law in a manner that is inconsistent with the requirements and conditions of the base closure law.

"(2) In the case of real property on Guam, the Secretary concerned may not make a conveyance under this section unless the Government of Guam has been first afforded the opportunity to acquire the real property as authorized by section 1 of Public Law 106–504 (114 Stat. 2309).

"(i) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'appropriate committees of Congress' has the meaning given such term in section 2801 of this title.

"(2) The term 'base closure law' means the following:

"(A) Section 2687 of this title.

"(B) Title II of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1988 (10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

"(C) The Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

"(D) Any other similar authority for the closure or realignment of military installations that is enacted after the date of the enactment of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003.

"(3) The term 'Secretary concerned' means the Secretary of a military department.

"(4) The term 'State' includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, and the territories and possessions of the United States.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2694 the following new item:

"2694a. Conveyance of surplus real property for natural resource conservation.".

(b) Acceptance of Funds to Cover Administrative Expenses.—Section 2695(b) of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) The conveyance of real property under section 2694a of this title.".

(c) Agreements With Nonprofit Natural Resource Conservation Organizations.—Section 2701(d) of such title is amended—

(1) in the subsection heading, by striking "Agencies" and inserting "Entities";

(2) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "with any State or local government agency, or with any Indian tribe," and inserting "any State or local government agency, any Indian tribe, or any nonprofit conservation organization"; and

(B) by striking "the agency" and inserting "the agency, Indian tribe, or organization"; and

(3) by striking paragraph (4), as redesignated by section 311(2) of this Act, and inserting the following new paragraph:

"(4) Definitions.—In this subsection:

"(A) The term 'Indian tribe' has the meaning given such term in section 101(36) of CERCLA (42 U.S.C. 9601(36)).

"(B) The term 'nonprofit conservation organization' means any non-governmental nonprofit organization whose primary purpose is conservation of open space or natural resources.".

SEC. 2813. MODIFICATION OF DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM ON REDUCTION IN LONG-TERM FACILITY MAINTENANCE COSTS.

(a) Administrator of Program.—Subsection (a) of section 2814 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (division B of Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1310; 10 U.S.C. 2809 note) is amended by striking "Secretary of the Army" and inserting "Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department".

(b) Contracts.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Contracts.—(1) Not more than 12 contracts per military department may contain requirements referred to in subsection (a) for the purpose of the demonstration program.

"(2) The demonstration program may only cover contracts entered into on or after the date of the enactment of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003, except that the Secretary of the Army shall treat any contract containing requirements referred to in subsection (a) that was entered into under the authority in such subsection between that date and December 28, 2001, as a contract for the purpose of the demonstration program.".

(c) Reporting Requirements.—Subsection (d) of such section is amended by striking "Secretary of the Army" and inserting "Secretary of Defense".

(d) FUNDING.—(1) Subsection (f) of such section is amended by striking "the Army" and inserting "the military departments or defense-wide".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall not affect the availability for the purpose of the demonstration program under section 2814 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, as amended by this section, of any amounts authorized to be appropriated before the date of the enactment of this Act for the Army for military construction that have been obligated for the demonstration program, but not expended, as of that date.

SEC. 2814. EXPANDED AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER PROPERTY AT MILITARY INSTALLATIONS TO BE CLOSED TO PERSONS WHO CONSTRUCT OR PROVIDE MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING.

(a) 1988 LAW.—Section 204(e)(1) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100–526; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(b) 1990 LAW.—Section 2905(f)(1) of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended by striking the last sentence.

Subtitle C—Land Conveyances

PART I—ARMY CONVEYANCES

SEC. 2821. TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION, FORT MCCLELLAN, ALABAMA, TO ESTABLISH MOUNTAIN LONGLEAF NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE.

(a) TRANSFER REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Army shall transfer, without reimbursement, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior a parcel of real property at Fort McClellan, Alabama, consisting of approximately 7,600 acres, which is described as the "acquisition area" in a memorandum of agreement between the Secretaries numbered 1448–40181–00–K–014.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT AND MANAGEMENT OF REFUGE.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior shall establish on the real property transferred under subsection (a) the Mountain Longleaf National Wildlife Refuge to enhance, manage, and protect the unique mountain longleaf pine ecosystem on the property.

(2) The Secretary of Interior shall manage the Mountain Longleaf National Wildlife Refuge in a manner that—

(A) conserves and enhances populations of fish, wildlife, and plants in the Refuge, including migratory birds and species that are threatened or endangered, with particular emphasis on the protection of the mountain longleaf pine plant ecosystem;

(B) protects and enhances the quality of aquatic habitat in the Refuge;

(C) provides, in coordination with the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, the public with recreational opportunities, including hunting, fishing, wildlife observation, and photography;

(D) provides opportunities for scientific research and education on land use and environmental law; and

(E) is consistent with environmental restoration efforts conducted by the Secretary of the Army on the Refuge or on lands adjacent to the Refuge.

(c) ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION.—(1) The Secretary of the Army shall continue to be responsible for unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, and munitions constituents on the real property transferred under subsection (a) and shall continue to follow a remediation process in accordance with the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.).

(2) The Secretary of the Army shall appropriately factor the management directives for the Mountain Longleaf National Wildlife Refuge, as described in subsection (b), into the remedy selection process for the property transferred under subsection (a).

(d) RELATION TO OTHER ENVIRONMENTAL LAWS.—Nothing in this section shall relieve, and no action taken under this section may relieve, the Secretary of the Army or the Secretary of the Interior, or any other person from any liability or other obligation under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980, the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6901 et seq.), or any other Federal or State law.

(e) ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary of the Army may provide up to $500,000 from the funds in the Base Realignment and Closure Account 1990 to the Secretary of Interior to facilitate the establishment of the Mountain Longleaf National Wildlife Refuge and to support environmental research at the Refuge during the first two years of the operation of the Refuge.

SEC. 2822. LAND CONVEYANCES, LANDS IN ALASKA NO LONGER REQUIRED FOR NATIONAL GUARD PURPOSES.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey to an eligible entity described in subsection (b) all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to any parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon, in the State of Alaska described in subsection (c) if the Secretary determines the conveyance would be in the public interest.

(b) ELIGIBLE RECIPIENTS.—The following entities shall be eligible to receive real property under subsection (a):

(1) The State of Alaska.

(2) A governmental entity in the State of Alaska.

(3) A Native Corporation (as defined in section 3 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1602)).

(4) The Metlakatla Indian Community.

(c) COVERED PROPERTY.—Subsection (a) applies to real property located in the State of Alaska that—

(1) is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army and, before December 2, 1980, was under such jurisdiction for the use of the Alaska National Guard;

(2) is located in a unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System designated in the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (Public Law 96–487; 16 U.S.C. 668dd note);

(3) is excess to the needs of the Alaska National Guard and the Department of Defense; and

(4) the Secretary determines that—

(A) the anticipated cost to the United States of retaining the property exceeds the value of such property; or

(B) the condition of the property makes it unsuitable for retention by the United States.

(d) CONSIDERATION.—The conveyance of real property under this section shall, at the election of the Secretary, be for no consideration or for consideration in an amount determined by the Secretary to be appropriate under the circumstances.

(e) USE OF CONSIDERATION.—If consideration is received for the conveyance of real property under subsection (a), the Secretary may use the amounts received, in such amounts as are provided in appropriations Acts, to pay for—

(1) the cost of a survey described in subsection (f) with respect to the property;

(2) the cost of carrying out any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, and any remediation, that may be required under Federal law, or is considered appropriate by the Secretary, in connection with the property or the conveyance of the property; and

(3) any other costs incurred by the Secretary in conveying the property.

(f) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of any real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary.

(g) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with a conveyance of real property under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2823. LAND CONVEYANCE, SUNFLOWER ARMY AMMUNITION PLANT, KANSAS.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Administrator of General Services may convey to the Johnson County Park and Recreation District, Kansas (in this section referred to as the "District"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon, at the Sunflower Army Ammunition Plant in the State of Kansas consisting of approximately 2,000 acres.

(b) BASIS OF CONVEYANCE.—The conveyance under this section shall be made in a manner consistent with section 550(e) of title 40, United States Code, for the purpose of permitting the District to use the conveyed property for public recreational purposes.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage, location, and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Administrator. The cost of such legal description, survey, or both shall be borne by the District.

(d) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Administrator may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Administrator considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(e) APPLICATION OF SECTION.—If the Administrator and the District reach an agreement regarding the conveyance of the property described in subsection (a) before January 31, 2003, the authority provided by this section shall not take effect.

SEC. 2824. LAND CONVEYANCES, BLUEGRASS ARMY DEPOT, RICHMOND, KENTUCKY.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to Madison County, Kentucky (in this section referred to as the "County"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following parcels of real property, including any improvements thereon, at the Bluegrass Army Depot, Richmond, Kentucky:

(1) A parcel consisting of approximately 10 acres.

(2) A parcel consisting of approximately 3 acres, including the building known as Quarters 29.

(b) CONDITIONS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may not convey the parcel of real property referred to in subsection (a)(1) unless the County agrees to use the property to facilitate the construction of a veterans' center on the property by the State of Kentucky and the Secretary determines that the State has appropriated adequate funds for the construction of the veterans' center.

(2) The Secretary may not convey the parcel of real property referred to in subsection (a)(2) unless the County agrees to utilize the property for historical preservation and education purposes.

(c) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—(1) At the end of the seven-year period beginning on the date on which the Secretary makes the conveyance of the parcel of real property referred to in subsection (a)(1), if the Secretary determines that a veterans' center is not in operation on the conveyed real property, then, at the option of the Secretary, all right, title, and interest in and to the property, including any improvements thereon, shall revert to the United States, and the United States shall have the right of immediate entry onto the property.

(2) If the Secretary determines at any time that the parcel of real property referred to in subsection (a)(2) has ceased to be utilized for the purposes specified in subsection (b)(2), then, at the option of the Secretary, all right, title, and interest in and to the property shall revert to the United States, and the United States shall have the right of immediate entry onto the property.

(3) Any determination of the Secretary under this subsection shall be made on the record after an opportunity for a hearing.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the County to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyances under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the County to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyances, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the County. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyances.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyances. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(e) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the County.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2825. LAND CONVEYANCE, FORT CAMPBELL, KENTUCKY.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the City of Hopkinsville, Kentucky (in this section referred to as the "City"), all right; title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, consisting of approximately 50 acres and containing an abandoned railroad spur for the purpose of permitting the City to use the property for storm water management, recreation, transportation, and other public purposes.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the City to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the City to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the City. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(e) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the County.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2825. LAND CONVEYANCE, FORT CAMPBELL, KENTUCKY.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the City of Hopkinsville, Kentucky (in this section referred to as the "City"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, consisting of approximately 50 acres and containing an abandoned railroad spur for the purpose of permitting the City to use the property for storm water management, recreation, transportation, and other public purposes.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the City to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the City to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the City. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The acreage of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) has been determined by the Secretary through a legal description outlining such acreage. No further survey of the property is required before the conveyance is made.

(d) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2826. LAND CONVEYANCE, ARMY RESERVE TRAINING CENTER, BUFFALO, MINNESOTA.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the Buffalo Independent School District 877 of Buffalo, Minnesota (in this section referred to as the "School District"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including improvements thereon, that is located at 800 8th Street, N.E., in Buffalo, Minnesota, and contains a former Army Reserve Training Center, which is being used by the School District as the site of the Phoenix Learning Center.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the School District to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the School District to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the School District. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the School District.

(d) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2827. LAND CONVEYANCE, FORT MONMOUTH, NEW JERSEY.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey by sale all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, consisting of approximately 63.95 acres of military family housing known as Howard Commons, that comprises a portion of Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

(b) COMPETITIVE BID REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall use competitive procedures for the sale authorized by subsection (a).

(c) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance authorized by subsection (a), the recipient shall provide the United States, whether by cash payment, in-kind contribution, or a combination thereof, an amount that is not less than the fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of the property conveyed under such subsection.

(2) In-kind consideration under paragraph (1) may include the construction of replacement military family housing or the rehabilitation of existing military family housing at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, as agreed upon by the Secretary.

(3) If the value of in-kind consideration to be provided under this subsection exceeds $1,500,000, the Secretary may not accept such consideration until after the end of the 21-day period beginning on the date the Secretary notifies the congressional defense committees of the decision of the Secretary to accept in-kind consideration in excess of that amount.

(4) Any proceeds received by the Secretary under this subsection and not used to construct or rehabilitate such military family housing shall be deposited in the special account in the Treasury established pursuant to section 572(b) of title 40, United States Code.

(d) EFFECT OF TRANSFER OF ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION.—If the real property authorized to be conveyed by this section is transferred to the administrative jurisdiction of the Administrator of General Services, the Administrator, rather than the Secretary, shall have the authority to convey such property under this section.

(e) DESCRIPTION OF PARCEL.—The exact acreage and legal description of the parcel to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the recipient of the parcel.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2828. LAND CONVEYANCE, FORT BLISS, TEXAS.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the County of El Paso, Texas (in this section referred to as the "County"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 44 acres at Fort Bliss, Texas, for the purpose of facilitating the construction by the State of Texas of a nursing home for veterans of the Armed Forces.

(b) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—(1) At the end of the seven-year period beginning on the date on which the Secretary makes the conveyance under subsection (a), if the Secretary determines that a nursing home for veterans is not in operation on the conveyed real property, then, at the option of the Secretary—

(A) all right, title, and interest in and to the property, including any improvements thereon, shall revert to the United States; and

(B) the United States shall have the right of immediate entry onto the property.

(2) Any determination of the Secretary under this subsection shall be made on the record after an opportunity for a hearing.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the County to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the County to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the County. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subseotion shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(d) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the County.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2829. LAND CONVEYANCE, FORT HOOD, TEXAS.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the Veterans Land Board of the State of Texas (in this section referred to as the "Board") all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 174 acres at Fort Hood, Texas, for the purpose of permitting the Board to establish a State-run cemetery for veterans of the Armed Forces.

(b) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—(1) At the end of the seven-year period beginning on the date on which the Secretary makes the conveyance under subsection (a), if the Secretary determines that a cemetery for veterans is not in operation on the conveyed real property, then, at the option of the Secretary—

(A) all right, title, and interest in and to the property, including any improvements thereon, shall revert to the United States; and

(B) the United States shall have the right of immediate entry onto the property.

(2) Any determination of the Secretary under this subsection shall be made on the record after an opportunity for a hearing.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the Board to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the Board to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the Board. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(d) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the Board.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2830. LAND CONVEYANCES, ENGINEER PROVING GROUND, FORT BELVOIR, VIRGINIA.

(a) CONVEYANCE TO FAIRFAX COUNTY, VIRGINIA, AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to Fairfax County, Virginia, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 135 acres, located in the northwest portion of the Engineer Proving Ground at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, in order to permit the County to use such property for park and recreational purposes.

(2) The parcel of real property authorized to be conveyed by paragraph (1) is generally described as that portion of the Engineer Proving Ground located west of Accotink Creek, east of the Fairfax County Parkway, and north of Cissna Road to the northern boundary, but excludes a parcel of land consisting of approximately 15 acres located in the southeast corner of such portion of the Engineer Proving Ground.

(3) The land excluded under paragraph (2) from the parcel of real property authorized to be conveyed by paragraph (1) shall be reserved for an access road to be constructed in the future.

(b) CONVEYANCE OF BALANCE OF PROPERTY AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may convey to any competitively selected grantee all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the real property, including any improvements thereon, at the Engineering Proving Ground not conveyed under the authority in subsection (a).

(c) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance authorized by subsection (b), the grantee shall provide the United States, whether by cash payment, in-kind contribution, or a combination thereof, an amount that is not less than the fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of the property conveyed under such subsection.

(2) In-kind consideration under paragraph (1) may include the maintenance, improvement, alteration, repair, remodeling, restoration (including environmental restoration), or construction of facilities for the Department of the Army at Fort Belvoir or at any other site or sites designated by the Secretary.

(3) If in-kind consideration under paragraph (1) includes the construction of facilities, the grantee shall also convey to the United States—

(A) title to such facilities, free of all liens and other encumbrances; and

(B) if the United States does not have fee simple title to the land underlying such facilities, convey to the United States all right, title, and interest in and to such lands not held by the United States.

(4) If the value of in-kind consideration to be provided under paragraph (1) exceeds $1,500,000, the Secretary may not accept such consideration until after the end of the 21-day period beginning on the date the Secretary notifies the congressional defense committees of the decision of the Secretary to accept in-kind consideration in excess of that amount.

(5) The Secretary shall deposit any cash received as consideration under this subsection in the special account established pursuant to section 572(b) of title 40, United States Code.

(d) EFFECT OF TRANSFER OF ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION.—If all or a portion of the real property authorized to be conveyed by this section is transferred to the administrative jurisdiction of the Administrator of General Services, the Administrator, rather than the Secretary of the Army, shall have the authority to convey such property under this section.

(e) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED AUTHORITY.—Section 2821 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (division B of Public Law 101–189; 103 Stat. 1658), as amended by section 2854 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (division B of Public Law 104–106; 110 Stat. 568), is repealed.

(f) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsections (a) and (b) shall be determined by surveys satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of each such survey shall be borne by the grantee.

(g) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under subsections (a) and (b) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

PART II—NAVY CONVEYANCES

SEC. 2831. LAND CONVEYANCE, MARINE CORPS AIR STATION, MIRAMAR, SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey to the ENPEX Corporation, Incorporated (in this section referred to as the "Corporation"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon, at Marine Corps Air Station, Miramar, San Diego, California, consisting of approximately 60 acres and appurtenant easements and any other necessary interests in real property for the purpose of permitting the Corporation to use the property for the production of electric power and related ancillary activities.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the Corporation shall—

(A) convey to the United States all right, title, and interest of the Corporation in and to a parcel of real property in the San Diego area that is suitable for military family housing, as determined by the Secretary; and

(B) if the parcel conveyed under subparagraph (A) does not contain housing units suitable for use as military family housing, design and construct such military family housing units and supporting facilities as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(2) The total combined value of the real property and military family housing conveyed by the Corporation under this subsection shall be at least equal to the fair market value of the real property conveyed to the Secretary under subsection (a), including any severance costs arising from any diminution of the value or utility of other property at Marine Corps Air Station, Miramar, attributable to the prospective future use of the property conveyed under subsection (a).

(3) The Secretary shall determine the fair market value of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) and the fair market value of the consideration to be provided under this subsection. Such determinations shall be final.

(c) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), if the Secretary determines at any time that the property conveyed under subsection (a) is not being used in accordance with the purpose of the conveyance specified in such subsection, all right, title, and interest in and to the property, including any improvements thereon, shall revert, at the option of the Secretary, to the United States, and the United States shall have the right of immediate entry onto the property. Any determination of the Secretary under this subsection shall be made on the record after an opportunity for a hearing.

(2) If Marine Corps Air Station, Miramar, is no longer used as a Federal aviation facility, paragraph (1) shall no longer apply, and the Secretary shall release, without consideration, the reversionary interest retained by the United States under such paragraph.

(d) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—(1) The Corporation shall make funds available to the Secretary to cover costs to be incurred by the Secretary, or reimburse the Secretary for costs incurred, to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation, and other administrative costs related to the conveyance. This paragraph does not apply to costs associated with the removal of explosive ordnance from the parcel and environmental remediation of the parcel.

(2) Section 2695(c) of title 10 United States Code, shall apply to any amount received under paragraph (1). If the amounts received in advance under such paragraph exceed the costs actually incurred by the Secretary, the Secretary shall refund the excess amount to the Corporation.

(e) DESCRIPTIONS OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal descriptions of the real property to be conveyed by the Secretary under subsection (a) and the property to be conveyed by the Corporation under subsection (b) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary.

(f) EXEMPTIONS.—Section 2696 of title 10, United States Code, does not apply to the conveyance authorized by subsection (a), and the authority to make the conveyance shall not be considered to render the property excess or underutilized.

(g) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances authorized by this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2832. MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY FOR LAND TRANSFER AND CONVEYANCE, NAVAL SECURITY GROUP ACTIVITY, WINTER HARBOR, MAINE.

(a) MODIFICATION OF CONVEYANCE AUTHORITY FOR COREA AND WINTER HARBOR PROPERTIES.—Subsection (b) of section 2845 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (division B of Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1319) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) CONVEYANCE AND TRANSFER OF COREA AND WINTER HARBOR PROPERTIES AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy may convey, without consideration, to the State of Maine, any political subdivision of the State of Maine, or any tax-supported agency in the State of Maine, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to parcels of real property, including any improvements thereon and appurtenances thereto, comprising the former facilities of the Naval Security Group Activity, Winter Harbor, Maine, as follows:

"(A) The parcel consisting of approximately 50 acres known as the Corea Operations Site.

"(B) Three parcels consisting of approximately 23 acres and comprising family housing facilities.

"(2) The Secretary of the Navy may transfer to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 404 acres at the former Naval Security Group Activity, which is the balance of the real property comprising the Corea Operations Site. The Secretary of the Interior shall administer the property transferred under this paragraph as part of the National Wildlife Refuge System.".

(b) EXEMPTION OF MODIFIED CONVEYANCES FROM FEDERAL SCREENING REQUIREMENT.—Such section is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (h) and (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection (g):

"(g) EXEMPTION FROM FEDERAL SCREENING.—Any conveyance authorized by subsection (b)(1) is exempt from the requirement to screen the property concerned for further Federal use pursuant to section 2696 of title 10, United States Code.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subsections (c), (d), (e), (f), (h) (as redesignated), and (i) (as redesignated) of such section are amended by striking "subsection (b)" each place it appears and inserting "subsection (b)(1)".

SEC. 2833. LAND CONVEYANCE, WESTOVER AIR RESERVE BASE, MASSACHUSETTS.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey, without consideration, to the City of Chicopee, Massachusetts (in this section referred to as the "City"), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including 133 housing units and other improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 30.38 acres located at Westover Air Reserve Base in Chicopee, Massachusetts, for the purpose of permitting the City to use the property for economic development and other public purposes.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The Secretary may require the City to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out the conveyance under subsection (a), including survey costs, costs related to environmental documentation (other than the environmental baseline survey), and other administrative costs related to the conveyance.

(2) The Secretary shall require the City to reimburse the Secretary for any excess costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis, or for any other excess costs incurred by the Secretary, in connection with the conveyance, if the excess costs were incurred as a result of a request by the City. In this paragraph, the term "excess costs" means costs in excess of those costs considered reasonable and necessary by the Secretary to comply with existing law to make the conveyance.

(3) Any reimbursement received under this subsection shall be credited to the fund or account that was used to cover the costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary.

(d) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2834. LAND CONVEYANCE, NAVAL STATION, NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey to the State of Rhode Island, or any political subdivision thereof, any or all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, together with improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 34 acres located in Melville, Rhode Island, and known as the Melville Marina site.

(b) CONSIDERATION.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance of real property under subsection (a), the conveyee shall pay the United States an amount equal to the fair market value of the real property, as determined by the Secretary based on an appraisal of the real property acceptable to the Secretary.

(2) The consideration received under paragraph (1) shall be deposited in the account established pursuant to section 572(b) of title 40,

United States Code, and shall be available as provided for in that section.

(c) Reimbursement for Costs of Conveyance.—(1) The Secretary may require the conveyee of the real property under subsection (a) to reimburse the Secretary for any costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out the conveyance.

(2) Any reimbursement for costs that is received under paragraph (1) shall be credited to the fund or account providing funds for such costs. Amounts so credited shall be merged with amounts in such fund or account, and shall be available for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations, as amounts in such fund or account.

(d) Description of Property.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary.

(e) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2835. LAND EXCHANGE AND BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENTS, MARINE CORPS BASE, QUANTICO, AND PRINCE WILLIAM FOREST PARK, VIRGINIA.

(a) Land Exchange.—Administrative jurisdiction over certain lands at Prince William Forest Park, Virginia, and at the Marine Corps Base, Quantico, Virginia, shall be adjusted through the following actions:

(1) The Secretary of the Navy shall transfer, without reimbursement, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior approximately 352 acres of land, depicted as "Lands Transferred from Department of the Navy to Department of the Interior" on the map entitled "Boundary Adjustments Between Prince William Forest Park and Marine Corps Base, Quantico", numbered 860/80283, and dated May 1, 2002.

(2) The Secretary of the Interior shall transfer, without reimbursement, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy approximately 3,398 acres of land, depicted as "Lands Transferred from Department of the Interior to Department of the Navy" on the map described in paragraph (1).

(b) Retention of Certain Land.—The Secretary of the Interior shall continue to administer approximately 1,346 acres of land, depicted as "Lands Retained by Department of the Interior" on the map described in subsection (a)(1). Effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, the special use permit dated March 16, 1972, which provides for the use of part of this land by the Marine Corps, shall no longer be in effect.

(c) Subsequent Disposal of Land.—(1) If any of the land described in subsection (a)(1) or (b) is determined to be excess to the needs of the Department of the Interior, the Secretary of the Interior shall offer to transfer, without reimbursement, administrative jurisdiction over the land to the Secretary of the Navy.

(2) If any of the land described in subsection (a)(2) is determined to be excess to the needs of the Department of the Navy, the Secretary of the Navy shall offer to transfer, without reimbursement, administrative jurisdiction over the land to the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) If an offer made under this subsection is not accepted within 90 days, the land covered by the offer may be disposed of in accordance with the laws and regulations governing the disposal of excess property.

(d) Boundary Modification and Administration.—(1) The boundaries of Prince William Forest Park and the Marine Corps Base, Quantico, shall be modified to reflect the land exchanges or disposals made under this section.

(2) Land transferred to the Secretary of the Interior under subsection (a)(1) or retained under subsection (b) shall be administered as part of Prince William Forest Park in accordance with applicable laws and regulations.

(e) Availability of Map.—The map described in subsection (a)(1) shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

(f) Conforming Amendments.—The Act of June 22, 1948 (Chapter 596; 62 Stat. 571), is amended—

(1) by striking the first section and inserting the following new section:

"SECTION 1. PRINCE WILLIAM FOREST PARK, VIRGINIA.

"Chopawamsic Park, which was established in 1933 as Chopawamsic Recreational Demonstration Area, shall be known as 'Prince William Forest Park'.";

(2) in section 2—

(A) by striking "That all" and inserting "All"; and

(B) by striking "the Chopawamsic Park" and inserting "Prince William Forest Park"; and

(3) in section 3—

(A) by striking "That the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby" and inserting "The Secretary of the Interior is"; and

(B) by striking "the Chopawamsic Park" both places it appears and inserting "Prince William Forest Park".

PART III—AIR FORCE CONVEYANCES

SEC. 2841. MODIFICATION OF LAND CONVEYANCE, LOS ANGELES AIR FORCE BASE, CALIFORNIA.

Section 2861(c) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–433) is amended in the first sentence by striking "10 years" and inserting "30 years".

SEC. 2842. LAND EXCHANGE, BUCKLEY AIR FORCE BASE, COLORADO.

(a) Exchange Authorized.—For the purpose of facilitating the acquisition of real property suitable for the construction of military family housing for Buckley Air Force Base, Colorado, the Secretary of the Air Force may convey to the State of Colorado (in this section referred to as the "State") all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property, including improvements thereon, consisting of all or part of the Watkins Communications Site in Arapahoe County, Colorado.

(b) Consideration.—(1) As consideration for the conveyance authorized by subsection (a) the State shall convey to the United States all right, title, and interest of the State in and to a parcel of real property, including improvements thereon, consisting of approximately 41 acres that is owned by the State and is contiguous to Buckley Air Force Base, Colorado.

(2) The Secretary shall have jurisdiction over the real property conveyed under paragraph (1).

(3) Upon conveyance to the United States under paragraph (1), the real property conveyed under that paragraph is withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the general land laws, including the mining laws and mineral and geothermal leasing laws.

(c) Description of Property.—The exact acreage and legal description of the parcels of real property to be conveyed under this section shall be determined by surveys satisfactory to the Secretary.

(d) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2843. LAND CONVEYANCES, WENDOVER AIR FORCE BASE AUXILIARY FIELD, NEVADA.

(a) Conveyances Authorized To West Wendover, Nevada.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior may convey, without consideration, to the City of West Wendover, Nevada, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following:

(A) The lands at Wendover Air Force Base Auxiliary Field, Nevada, identified in Easement No. AFMC–HL–2–00–334 that are determined by the Secretary of the Air Force to be no longer required.

(B) The lands at Wendover Air Force Base Auxiliary Field identified for disposition on the map entitled "West Wendover, Nevada–Excess", dated January 5, 2001, that are determined by the Secretary of the Air Force to be no longer required.

(2) The purposes of the conveyances under this subsection are—

(A) to permit the establishment and maintenance of runway protection zones; and

(B) to provide for the development of an industrial park and related infrastructure.

(3) The map referred to in paragraph (1)(B) shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Director of the Bureau of Land Management and the Elko District Office of the Bureau of Land Management.

(b) Conveyance Authorized to Tooele County, Utah.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior may convey, without consideration, to Tooele County, Utah, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands at Wendover Air Force Base Auxiliary Field identified in Easement No. AFMC–HL–2–00–318 that are determined by the Secretary of the Air Force to be no longer required.

(2) The purpose of the conveyance under this subsection is to permit the establishment and maintenance of runway protection zones and an aircraft accident potential protection zone as necessitated by continued military aircraft operations at the Utah Test and Training Range.

(c) Phased Conveyances.—The land conveyances authorized by subsections (a) and (b) may be conducted in phases. To the extent practicable, the first phase of the conveyances should involve at least 3,000 acres.

(d) Management of Conveyed Lands.—The lands conveyed under subsections (a) and (b) shall be managed by the City of West Wendover, Nevada, City of Wendover, Utah, Tooele County, Utah, and Elko County, Nevada—

(1) in accordance with the provisions of an Interlocal Memorandum of Agreement entered into between the Cities of West Wendover, Nevada, and Wendover, Utah, Tooele County, Utah, and Elko County, Nevada, providing for the coordinated management and development of the lands for the economic benefit of both communities; and

(2) in a manner that is consistent with such provisions of the easements referred to in subsections (a) and (b) that, as jointly determined by the Secretary of the Air Force and Secretary of the Interior, remain applicable and relevant to the operation and management of the lands following conveyance and are consistent with the provisions of this section.

(e) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary of the Air Force and the Secretary of the Interior may jointly require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyances authorized by subsections (a) and (b) as the Secretaries consider appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

SEC. 2851. MASTER PLAN FOR USE OF NAVY ANNEX, ARLINGTON, VIRGINIA.

(a) Modification of Authority for Transfer from Navy Annex.—Section 2881 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (113 Stat. 879) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2), as amended by section 2863(f) of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (division B of Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1332), by striking "as a site for—" and all that follows and inserting "as a site for such other memorials or museums that the Secretary considers compatible with Arlington National Cemetery and the Air Force Memorial."; and

(2) in subsection (d)—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking "the recommendation (if any) of the Commission on the National Military Museum to use a portion of the Navy Annex property as the site for the National Military Museum" and inserting "the use of the acres reserved under subsection (b)(2) for a memorial or museum"; and

(B) in paragraph (4), by striking "the date on which the Commission on the National Military Museum submits to Congress its report under section 2903" and inserting "the date of the enactment of the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003".

(b) CONSTRUCTION OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by subsection (a) may not be construed to delay the establishment of the United States Air Force Memorial authorized by section 2863 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (division B of Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1330).

SEC. 2852. SALE OF EXCESS TREATED WATER AND WASTEWATER TREATMENT CAPACITY, MARINE CORPS BASE, CAMP LEJEUNE, NORTH CAROLINA.

(a) SALE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may provide to Onslow County, North Carolina, or any authority or political subdivision organized under the laws of North Carolina to provide public water or sewage services in Onslow County (in this section referred to as the "County"), treated water and wastewater treatment services from facilities at Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, if the Secretary determines that the provision of these utility services is in the public interest and will not interfere with current or future operations at Camp Lejeune.

(b) INAPPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS.—Section 2686 of title 10, United States Code, shall not apply to the provision of public water or sewage services authorized by subsection (a).

(c) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the receipt of public water or sewage services under subsection (a), the County shall pay to the Secretary an amount (in cash or in kind) equal to the fair market value of the services. Amounts received in cash shall be credited to the base operation and maintenance accounts of Camp Lejeune.

(d) EXPANSION.—The Secretary may make minor expansions and extensions and permit connections to the public water or sewage systems of the County in order to furnish the services authorized under subsection (a). The Secretary shall restrict the provision of services to the County to those areas in the County where residential development would be compatible with current and future operations at Camp Lejeune.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—(1) The Secretary may require the County to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary to provide public water or sewage services to the County under subsection (a).

(2) Section 2695(c) of title 10 United States Code, shall apply to any amount received under this subsection.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the provision of public water or sewage services under this section as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2853. CONVEYANCE OF REAL PROPERTY, ADAK NAVAL COMPLEX, ALASKA, AND RELATED LAND CONVEYANCES.

Section 6 of the Act entitled "An Act to ratify an agreement between The Aleut Corporation and the United States of America to exchange land rights received under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act for certain land interests on Adak Island, and for other purposes.", approved October 11, 2002 (Public Law 107–239), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) For purposes of section 21(c) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1620(c)), all property received by the Aleut Corporation under this Act shall be given a tax basis equal to fair value on the date of the transfer. Fair value shall be determined by replacement cost appraisal.".

SEC. 2854. SPECIAL REQUIREMENT FOR ADDING MILITARY INSTALLATION TO CLOSURE LIST.

Section 2914(d) of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101–510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note), as added by section 3003 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (division B of Public Law 107–107; 155 Stat, 1346), is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (6); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph (5):

"(5) SITE VISIT.—In the report required under section 2903(d)(2)(A) that is to be transmitted under paragraph (1), the Commission may not recommend the closure of a military installation not recommended for closure by the Secretary under subsection (a) unless at least two members of the Commission visit the installation before the date of the transmittal of the report.".

DIVISION C—DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NATIONAL SECURITY AUTHORIZATIONS AND OTHER AUTHORIZATIONS

TITLE XXXI—DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—National Security Programs Authorizations

Sec. 3101. National Nuclear Security Administration.
Sec. 3102. Defense environmental management.
Sec. 3103. Other defense activities.
Sec. 3104. Defense nuclear waste disposal.

Subtitle B—Program Authorizations, Restrictions, and Limitations

Sec. 3141. Annual assessments and reports to the President and Congress regarding the condition of the United States nuclear weapons stockpile.
Sec. 3142. Plans for achieving enhanced readiness posture for resumption by the United States of underground nuclear weapons tests.
Sec. 3143. Requirements for specific request for new or modified nuclear weapons.
Sec. 3144. Database to track notification and resolution phases of Significant Finding Investigations.
Sec. 3145. Defense environmental management cleanup reform program.
Sec. 3146. Limitation on obligation of funds for Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator program pending submission of report.

Subtitle C—Proliferation Matters

Sec. 3151. Transfer to National Nuclear Security Administration of Department of Defense's Cooperative Threat Reduction program relating to elimination of weapons grade plutonium production in Russia.
Sec. 3152. Repeal of requirement for reports on obligation of funds for programs on fissile materials in Russia.
Sec. 3153. Expansion of annual reports on status of nuclear materials protection, control, and accounting programs.
Sec. 3154. Testing of preparedness for emergencies involving nuclear, radiological, chemical, or biological weapons.
Sec. 3155. Cooperative program on research, development, and demonstration of technology regarding nuclear or radiological terrorism.
Sec. 3156. Matters relating to the International Materials Protection, Control, and Accounting program of the Department of Energy.
Sec. 3157. Accelerated disposition of highly enriched uranium.
Sec. 3158. Strengthened international security for nuclear materials and security of nuclear operations.
Sec. 3159. Export control programs.
Sec. 3160. Plan for accelerated return of weapons-usable nuclear materials.
Sec. 3161. Sense of Congress on amendment of Convention on Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials.
Sec. 3162. Sense of Congress on program to secure stockpiles of highly enriched uranium and plutonium.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

Sec. 3171. Indemnification of Department of Energy contractors.
Sec. 3172. Support for public education in the vicinity of Los Alamos National Laboratory, New Mexico.
Sec. 3173. Worker health and safety rules for Department of Energy nuclear facilities.
Sec. 3174. Extension of authority to appoint certain scientific, engineering, and technical personnel.
Sec. 3175. One-year extension of panel to assess the reliability, safety, and security of the United States nuclear stockpile.
Sec. 3176. Report on status of environmental management initiatives to accelerate the reduction of environmental risks and challenges posed by the legacy of the Cold War.

Subtitle E—Disposition of Weapons-Usable Plutonium at Savannah River, South Carolina

Sec. 3181. Findings.
Sec. 3182. Disposition of weapons-usable plutonium at Savannah River Site.
Sec. 3183. Study of facilities for storage of plutonium and plutonium materials at Savannah River Site.

Subtitle A—National Security Programs Authorizations

SEC. 3101. NATIONAL NUCLEAR SECURITY ADMINISTRATION.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2003 for the activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration in carrying out programs necessary for national security in the amount of $8,038,490,000, to be allocated as follows:

(1) For weapons activities, $5,901,641,000.

(2) For defense nuclear nonproliferation activities, $1,104,130,000.

(3) For naval reactors, $706,790,000.

(4) For the Office of the Administrator for Nuclear Security, $325,929,000.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF NEW PLANT PROJECTS.—From funds referred to in subsection (a) that are available for carrying out plant projects, the Secretary of Energy may carry out new plant projects as follows:

(1) For weapons activities, the following new plant projects:

Project 03–D–101, Sandia underground reactor facility (SURF), Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, New Mexico, $2,000,000.

Project 03–D–103, project engineering and design, various locations, $17,039,000.

Project 03–D–121, gas transfer capacity expansion, Kansas City Plant, Kansas City, Missouri, $4,000,000.

Project 03–D–122, prototype purification facility, Y–12 plant, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, $20,800,000.

Project 03–D–123, special nuclear materials requalification, Pantex plant, Amarillo, Texas, $3,000,000.

(2) For naval reactors, the following new plant project:

Project 03–D–201, cleanroom technology facility, Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory, West Mifflin, Pennsylvania, $7,200,000.

SEC. 3102. DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations.—Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2003 for environmental management activities in carrying out programs necessary for national security in the amount of $6,759,846,000, to be allocated as follows:

(1) For defense environmental restoration and waste management, $4,510,133,000.

(2) For defense environmental management cleanup reform in carrying out environmental restoration and waste management activities necessary for national security programs, $982,000,000.

(3) For defense facilities closure projects, $1,109,314,000.

(4) For defense environmental management privatization, $158,399,000.

(b) Authorization of New Plant Projects.—From funds referred to in subsection (a) that are available for carrying out plant projects, the Secretary of Energy may carry out new plant projects as follows:

(1) For environmental restoration and waste management activities, the following new plant project:

Project 03–D–403, immobilized high-level waste interim storage facility, Richland, Washington, $6,363,000.

(2) For defense environmental management cleanup reform, the following new plant project:

Project 03–D–414, project engineering and design, various locations, $8,800,000.

SEC. 3103. OTHER DEFENSE ACTIVITIES.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2003 for other defense activities in carrying out programs necessary for national security in the amount of $462,664,000.

SEC. 3104. DEFENSE NUCLEAR WASTE DISPOSAL.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2003 for defense nuclear waste disposal for payment to the Nuclear Waste Fund established in section 302(c) of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 (42 U.S.C. 10222(c)) in the amount of $315,000,000.

Subtitle B—Program Authorizations, Restrictions, and Limitations

SEC. 3141. ANNUAL ASSESSMENTS AND REPORTS TO THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS REGARDING THE CONDITION OF THE UNITED STATES NUCLEAR WEAPONS STOCKPILE.

(a) Annual Assessments Required.—For each nuclear weapon type in the stockpile of the United States, each official specified in subsection (b) on an annual basis shall, to the extent such official is directly responsible for the safety, reliability, performance, or military effectiveness of that nuclear weapon type, complete an assessment of the safety, reliability, performance, or military effectiveness (as the case may be) of that nuclear weapon type.

(b) Covered Officials.—The officials referred to in subsection (a) are the following:

(1) The head of each national security laboratory.

(2) The commander of the United States Strategic Command.

(c) Use of Teams of Experts for Assessments.—The head of each national security laboratory shall establish and use one or more teams of experts, known as "red teams", to assist in the assessments required by subsection (a). Each such team shall include experts from both of the other national security laboratories. Each such team for a national security laboratory shall—

(1) review the matters covered by the assessments under subsection (a) performed by the head of that laboratory;

(2) subject such matters to challenge; and

(3) submit the results of such review and challenge, together with the findings and recommendations of such team with respect to such review and challenge, to the head of that laboratory.

(d) Report on Assessments.—Not later than December 1 of each year, each official specified in subsection (b) shall submit to the Secretary concerned, and to the Nuclear Weapons Council, a report on the assessments that such official was required by subsection (a) to complete. The report shall include the following:

(1) The results of each such assessment.

(2)(A) Such official's determination as to whether or not one or more underground nuclear tests are necessary to resolve any issues identified in the assessments and, if so—

(i) an identification of the specific underground nuclear tests that are necessary to resolve such issues; and

(ii) a discussion of why options other than an underground nuclear test are not available or would not resolve such issues.

(B) An identification of the specific underground nuclear tests which, while not necessary, might have value in resolving any such issues and a discussion of the anticipated value of conducting such tests.

(C) Such official's determination as to the readiness of the United States to conduct the underground nuclear tests identified under subparagraphs (A)(i) and (B), if directed by the President to do so.

(3) In the case of a report submitted by the head of a national security laboratory—

(A) a concise statement regarding the adequacy of the science-based tools and methods being used to determine the matters covered by the assessments;

(B) a concise statement regarding the adequacy of the tools and methods employed by the manufacturing infrastructure required by section 3137 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (42 U.S.C. 2121 note) to identify and fix any inadequacy with respect to the matters covered by the assessments; and

(C) a concise summary of the findings and recommendations of any teams under subsection (c) that relate to the assessments, together with a discussion of those findings and recommendations.

(4) In the case of a report submitted by the Commander of the United States Strategic Command, a discussion of the relative merits of other nuclear weapon types (if any), or compensatory measures (if any) that could be taken, that could enable accomplishment of the missions of the nuclear weapon types to which the assessments relate, should such assessments identify any deficiency with respect to such nuclear weapon types.

(5) An identification and discussion of any matter having an adverse effect on the capability of the official submitting the report to accurately determine the matters covered by the assessments.

(e) Submittals to the President and Congress.—(1) Not later than March 1 of each year, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Energy shall submit to the President—

(A) each report, without change, submitted to either Secretary under subsection (d) during the preceding year;

(B) any comments that the Secretaries individually or jointly consider appropriate with respect to each such report;

(C) the conclusions that the Secretaries individually or jointly reach as to the safety, reliability, performance, and military effectiveness of the nuclear weapons stockpile of the United States; and

(D) any other information that the Secretaries individually or jointly consider appropriate.

(2) Not later than March 15 of each year, the President shall forward to Congress the matters received by the President under paragraph (1) for that year, together with any comments the President considers appropriate.

(f) Classified Form.—Each submittal under subsection (e) shall be in classified form only, with the classification level required for each portion of such submittal marked appropriately.

(g) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "national security laboratory" has the meaning given such term in section 3281 of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (50 U.S.C. 2471).

(2) The term "Secretary concerned" means—

(A) the Secretary of Energy, with respect to matters concerning the Department of Energy; and

(B) the Secretary of Defense, with respect to matters concerning the Department of Defense.

(h) First Submissions.—(1) The first submissions made under subsection (d) shall be the submissions required to be made in 2003.

(2) The first submissions made under subsection (e) shall be the submissions required to be made in 2004.

SEC. 3142. PLANS FOR ACHIEVING ENHANCED READINESS POSTURE FOR RESUMPTION BY THE UNITED STATES OF UNDERGROUND NUCLEAR WEAPONS TESTS.

(a) Plans Required.—The Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator for Nuclear Security, shall prepare plans for achieving, not later than one year after the date on which the plans are submitted under subsection (c), readiness postures of six months, 12 months, 18 months, and 24 months for resumption by the United States of underground nuclear weapons tests.

(b) Readiness Posture.—For purposes of this section, a readiness posture of a specified number of months for resumption by the United States of underground nuclear weapons tests is achieved when the Department of Energy has the capability to resume such tests, if directed by the President to resume such tests, not later than the specified number of months after the date on which the President so directs.

(c) Report.—The Secretary shall include with the budget justification materials submitted to Congress in support of the Department of Energy budget for fiscal year 2004 (as submitted with the budget of the President under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code) a report on the plans required by subsection (a). The report shall include—

(1) an assessment of the current readiness posture for resumption by the United States of underground nuclear weapons tests;

(2) the plans required by subsection (a) and, for each such plan, the estimated cost for implementing such plan and an estimate of the annual cost of maintaining the readiness posture to which the plan relates; and

(3) the recommendation of the Secretary, developed in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, as to the optimal readiness posture for resumption by the United States of underground nuclear weapons tests, including the basis for that recommendation.

SEC. 3143. REQUIREMENTS FOR SPECIFIC REQUEST FOR NEW OR MODIFIED NUCLEAR WEAPONS.

(a) Requirement for Request for Funds for Development.—(1) In any fiscal year after fiscal year 2002 in which the Secretary of Energy plans to carry out activities described in paragraph (2) relating to the development of a new nuclear weapon or modified nuclear weapon, the Secretary shall specifically request funds for such activities in the budget of the President for that fiscal year under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(2) The activities described in this paragraph are as follows:

(A) The conduct, or provision for conduct, of research and development which could lead to the production of a new nuclear weapon by the United States.

(B) The conduct, or provision for conduct, of engineering or manufacturing to carry out the production of a new nuclear weapon by the United States.

(C) The conduct, or provision for conduct, of research and development which could lead to the production of a modified nuclear weapon by the United States.

(D) The conduct, or provision for conduct, of engineering or manufacturing to carry out the production of a modified nuclear weapon by the United States.

(b) Budget Request Format.—The Secretary shall include in a request for funds under subsection (a) the following:

(1) In the case of funds for activities described in subparagraph (A) or (C) of subsection (a)(2), a single dedicated line item for all such activities for new nuclear weapons or modified nuclear weapons that are in phase 1, 2, or 2A or phase 6.1, 6.2, or 6.2A (as the case may be), or any concept work prior to phase 1 or 6.1 (as the case may be), of the nuclear weapons acquisition process.

(2) In the case of funds for activities described in subparagraph (B) or (D) of subsection (a)(2), a dedicated line item for each such activity for a new nuclear weapon or modified nuclear weapon that is in phase 3 or higher or phase 6.3 or higher (as the case may be) of the nuclear weapons acquisition process.

(c) Exception.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to funds for purposes of conducting, or providing for the conduct of, research and development, or manufacturing and engineering, determined by the Secretary to be necessary—

(1) for the nuclear weapons life extension program;

(2) to modify an existing nuclear weapon solely to address safety or reliability concerns; or

(3) to address proliferation concerns.

(d) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "life extension program" means the program to repair or replace non-nuclear components, or to modify the pit or canned subassembly, of nuclear weapons that are in the nuclear weapons stockpile on the date of the enactment of this Act in order to assure that such nuclear weapons retain the ability to meet the military requirements applicable to such nuclear weapons when first placed in the nuclear weapons stockpile.

(2) The term "modified nuclear weapon" means a nuclear weapon that contains a pit or canned subassembly, either of which—

(A) is in the nuclear weapons stockpile as of the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(B) is being modified in order to meet a military requirement that is other than the military requirements applicable to such nuclear weapon when first placed in the nuclear weapons stockpile.

(3) The term "new nuclear weapon" means a nuclear weapon that contains a pit or canned subassembly, either of which is neither—

(A) in the nuclear weapons stockpile on the date of the enactment of this Act; nor

(B) in production as of that date.

SEC. 3144. DATABASE TO TRACK NOTIFICATION AND RESOLUTION PHASES OF SIGNIFICANT FINDING INVESTIGATIONS.

(a) Availability of Funds for Database.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(1) for the National Nuclear Security Administration for weapons activities shall be available to the Deputy Administrator for Nuclear Security for Defense Programs for the development and implementation of a database for all national security laboratories to track the notification and resolution phases of Significant Finding Investigations (SFIs). The purpose of the database is to facilitate the monitoring of the progress and accountability of the national security laboratories in Significant Finding Investigations.

(b) Implementation Deadline.—The database required by subsection (a) shall be implemented not later than September 30, 2003.

(c) National Security Laboratory Defined.—In this section, the term "national security laboratory" has the meaning given that term in section 3281(1) of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (title XXXII of Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 968; 50 U.S.C. 2471(1)).

SEC. 3145. DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT CLEANUP REFORM PROGRAM.

(a) Program Required.—From funds made available pursuant to section 3102(a)(2) for defense environmental management cleanup reform, the Secretary of Energy shall carry out a program to reform DOE environmental management activities. In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall allocate, to each site for which the Secretary has submitted to the congressional defense committees a site performance management plan, the amount of those funds that such plan requires.

(b) Transfer and Merger of Funds.—(1) Funds so allocated shall, notwithstanding section 3624, be transferred to the account for DOE environmental management activities and, subject to paragraph (2) and subsection (c), shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same period as the funds available in such account. The authority provided by section 3629 shall apply to funds so transferred.

(2) No funds so allocated may be obligated or expended until 30 days after the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a description of the activities to be carried out at each site to which funds are so allocated.

(c) Limitation on Use of All Merged Funds.—Upon a transfer and merger of funds under subsection (b), all funds in the merged account that are available with respect to the site may be used only to carry out the site performance management plan for the site.

(d) Site Performance Management Plan Defined.—For purposes of this section, a site performance management plan for a site is a plan, agreed to by the applicable Federal and State agencies with regulatory jurisdiction with respect to the site, for the performance of activities to accelerate the reduction of environmental risk in connection with, and to accelerate the environmental cleanup of, the site.

(e) DOE Environmental Management Activities Defined.—For purposes of this section, the term "DOE environmental management activities" means environmental restoration and waste management activities of the Department of Energy in carrying out programs necessary for national security.

SEC. 3146. LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR ROBUST NUCLEAR EARTH PENETRATOR PROGRAM PENDING SUBMISSION OF REPORT.

(a) Report-and-Wait Requirement.—None of the funds made available to the Secretary of Energy for fiscal year 2003 for the Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator program may be obligated until—

(1) the Secretary of Defense submits to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report described in subsection (b); and

(2) a period of 30 days has passed after such report is received by those committees.

(b) Report.—A report under subsection (a)(1) is a report on the Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator program, prepared by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, that sets forth the following:

(1) The military requirements for the Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator.

(2) The nuclear weapons employment policy regarding the Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator.

(3) A detailed description of the categories or types of targets that the Robust Nuclear Earth Penetrator is designed to hold at risk.

(4) An assessment of the ability of conventional weapons to defeat the same categories and types of targets as are described pursuant to paragraph (3).

Subtitle C—Proliferation Matters

SEC. 3151. TRANSFER TO NATIONAL NUCLEAR SECURITY ADMINISTRATION OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE'S COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM RELATING TO ELIMINATION OF WEAPONS GRADE PLUTONIUM PRODUCTION IN RUSSIA.

(a) Transfer of Program.—There are hereby transferred to the Administrator for Nuclear Security the following:

(1) The program, within the Cooperative Threat Reduction program of the Department of Defense, relating to the elimination of weapons grade plutonium production in Russia.

(2) All functions, powers, duties, and activities of that program performed before the date of the enactment of this Act by the Department of Defense.

(b) Transfer of Assets.—(1) Notwithstanding any restriction or limitation in law on the availability of Cooperative Threat Reduction funds specified in paragraph (2), so much of the property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, and other funds employed, used, held, available, or to be made available in connection with the program transferred by subsection (a) are transferred to the Administrator for use in connection with the program transferred.

(2) The Cooperative Threat Reduction funds specified in this paragraph are the following:

(A) Fiscal year 2002 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds, as specified in section 1301(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1254; 22 U.S.C. 5952 note).

(B) Fiscal year 2001 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds, as specified in section 1301(b) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–339; 22 U.S.C. 5959 note).

(C) Fiscal year 2000 Cooperative Threat Reduction funds, as specified in section 1301(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 792; 22 U.S.C. 5952 note).

(c) Availability of Transferred Funds.—(1) Notwithstanding any restriction or limitation in law on the availability of Cooperative Threat Reduction funds specified in subsection (b)(2), the Cooperative Threat Reduction funds transferred under subsection (b) for the program referred to in subsection (a) shall be available for activities as follows:

(A) To design and construct, refurbish, or both, fossil fuel energy plants in Russia that provide alternative sources of energy to the energy plants in Russia that produce weapons grade plutonium.

(B) To carry out limited safety upgrades of not more than three energy plants in Russia that produce weapons grade plutonium, provided that such upgrades do not extend the life of those plants.

(2) Amounts available under paragraph (1) for activities referred to in that paragraph shall remain available for obligation for three fiscal years.

(d) LIMITATION.—(1) Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated by this title or any other Act for the program referred to in subsection (a), the Administrator for Nuclear Security may not obligate any funds for construction, or obligate or expend more than $100,000,000 for that program, until 30 days after the later of—

(A) the date on which the Administrator submits to the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, a copy of an agreement or agreements entered into between the United States Government and the Government of the Russian Federation to shut down the three plutonium-producing reactors in Russia as specified under paragraph (2); and

(B) the date on which the Administrator submits to the committees specified in subparagraph (A) a report on a plan to achieve international participation in the program referred to in subsection (a), including cost sharing.

(2) The agreement (or agreements) under paragraph (1)(A) shall contain—

(A) a commitment to shut down the three plutonium-producing reactors;

(B) the date on which each such reactor will be shut down;

(C) a schedule and milestones for each such reactor to complete the shutdown of such reactor by the date specified under subparagraph (B);

(D) a schedule and milestones for refurbishment or construction of fossil fuel energy plants to be undertaken by the Government of the Russian Federation in support of the program;

(E) an arrangement for access to sites and facilities necessary to meet such schedules and milestones;

(F) an arrangement for audit and examination procedures in order to evaluate progress in meeting such schedules and milestones; and

(G) any cost sharing arrangements between the United States Government and the Government of the Russian Federation in undertaking activities under such agreement (or agreements).

SEC. 3152. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR REPORTS ON OBLIGATION OF FUNDS FOR PROGRAMS ON FISSILE MATERIALS IN RUSSIA.

Section 3131 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104–106; 110 Stat. 617; 22 U.S.C. 5952 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "(a) AUTHORITY.—"; and

(2) by striking subsection (b).

SEC. 3153. EXPANSION OF ANNUAL REPORTS ON STATUS OF NUCLEAR MATERIALS PROTECTION, CONTROL, AND ACCOUNTING PROGRAMS.

(a) COVERED PROGRAMS.—Subsection (a) of section 3171 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–475; 22 U.S.C. 5952 note) is amended by striking "Russia that" and inserting "countries where such materials".

(b) REPORT CONTENTS.—Subsection (b) of that section is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by inserting "in each country covered by subsection (a)" after "locations,";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "in Russia" and inserting "in each such country";

(3) in paragraph (3), by inserting "in each such country" after "subsection (a)"; and

(4) in paragraph (5), by striking "by total amount and by amount per fiscal year" and inserting "by total amount per country and by amount per fiscal year per country".

SEC. 3154. TESTING OF PREPAREDNESS FOR EMERGENCIES INVOLVING NUCLEAR, RADIOLOGICAL, CHEMICAL, OR BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS.

(a) EXTENSION OF TESTING.—Section 1415 of the Defense Against Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996 (title XIV of Public Law 104–201; 110 Stat. 2720; 50 U.S.C. 2315) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2), by striking "of five successive fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1997" and inserting "of fiscal years 1997 through 2013"; and

(2) in subsection (b)(2), by striking "of five successive fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1997" and inserting "of fiscal years 1997 through 2013".

(b) CONSTRUCTION OF EXTENSION WITH DESIGNATION OF ATTORNEY GENERAL AS LEAD OFFICIAL.—The amendments made by subsection (a) may not be construed as modifying the designation of the President titled "Designation of the Attorney General as the Lead Official for the Emergency Response Assistance Program Under Sections 1412 and 1415 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997", dated April 6, 2000, designating the Attorney General to assume programmatic and funding responsibilities for the Emergency Response Assistance Program under sections 1412 and 1415 of the Defense Against Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996 (title XIV of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997).

SEC. 3155. COOPERATIVE PROGRAM ON RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, AND DEMONSTRATION OF TECHNOLOGY REGARDING NUCLEAR OR RADIOLOGICAL TERRORISM.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The Administrator for Nuclear Security shall carry out with the Russian Federation a cooperative program on the research, development, and demonstration of technologies for protection from and response to nuclear or radiological terrorism.

(b) PROGRAM ELEMENTS.—In carrying out the program required by subsection (a), the Administrator shall—

(1) conduct research and development of technology for protection from nuclear or radiological terrorism, including technology for the detection, identification, assessment, control, and disposition of radiological materials that could be used for nuclear terrorism; and

(2) provide, where feasible, for the demonstration to other countries of technologies or methodologies on matters relating to nuclear or radiological terrorism, including—

(A) the demonstration of technologies developed under the program to respond to nuclear or radiological terrorism;

(B) the demonstration of technologies developed under the program for the disposal of radioactive materials;

(C) the demonstration of methodologies developed under the program for use in evaluating the radiological threat of radiological sources identified as not under current accounting programs in the audit report of the Inspector General of the Department of Energy titled "Accounting for Sealed Sources of Nuclear Material Provided to Foreign Countries" (DOE/IG–0546);

(D) in coordination with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the demonstration of methodologies developed under the program to facilitate the development of a regulatory framework for licensing and controlling radioactive sources; and

(E) in coordination with the Office of Environment, Safety, and Health of the Department of Energy, the demonstration of methodologies developed under the program to facilitate development of consistent criteria for screening international transfers of radiological materials.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out activities in accordance with subsection (b)(2), the Administrator shall consult with—

(1) the Secretary of Defense, Secretary of State, and Secretary of Commerce; and

(2) the International Atomic Energy Agency.

(d) AMOUNT FOR ACTIVITIES.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(2) for the Department of Energy for the National Nuclear Security Administration for defense nuclear nonproliferation, up to $15,000,000 may be available for carrying out this section.

SEC. 3156. MATTERS RELATING TO THE INTERNATIONAL MATERIALS PROTECTION, CONTROL, AND ACCOUNTING PROGRAM OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

(a) RADIOLOGICAL DISPERSAL DEVICE MATERIALS PROTECTION, CONTROL, AND ACCOUNTING.—The Secretary of Energy may establish within the International Materials Protection, Control, and Accounting program of the Department of Energy a program on the protection, control, and accounting of materials usable in radiological dispersal devices. In establishing such program, the Secretary shall—

(1) identify the sites and radiological materials to be covered by such program;

(2) carry out a risk assessment of such radiological materials; and

(3) identify and establish the costs of and schedules for such program.

(b) REVISED FOCUS FOR MATERIALS PROTECTION, CONTROL, AND ACCOUNTING PROGRAM OF RUSSIAN FEDERATION.—(1) The Secretary of Energy shall work cooperatively with the Russian Federation to develop, as soon as practicable but not later than January 1, 2013, a sustainable nuclear materials protection, control, and accounting system for the nuclear materials of the Russian Federation that is supported solely by the Russian Federation.

(2) The Secretary shall work with the Russian Federation to identify various alternatives to provide the United States adequate transparency in the nuclear materials protection, control, and accounting program of the Russian Federation to assure that such program is meeting applicable goals for nuclear materials protection, control, and accounting.

(c) AMOUNT FOR ACTIVITIES.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(2) for the Department of Energy for the National Nuclear Security Administration for defense nuclear nonproliferation, up to $5,000,000 may be available for carrying out this section.

SEC. 3157. ACCELERATED DISPOSITION OF HIGHLY ENRICHED URANIUM.

(a) PROGRAM ON ACCELERATED DISPOSITION OF HEU AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary of Energy may carry out a program to pursue with the Russian Federation options for blending highly enriched uranium so that the concentration of U–235 in such uranium is below 20 percent.

(2) The options pursued under paragraph (1) shall include expansion of the Material Consolidation and Conversion program of the Department of Energy to include—

(A) additional facilities for the blending of highly enriched uranium; and

(B) additional centralized secure storage facilities for highly enriched uranium designated for blending.

(3) Any site selected for the storage of uranium or blended material under paragraph (2)(B) shall undergo complete materials protection, control, and accounting upgrades before the commencement of the storage of uranium or blended material at such site under the program.

(b) CONSTRUCTION WITH HEU DISPOSITION AGREEMENT.—Nothing in this section may be construed as terminating, modifying, or otherwise affecting requirements for the disposition of highly enriched uranium under the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Russian Federation Concerning the Disposition of Highly Enriched Uranium Extracted from Nuclear Weapons, signed at Washington on February 18, 1993.

(c) LIMITATION ON RELEASE FOR SALE OF BLENDED URANIUM.—Uranium blended under this section may not be released for sale until the earlier of—

(1) January 1, 2014; or

(2) the date on which the Secretary certifies that such uranium can be absorbed into the global market without undue disruption to the uranium mining, conversion, and enrichment industry in the United States.

(d) AMOUNT FOR ACTIVITIES.—Of the amount to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(2) for the Department of Energy for the National Nuclear Security Administration for defense nuclear nonproliferation, up to $10,000,000 may be available for carrying out this section.

SEC. 3158. STRENGTHENED INTERNATIONAL SECURITY FOR NUCLEAR MATERIALS AND SECURITY OF NUCLEAR OPERATIONS.

(a) REPORT ON OPTIONS FOR INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM TO STRENGTHEN SECURITY.—(1) Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to Congress a report on options for an international program to develop strengthened security for nuclear reactors and associated materials outside the United States.

(2) In evaluating options for purposes of the report, the Secretary shall consult with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the International Atomic Energy Agency on the feasibility and advisability of actions to reduce the risks associated with terrorist attacks on nuclear reactors outside the United States.

(b) JOINT PROGRAMS WITH RUSSIA ON PROLIFERATION-RESISTANT NUCLEAR ENERGY TECHNOLOGIES.—(1) The Secretary shall pursue with the Ministry of Atomic Energy of the Russian Federation joint programs between the United States and the Russian Federation on the development of proliferation-resistant nuclear energy technologies, including advanced fuel cycles.

(2) Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(2) for the Department of Energy for the National Nuclear Security Administration for defense nuclear nonproliferation, up to $10,000,000 may be available for carrying out the joint programs referred to in paragraph (1).

(c) ASSISTANCE REGARDING HOSTILE INSIDERS.—The Secretary may, utilizing appropriate expertise of the Department of Energy and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, provide technical assistance to nuclear reactor facilities outside the United States with respect to the interdiction of hostile insiders at such facilities in order to prevent incidents arising from the disablement of the vital systems of such facilities.

SEC. 3159. EXPORT CONTROL PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORITY TO PURSUE OPTIONS FOR STRENGTHENING EXPORT CONTROL PROGRAMS.—The Secretary of Energy, in coordination with the Secretary of State, may pursue in the region of the former Soviet Union and other regions of concern options for accelerating programs that assist the countries in such regions in improving their domestic export control programs for materials, technologies, and expertise relevant to the construction or use of a nuclear or radiological dispersal device.

(b) AMOUNT FOR ACTIVITIES.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 3101(a)(2) for the Department of Energy for the National Nuclear Security Administration for defense nuclear nonproliferation, up to $5,000,000 may be available for carrying out this section.

SEC. 3160. PLAN FOR ACCELERATED RETURN OF WEAPONS-USABLE NUCLEAR MATERIALS.

(a) PLAN FOR ACCELERATED RETURN.—The Secretary of Energy shall work with the Russian Federation to develop a plan to accelerate the return to Russia of all weapons-usable nuclear materials located in research reactors and other facilities outside Russia that were supplied by the former Soviet Union.

(b) FUNDING AND SCHEDULES.—As part of the plan under subsection (a), the Secretary shall identify the funding and schedules required to assist the research reactors and facilities referred to in that subsection in—

(1) transferring highly enriched uranium to Russia; and

(2) upgrading the materials protection, control, and accounting procedures at such research reactors and facilities until the weapons-usable nuclear materials in such reactors and facilities are returned in accordance with that subsection.

(c) COORDINATION.—The provision of assistance under subsection (b) shall be closely coordinated with the International Atomic Energy Agency.

SEC. 3161. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON AMENDMENT OF CONVENTION ON PHYSICAL PROTECTION OF NUCLEAR MATERIALS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should encourage amendment of the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials in order to provide that the Convention shall—

(1) apply to both the domestic and international use and transport of nuclear materials;

(2) incorporate fundamental practices for the physical protection of such materials; and

(3) address protection against sabotage involving nuclear materials.

(b) CONVENTION ON THE PHYSICAL PROTECTION OF NUCLEAR MATERIAL DEFINED.—In this section, the term "Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials" means the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials, With Annex, done at Vienna on October 26, 1979.

SEC. 3162. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON PROGRAM TO SECURE STOCKPILES OF HIGHLY ENRICHED URANIUM AND PLUTONIUM.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Energy should, in consultation with the Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense, develop a comprehensive program of activities to encourage all countries with nuclear materials to adhere to, or to adopt standards equivalent to, the International Atomic Energy Agency standard on The Physical Protection of Nuclear Material and Nuclear Facilities (INFCIRC/225/Rev.4), relating to the security of stockpiles of highly enriched uranium (HEU) and plutonium (Pu).

Subtitle D—Other Matters

SEC. 3171. INDEMNIFICATION OF DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY CONTRACTORS.

Section 170 d.(1)(A) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "until August 1, 2002," and inserting "until December 31, 2004,".

SEC. 3172. SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC EDUCATION IN THE VICINITY OF LOS ALAMOS NATIONAL LABORATORY, NEW MEXICO.

(a) SUPPORT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003.—From amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Energy by this title, $6,900,000 shall be available for payment by the Secretary for fiscal year 2003 to the Los Alamos National Laboratory Foundation, a not-for-profit foundation chartered as described in section 3167(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 111 Stat. 2052).

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—The foundation referred to in subsection (a) shall—

(1) utilize funds provided under this section as a contribution to the endowment fund for the foundation; and

(2) use the income generated from investments in the endowment fund that are attributable to the payment made under this section to fund programs to support the educational needs of children in the public schools in the vicinity of Los Alamos National Laboratory, New Mexico.

(c) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED AUTHORITY AND MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO EXTEND CONTRACT.—(1) Subsection (b) of section 3136 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107; 115 Stat. 1368) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) SUPPORT FOR FISCAL YEARS 2003 THROUGH 2005.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary may provide for a contract extension through fiscal year 2005 similar to the contract extension referred to in subsection (a)(2).".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on October 1, 2002.

(d) REPORT.—(1) The Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator for Nuclear Security, shall conduct a study of options for funding the contract extension authorized by subsection (b) of such section 3136 (as amended by subsection (c)) other than through annual appropriations. The study should also include options for providing cost of living adjustments to teachers in the public schools in the vicinity of Los Alamos National Laboratory, New Mexico, other than through such contract extension.

(2) Not later than December 31, 2003, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the study conducted under paragraph (1). The report shall set forth the findings and conclusions of the study, together with any recommendations as a result of the study.

SEC. 3173. WORKER HEALTH AND SAFETY RULES FOR DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NUCLEAR FACILITIES.

(a) WORKER HEALTH AND SAFETY RULES.—The Atomic Energy Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after section 234B (42 U.S.C. 2282b) the following new section:

"SEC. 234C. WORKER HEALTH AND SAFETY RULES FOR DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NUCLEAR FACILITIES.

"a. REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall promulgate regulations for industrial and construction health and safety at Department of Energy facilities that are operated by contractors covered by agreements of indemnification under section 170 d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, after public notice and opportunity for comment under section 553 of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the 'Administrative Procedure Act'). Such regulations shall, subject to paragraph (3), provide a level of protection for workers at such facilities that is substantially equivalent to the level of protection currently provided to such workers at such facilities.

"(2) APPLICABILITY.—The regulations promulgated under paragraph (1) shall not apply to any facility that is a component of, or any activity conducted under, the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program provided for under Executive Order No. 12344, dated February 1, 1982 (42 U.S.C. 7158 note) (as in force pursuant to section 1634 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1985 (Public Law 98–525; 42 U.S.C. 7158 note)).

"(3) FLEXIBILITY.—In promulgating the regulations under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall include flexibility—

"(A) to tailor implementation of such regulations to reflect activities and hazards associated with a particular work environment;

"(B) to take into account special circumstances at a facility that is, or is expected to be, permanently closed and that is expected to be demolished, or title to which is expected to be transferred to another entity for reuse; and

"(C) to achieve national security missions of the Department of Energy in an efficient and timely manner.

"(4) NO EFFECT ON HEALTH AND SAFETY ENFORCEMENT.—This subsection does not diminish or otherwise affect the enforcement or the application of any other law, regulation, order, or contractual obligation relating to worker health and safety.

"b. CIVIL PENALTIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A person (or any subcontractor or supplier of the person) who has entered into an agreement of indemnification under section 170 d. (or any subcontractor or supplier of the person) that violates (or is the employer of a person that violates) any regulation promulgated under subsection a. shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than $70,000 for each such violation.

"(2) CONTINUING VIOLATIONS.—If any violation under this subsection is a continuing violation, each day of the violation shall constitute a separate violation for the purpose of computing the civil penalty under paragraph (1).

"c. CONTRACT PENALTIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall include in each contract with a contractor of the Department who has entered into an agreement of indemnification under section 170 d. provisions that provide an appropriate reduction in the fees or amounts paid to the contractor under the contract in the event of a violation by the contractor or contractor employee of any regulation promulgated under subsection a.

"(2) CONTENTS.—The provisions shall specify various degrees of violations and the amount of the reduction attributable to each degree of violation.

"d. COORDINATION OF PENALTIES.—

"(1) CHOICE OF PENALTIES.—For any violation by a person of a regulation promulgated under subsection a., the Secretary shall pursue either civil penalties under subsection b. or contract penalties under subsection c., but not both.

"(2) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—In the case of an entity described in subsection d. of section 234A, the total amount of civil penalties under subsection b. and contract penalties under subsection c. in a fiscal year may not exceed the total amount of fees paid by the Department of Energy to that entity in that fiscal year.

"(3) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 234A.—The Secretary shall ensure that a contractor of the Department is not penalized both under this section and under section 234A for the same violation.".

(b) PROMULGATION OF INITIAL REGULATIONS.—

(1) DEADLINE FOR PROMULGATING REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Energy shall promulgate the regulations required by subsection a. of section 234C of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (as added by subsection (a)) not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The regulations promulgated under paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date that is one year after the promulgation date of the regulations.

(c) PROHIBITION.—The Secretary of Energy shall not participate in or otherwise support any study or other project relating to a modification in the scope of the regulations enforceable by civil penalties under section 234A or 234C of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, or the responsibility of the Secretary to implement and enforce such regulations, until after the date on which the regulations for such purposes under such section 234C take effect in accordance with subsection (b).

SEC. 3174. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO APPOINT CERTAIN SCIENTIFIC, ENGINEERING, AND TECHNICAL PERSONNEL.

Section 3161(c)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (42 U.S.C. 7231 note) is amended by striking "September 30, 2002" and inserting "September 30, 2004".

SEC. 3175. ONE-YEAR EXTENSION OF PANEL TO ASSESS THE RELIABILITY, SAFETY, AND SECURITY OF THE UNITED STATES NUCLEAR STOCKPILE.

Section 3159 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (42 U.S.C. 2121 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (f), by striking "atomic energy defense activities" and inserting "the National Nuclear Security Administration";

(2) in subsection (g), by striking "three years" and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting "April 1, 2003."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i) FOLLOW-UP REPORT.—Not later than February 1, 2003, the panel shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a follow-up report assessing progress toward meeting the expectations set forth by the panel for the United States stockpile stewardship program, and making recommendations for corrective legislative action where progress has been unsatisfactory.".

SEC. 3176. REPORT ON STATUS OF ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT INITIATIVES TO ACCELERATE THE REDUCTION OF ENVIRONMENTAL RISKS AND CHALLENGES POSED BY THE LEGACY OF THE COLD WAR.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Energy shall prepare a report on the status of those environmental management initiatives specified in subsection (c) that are being undertaken to accelerate the reduction of the environmental risks and challenges that, as a result of the legacy of the Cold War, are faced by the Department of Energy, contractors of the Department, and applicable Federal and State agencies with regulatory jurisdiction.

(b) CONTENTS.—The report shall include the following matters:

(1) A discussion of the progress made in reducing such risks and challenges in each of the following areas:

(A) Acquisition strategy and contract management.

(B) Regulatory agreements.

(C) Interim storage and final disposal of high-level waste, spent nuclear fuel, transuranic waste, and low-level waste.

(D) Closure and transfer of environmental remediation sites.

(E) Achievements in innovation by contractors of the Department with respect to accelerated risk reduction and cleanup.

(F) Consolidation of special nuclear materials and improvements in safeguards and security.

(2) An assessment of the progress made in streamlining risk reduction processes of the environmental management program of the Department.

(3) An assessment of the progress made in improving the responsiveness and effectiveness of the environmental management program of the Department.

(4) Any proposals for legislation that the Secretary considers necessary to carry out such initiatives, including the justification for each such proposal.

(c) INITIATIVES COVERED.—The environmental management initiatives referred to in subsection (a) are the initiatives arising out of the report titled "Top-to-Bottom Review of the Environmental Management Program" and dated February 4, 2002, with respect to the environmental restoration and waste management activities of the Department of Energy in carrying out programs necessary for national security.

(d) SUBMISSION OF REPORT.—On the date on which the budget justification materials in support of the Department of Energy budget for fiscal year 2004 (as submitted with the budget of the President under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code) are submitted to Congress, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees the report required by subsection (a).

SEC. 3181. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) In September 2000, the United States and the Russian Federation signed a Plutonium Management and Disposition Agreement by which each agreed to dispose of 34 metric tons of weapons-grade plutonium.

(2) The agreement with Russia is a significant step toward safeguarding nuclear materials and preventing their diversion to rogue states and terrorists.

(3) The Department of Energy plans to dispose of 34 metric tons of weapons-grade plutonium in the United States before the end of 2019 by converting the plutonium to a mixed-oxide fuel to be used in commercial nuclear power reactors.

(4) The Department has formulated a plan for implementing the agreement with Russia through construction of a mixed-oxide fuel fabrication facility, the so-called MOX facility, and a pit disassembly and conversion facility at the Savannah River Site, Aiken, South Carolina.

(5) The United States and the State of South Carolina have a compelling interest in the safe, proper, and efficient operation of the plutonium disposition facilities at the Savannah River Site. The MOX facility will also be economically beneficial to the State of South Carolina, and that economic benefit will not be fully realized unless the MOX facility is built.

(6) The State of South Carolina desires to ensure that all plutonium transferred to the State of South Carolina is stored safely; that the full benefits of the MOX facility are realized as soon as possible; and, specifically, that all defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials transferred to the Savannah River Site either be processed or be removed expeditiously.

SEC. 3182. DISPOSITION OF WEAPONS-USABLE PLUTONIUM AT SAVANNAH RIVER SITE.

(a) PLAN FOR CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF MOX FACILITY.—(1) Not later than February 1, 2003, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to Congress a plan for the construction and operation of the MOX facility at the Savannah River Site, Aiken, South Carolina.

(2) The plan under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) a schedule for construction and operations so as to achieve, as of January 1, 2009, and thereafter, the MOX production objective, and to produce 1 metric ton of mixed-oxide fuel by December 31, 2009; and

(B) a schedule of operations of the MOX facility designed so that 34 metric tons of defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials at the Savannah River Site will be processed into mixed-oxide fuel by January 1, 2019.

(3)(A) Not later than February 15 each year, beginning in 2004 and continuing for as long as the MOX facility is in use, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the plan required by paragraph (1).

(B) Each report under subparagraph (A) for years before 2010 shall include—

(i) an assessment of compliance with the schedules included with the plan under paragraph (2); and

(ii) a certification by the Secretary whether or not the MOX production objective can be met by January 2009.

(C) Each report under subparagraph (A) for years after 2009 shall—

(i) address whether the MOX production objective has been met; and

(ii) assess progress toward meeting the obligations of the United States under the Plutonium Management and Disposition Agreement.

(D) Each report under subparagraph (A) for years after 2017 shall also include an assessment of compliance with the MOX production objective and, if not in compliance, the plan of the Secretary for achieving one of the following:

(i) Compliance with such objective.

(ii) Removal of all remaining defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials from the State of South Carolina.

(b) CORRECTIVE ACTIONS.—(1) If a report under subsection (a)(3) indicates that construction or operation of the MOX facility is behind the applicable schedule under subsection (a)(2) by 12 months or more, the Secretary shall submit to Congress, not later than August 15 of the year in which such report is submitted, a plan for corrective actions to be implemented by the Secretary to ensure that the MOX facility project is capable of meeting the MOX production objective by January 1, 2009.

(2) If a plan is submitted under paragraph (1) in any year after 2008, the plan shall include corrective actions to be implemented by the Secretary to ensure that the MOX production objective is met.

(3) Any plan for corrective actions under paragraph (1) or (2) shall include established milestones under such plan for achieving compliance with the MOX production objective.

(4) If, before January 1, 2009, the Secretary determines that there is a substantial and material risk that the MOX production objective will not be achieved by 2009 because of a failure to achieve milestones set forth in the most recent corrective action plan under this subsection, the Secretary shall suspend further transfers of defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials to be processed by the MOX facility until such risk is addressed and the Secretary certifies that the MOX production objective can be met by 2009.

(5) If, after January 1, 2009, the Secretary determines that the MOX production objective has not been achieved because of a failure to achieve milestones set forth in the most recent corrective action plan under this subsection, the Secretary shall suspend further transfers of defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials to be processed by the MOX facility until the Secretary certifies that the MOX production objective can be met.

(6)(A) Upon making a determination under paragraph (4) or (5), the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the options for removing from the State of South Carolina an amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials equal to the amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials transferred to the State of South Carolina after April 15, 2002.

(B) Each report under subparagraph (A) shall include an analysis of each option set forth in the report, including the cost and schedule for implementation of such option, and any requirements under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) relating to consideration or selection of such option.

(C) Upon submittal of a report under paragraph (A), the Secretary shall commence any analysis that may be required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 in order to select among the options set forth in the report.

(c) CONTINGENT REQUIREMENT FOR REMOVAL OF PLUTONIUM AND MATERIALS FROM SAVANNAH RIVER SITE.—If the MOX production objective is not achieved as of January 1, 2009, the Secretary shall, consistent with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and other applicable laws, remove from the State of South Carolina, for storage or disposal elsewhere—

(1) not later than January 1, 2011, not less than 1 metric ton of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials; and

(2) not later than January 1, 2017, an amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials equal to the amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials transferred to the Savannah River Site between April 15, 2002 and January 1, 2017, but not processed by the MOX facility.

(d) ECONOMIC AND IMPACT ASSISTANCE.—(1) If the MOX production objective is not achieved as of January 1, 2011, the Secretary shall, from funds available to the Secretary, pay to the State of South Carolina each year beginning on or after that date through 2016 for economic and impact assistance an amount equal to $1,000,000 per day, not to exceed $100,000,000 per year, until the later of—

(A) the date on which the MOX production objective is achieved in such year; or

(B) the date on which the Secretary has removed from the State of South Carolina in such year at least 1 metric ton of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials.

(2)(A) If, as of January 1, 2017, the MOX facility has not processed mixed-oxide fuel from defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials in the amount of not less than—

(i) one metric ton, in each of any two consecutive calendar years; and

(ii) three metric tons total,

the Secretary shall, from funds available to the Secretary, pay to the State of South Carolina for economic and impact assistance an amount equal to $1,000,000 per day, not to exceed $100,000,000 per year, until the removal by the Secretary from the State of South Carolina of an amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials equal to the amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials transferred to the Savannah River Site between April 15, 2002, and January 1, 2017, but not processed by the MOX facility.

(B) Nothing in this paragraph may be construed to terminate, supersede, or otherwise affect any other requirements of this section.

(3) If the State of South Carolina obtains an injunction that prohibits the Department from taking any action necessary for the Department to meet any deadline specified by this subsection, that deadline shall be extended for a period of time equal to the period of time during which the injunction is in effect.

(e) FAILURE TO COMPLETE PLANNED DISPOSITION PROGRAM.—If on July 1 each year beginning in 2020 and continuing for as long as the MOX facility is in use, less than 34 metric tons of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials have been processed by the MOX facility, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan for—

(1) completing the processing of 34 metric tons of defense plutonium and defense plutonium material by the MOX facility; or

(2) removing from the State of South Carolina an amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials equal to the amount of defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials transferred to the Savannah River Site after April 15, 2002, but not processed by the MOX facility.

(f) REMOVAL OF MIXED-OXIDE FUEL UPON COMPLETION OF OPERATIONS OF MOX FACILITY.—If, one year after the date on which operation of the MOX facility permanently ceases, any mixed-oxide fuel remains at the Savannah River Site, the Secretary shall submit to Congress—

(1) a report on when such fuel will be transferred for use in commercial nuclear reactors; or

(2) a plan for removing such fuel from the State of South Carolina.

(g) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) MOX PRODUCTION OBJECTIVE.—The term "MOX production objective" means production at the MOX facility of mixed-oxide fuel from defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials at an average rate equivalent to not less than one metric ton of mixed-oxide fuel per year. The average rate shall be determined by measuring production at the MOX facility from the date the facility is declared operational to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission through the date of assessment.

(2) MOX FACILITY.—The term "MOX facility" means the mixed-oxide fuel fabrication facility at the Savannah River Site, Aiken, South Carolina.

(3) DEFENSE PLUTONIUM; DEFENSE PLUTONIUM MATERIALS.—The terms "defense plutonium" and "defense plutonium materials" mean weapons-usable plutonium.

SEC. 3183. STUDY OF FACILITIES FOR STORAGE OF PLUTONIUM AND PLUTONIUM MATERIALS AT SAVANNAH RIVER SITE.

(a) STUDY.—The Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board shall conduct a study of the adequacy of the K-Area Materials Storage facility (KAMS), and related support facilities such as Building 235–F, at the Savannah River Site, Aiken, South Carolina, for the storage of defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials in connection with the disposition program provided in section 3182 and in connection with the amended Record of Decision of the Department of Energy for fissile materials disposition.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board shall submit to Congress and the Secretary of Energy a report on the study conducted under subsection (a).

(c) REPORT ELEMENTS.—The report under subsection (b) shall—

(1) address—

(A) the suitability of KAMS and related support facilities for monitoring and observing any defense plutonium or defense plutonium materials stored in KAMS;

(B) the adequacy of the provisions made by the Department for remote monitoring of such defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials by way of sensors and for handling of retrieval of such defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials; and

(C) the adequacy of KAMS should such defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials continue to be stored at KAMS after 2019; and

(2) include such proposals as the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board considers appropriate to enhance the safety, reliability, and functionality of KAMS.

(d) REPORTS ON ACTIONS ON PROPOSALS.—Not later than 6 months after the date on which the report under subsection (b) is submitted to Congress, and every year thereafter, the Secretary and the Board shall each submit to Congress a report on the actions taken by the Secretary in response to the proposals, if any, included in the report.

TITLE XXXII—DEFENSE NUCLEAR FACILITIES SAFETY BOARD

Sec. 3201. Authorization.

SEC. 3201. AUTHORIZATION.

There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003, $19,000,000 for the operation of the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board under chapter 21 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2286 et seq.).

TITLE XXXIII—NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE

Sec. 3301. Authorized uses of National Defense Stockpile funds.

SEC. 3301. AUTHORIZED USES OF NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE FUNDS.

(a) Obligation of Stockpile Funds.—During fiscal year 2003, the National Defense Stockpile Manager may obligate up to $76,400,000 of the funds in the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund established under subsection (a) of section 9 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98h) for the authorized uses of such funds under subsection (b)(2) of such section, including the disposal of hazardous materials that are environmentally sensitive.

(b) Additional Obligations.—The National Defense Stockpile Manager may obligate amounts in excess of the amount specified in subsection (a) if the National Defense Stockpile Manager notifies Congress that extraordinary or emergency conditions necessitate the additional obligations. The National Defense Stockpile Manager may make the additional obligations described in the notification after the end of the 45-day period beginning on the date on which Congress receives the notification.

(c) Limitations.—The authorities provided by this section shall be subject to such limitations as may be provided in appropriations Acts.

TITLE XXXIV—NAVAL PETROLEUM RESERVES

Sec. 3401. Authorization of appropriations.

SEC. 3401. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) Amount.—There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Energy $21,069,000 for fiscal year 2003 for the purpose of carrying out activities under chapter 641 of title 10, United States Code, relating to the naval petroleum reserves.

(b) Period of Availability.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in subsection (a) shall remain available until expended.

TITLE XXXV—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

Sec. 3501. Authorization of appropriations for fiscal year 2003.
Sec. 3502. Authority to convey vessel USS SPHINX (ARL–24).
Sec. 3503. Independent analysis of title XI insurance guarantee applications.
Sec. 3504. Preparation as artificial reefs and scrapping of obsolete vessels.

SEC. 3501. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2003, to be available without fiscal year limitation if so provided in appropriations Acts, for the use of the Department of Transportation for the Maritime Administration as follows:

(1) For expenses necessary for operations and training activities, $93,132,000.

(2) For expenses under the loan guarantee program authorized by title XI of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 (46 App. U.S.C. 1271 et seq.), $54,126,000, of which—

(A) $50,000,000 is for the cost (as defined in section 502(5) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 661a(5))) of loan guarantees under the program; and

(B) $4,126,000 is for administrative expenses related to loan guarantee commitments under the program.

(3) For expenses to dispose of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, including provision of assistance under section 7 of Public Law 92–402 (as amended by this title), $20,000,000.

SEC. 3502. AUTHORITY TO CONVEY VESSEL USS SPHINX (ARL–24).

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other law, the Secretary of Transportation may convey the right, title, and interest of the United States Government in and to the vessel USS SPHINX (ARL–24), to the Dunkirk Historical Lighthouse and Veterans Park Museum (a not-for-profit corporation, in this section referred to as the "recipient") for use as a military museum, if—

(1) the recipient agrees to use the vessel as a nonprofit military museum;

(2) the vessel is not used for commercial transportation purposes;

(3) the recipient agrees to make the vessel available to the Government when the Secretary requires use of the vessel by the Government;

(4) the recipient agrees that when the recipient no longer requires the vessel for use as a military museum—

(A) the recipient will, at the discretion of the Secretary, reconvey the vessel to the Government in good condition except for ordinary wear and tear; or

(B) if the Board of Trustees of the recipient has decided to dissolve the recipient according to the laws of the State of New York, then—

(i) the recipient shall distribute the vessel, as an asset of the recipient, to a person that has been determined exempt from taxation under the provisions of section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or to the Federal Government or a State or local government for a public purpose; and

(ii) the vessel shall be disposed of by a court of competent jurisdiction of the county in which the principal office of the recipient is located, for such purposes as the court shall determine, or to such organizations as the court shall determine are organized exclusively for public purposes;

(5) the recipient agrees to hold the Government harmless for any claims arising from exposure to asbestos, polychlorinated biphenyls, or lead paint after conveyance of the vessel, except for claims arising from use by the Government under paragraph (3) or (4); and

(6) the recipient has available, for use to restore the vessel, in the form of cash, liquid assets, or a written loan commitment, financial resources of at least $100,000.

(b) Delivery of Vessel.—If a conveyance is made under this section, the Secretary shall deliver the vessel at the place where the vessel is located on the date of enactment of this Act, in its present condition, and without cost to the Government.

(c) Other Unneeded Equipment.—The Secretary may also convey any unneeded equipment from other vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet in order to restore the USS SPHINX (ARL–24) to museum quality.

(d) Retention of Vessel in NDRF.—The Secretary shall retain in the National Defense Reserve Fleet the vessel authorized to be conveyed under subsection (a), until the earlier of—

(1) 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(2) the date of conveyance of the vessel under subsection (a).

SEC. 3503. INDEPENDENT ANALYSIS OF TITLE XI INSURANCE GUARANTEE APPLICATIONS.

(1) by adding at the end of subsection (d) the following:

"(4) The Secretary may obtain independent analysis of an application for a guarantee or commitment to guarantee under this title."; and

(2) in subsection (f) by inserting "(including for obtaining independent analysis under subsection (d)(4))" after "applications for a guarantee".

SEC. 3504. PREPARATION AS ARTIFICIAL REEFS AND SCRAPPING OF OBSOLETE VESSELS.

(a) Financial Assistance to States for Preparation of Transferred Obsolete Ships for Use as Artificial Reefs.—(1) Public Law 92–402 (16 U.S.C. 1220 et seq.) is amended—

(A) by redesignating section 7 as section 8; and

(B) by inserting after section 6 the following new section 7:

"SEC. 7. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO STATE TO PREPARE TRANSFERRED SHIP.

"(a) Assistance Authorized.—The Secretary, subject to the availability of appropriations, may provide, to any State to which an obsolete ship is transferred under this Act, financial assistance to prepare the ship for use as an artificial reef, including for—

"(1) environmental remediation;

"(2) towing; and

"(3) sinking.

"(b) Amount of Assistance.—The Secretary shall determine the amount of assistance under this section with respect to an obsolete ship based on—

"(1) the total amount available for providing assistance under this section;

"(2) the benefit achieved by providing assistance for that ship; and

"(3) the cost effectiveness of disposing of the ship by transfer under this Act and provision of assistance under this section, compared to other disposal options for that ship.

"(c) Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary—

"(1) shall require a State seeking assistance under this section to provide cost data and other information determined by the Secretary to be necessary to justify and document the assistance; and

"(2) may require a State receiving such assistance to comply with terms and conditions necessary to protect the environment and the interests of the United States.".

(2) Section 4(4) of such Act (16 U.S.C. 1220a(4)) is amended by inserting "(except for any financial assistance provided under section 7)" after "at no cost to the Government".

(b) Environmental Best Management Practices for Preparing Vessels for Use as Artificial Reefs.—(1) Not later than September 30, 2003, the Secretary of Transportation, acting through the Maritime Administration, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall jointly develop environmental best management practices to be used in the preparation of vessels for use as artificial reefs.

(2) The environmental best management practices under paragraph (1) shall be developed in consultation with the heads of other Federal agencies, and State agencies, having an interest in the use of vessels as artificial reefs.

(3) The environmental best management practices under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) include practices for the preparation of vessels for use as artificial reefs to ensure that vessels so prepared will be environmentally sound in their use as artificial reefs;

(B) ensure that such practices are consistent nationwide;

(C) establish baselines for estimating the costs associated with the preparation of vessels for use as artificial reefs; and

(D) include mechanisms to enhance the utility of the Artificial Reefing Program of the Maritime Administration as an option for the disposal of obsolete vessels.

(4) The environmental best management practices developed under paragraph (1) shall serve as national guidelines to be used by Federal agencies for the preparation of vessels for use as artificial reefs.

(5) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the environmental best management practices developed under paragraph (1) through the existing ship disposal reporting requirements in section 3502 of Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 1654A–492). The report shall describe such practices, and may include such other matters as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(c) PILOT PROGRAM ON EXPORT OF OBSOLETE VESSELS FOR DISMANTLEMENT AND RECYCLING.—(1)(A) The Secretary of Transportation, Secretary of State, and Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall jointly carry out one or more pilot programs through the Maritime Administration to explore the feasibility and advisability of various alternatives for exporting obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet for purposes of the dismantlement and recycling of such vessels.

(B) The pilot programs shall be carried out in accordance with applicable provisions of law and regulations.

(2)(A) The pilot programs under paragraph (1) shall be carried out during fiscal year 2003.

(B) The pilot programs shall include a total of not more than four vessels.

(C) The authority provided by this subsection is in addition to any other authority available to Maritime Administration for exporting obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet.

(3) Activities under the pilot programs under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) Exploration of the feasibility and advisability of a variety of alternatives (developed for purposes of the pilot programs) for exporting obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet for purposes of the dismantlement and recycling of such vessels.

(B) Response by the Maritime Administration to proposals from the international ship recycling industry for innovative and cost-effective disposal solutions for obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, including an evaluation of the feasibility and advisability of such proposals.

(C) Demonstration of the extent to which the cost-effective dismantlement or recycling of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet can be accomplished abroad in manner that appropriately addresses concerns regarding worker health and safety and the environment.

(D) Opportunities to transfer abroad processes, methodologies, and technologies for ship dismantlement and recycling in order to support the pilot programs and to improve international practices and standards for ship dismantlement and recycling.

(E) Exploration of cooperative efforts with foreign governments (under a global action program on ship recycling or other program) in order to foster economically and environmentally sound ship recycling abroad.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the pilot programs under paragraph (1) through the existing ship disposal reporting requirements in section 3502 of Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The report shall include a description of the activities under the pilot programs, and such recommendations for further legislative or administrative action as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(d) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to establish a preference for the reefing or export of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet over other alternatives available to the Secretary for the scrapping of such vessels under section 3502(d)(3) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001.

TITLE XXXVI—ATOMIC ENERGY DEFENSE PROVISIONS

Sec. 3628. Availability of funds.
Sec. 3629. Transfer of defense environmental management funds.
Sec. 3630. Transfer of weapons activities funds.
Sec. 3631. Funds available for all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

SEC. 3601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Atomic Energy Defense Act".

Subtitle A—[Reserved]

Subtitle B—Department of Energy National Security Authorizations General Provisions

SEC. 3620. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle:

(1) The term "DOE national security authorization" means an authorization of appropriations for activities of the Department of Energy in carrying out programs necessary for national security.

(2) The term "congressional defense committees" means—

(A) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(3) The term "minor construction threshold" means $5,000,000.

SEC. 3621. REPROGRAMMING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b) and in sections 3629 and 3630, the Secretary of Energy may not use amounts appropriated pursuant to a DOE national security authorization for a program—

(1) in amounts that exceed, in a fiscal year—

(A) 115 percent of the amount authorized for that program by that authorization for that fiscal year; or

(B) $5,000,000 more than the amount authorized for that program by that authorization for that fiscal year; or

(2) which has not been presented to, or requested of, Congress.

(b) EXCEPTION WHERE NOTICE-AND-WAIT GIVEN.—An action described in subsection (a) may be taken if—

(1) the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a report referred to in subsection (c) with respect to such action; and

(2) a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which such committees receive the report.

(c) REPORT.—The report referred to in subsection (a) is a report containing a full and complete statement of the action proposed to be taken and the facts and circumstances relied upon in support of the proposed action.

(d) COMPUTATION OF DAYS.—In the computation of the 30-day period under subsection (b), there shall be excluded any day on which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than three days to a day certain.

(e) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) TOTAL AMOUNT OBLIGATED.—In no event may the total amount of funds obligated pursuant to a DOE national security authorization for a fiscal year exceed the total amount authorized to be appropriated by that authorization for that fiscal year.

(2) PROHIBITED ITEMS.—Funds appropriated pursuant to a DOE national security authorization may not be used for an item for which Congress has specifically denied funds.

SEC. 3622. MINOR CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Using operation and maintenance funds or facilities and infrastructure funds authorized by a DOE national security authorization, the Secretary of Energy may carry out minor construction projects.

(b) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees on an annual basis a report on each exercise of the authority in subsection (a) during the preceding fiscal year. Each report shall provide a brief description of each minor construction project covered by the report.

(c) COST VARIATION REPORTS TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—If, at any time during the construction of any minor construction project authorized by a DOE national security authorization, the estimated cost of the project is revised and the revised cost of the project exceeds the minor construction threshold, the Secretary shall immediately submit to the congressional defense committees a report explaining the reasons for the cost variation.

(d) MINOR CONSTRUCTION PROJECT DEFINED.—In this section, the term "minor construction project" means any plant project not specifically authorized by law for which the approved total estimated cost does not exceed the minor construction threshold.

SEC. 3623. LIMITS ON CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.

(a) CONSTRUCTION COST CEILING.—Except as provided in subsection (b), construction on a construction project which is in support of national security programs of the Department of Energy and was authorized by a DOE national security authorization may not be started, and additional obligations in connection with the project above the total estimated cost may not be incurred, whenever the current estimated cost of the construction project exceeds by more than 25 percent the higher of—

(1) the amount authorized for the project; or

(2) the amount of the total estimated cost for the project as shown in the most recent budget justification data submitted to Congress.

(b) EXCEPTION WHERE NOTICE-AND-WAIT GIVEN.—An action described in subsection (a) may be taken if—

(1) the Secretary of Energy has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the actions and the circumstances making such action necessary; and

(2) a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received by the committees.

(c) COMPUTATION OF DAYS.—In the computation of the 30-day period under subsection (b), there shall be excluded any day on which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than three days to a day certain.

(d) EXCEPTION FOR MINOR PROJECTS.—Subsection (a) does not apply to a construction project with a current estimated cost of less than the minor construction threshold.

SEC. 3624. FUND TRANSFER AUTHORITY.

(a) TRANSFER TO OTHER FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Secretary of Energy may transfer funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy pursuant to a DOE national security authorization to other Federal agencies for the performance of work for which the funds were authorized. Funds so transferred may be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the authorizations of the Federal agency to which the amounts are transferred.

(b) TRANSFER WITHIN DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.—

(1) TRANSFERS PERMITTED.—Subject to paragraph (2), the Secretary of Energy may transfer funds authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy pursuant to a DOE national security authorization to any other DOE national security authorization. Amounts of authorizations so transferred may be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same period as the authorization to which the amounts are transferred.

(2) MAXIMUM AMOUNTS.—Not more than 5 percent of any such authorization may be transferred to another authorization under paragraph (1). No such authorization may be increased or decreased by more than 5 percent by a transfer under such paragraph.

(c) LIMITATIONS.—The authority provided by this subsection to transfer authorizations—

(1) may be used only to provide funds for items relating to activities necessary for national security programs that have a higher priority than the items from which the funds are transferred; and

(2) may not be used to provide funds for an item for which Congress has specifically denied funds.

(d) NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Energy shall promptly notify the congressional defense committees of any transfer of funds to or from any DOE national security authorization.

SEC. 3625. CONCEPTUAL AND CONSTRUCTION DESIGN.

(a) CONCEPTUAL DESIGN.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—Subject to paragraph (2) and except as provided in paragraph (3), before submitting to Congress a request for funds for a construction project that is in support of a national security program of the Department of Energy, the Secretary of Energy shall complete a conceptual design for that project.

(2) REQUESTS FOR CONCEPTUAL DESIGN FUNDS.—If the estimated cost of completing a conceptual design for a construction project exceeds $3,000,000, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a request for funds for the conceptual design before submitting a request for funds for the construction project.

(3) EXCEPTIONS.—The requirement in paragraph (1) does not apply to a request for funds—

(A) for a construction project the total estimated cost of which is less than the minor construction threshold; or

(B) for emergency planning, design, and construction activities under section 3626.

(b) CONSTRUCTION DESIGN.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—Within the amounts authorized by a DOE national security authorization, the Secretary may carry out construction design (including architectural and engineering services) in connection with any proposed construction project if the total estimated cost for such design does not exceed $600,000.

(2) LIMITATION ON AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS FOR CERTAIN PROJECTS.—If the total estimated cost for construction design in connection with any construction project exceeds $600,000, funds for that design must be specifically authorized by law.

SEC. 3626. AUTHORITY FOR EMERGENCY PLANNING, DESIGN, AND CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Energy may use any funds available to the Department of Energy pursuant to a DOE national security authorization, including funds authorized to be appropriated for advance planning, engineering, and construction design, and for plant projects, to perform planning, design, and construction activities for any Department of Energy national security program construction project that, as determined by the Secretary, must proceed expeditiously in order to protect public health and safety, to meet the needs of national defense, or to protect property.

(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not exercise the authority under subsection (a) in the case of a construction project until the Secretary has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the activities that the Secretary intends to carry out under this section and the circumstances making those activities necessary.

(c) SPECIFIC AUTHORITY.—The requirement of section 3625(b)(2) does not apply to emergency planning, design, and construction activities conducted under this section.

SEC. 3627. SCOPE OF AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT PLANT PROJECTS.

In carrying out programs necessary for national security, the authority of the Secretary of Energy to carry out plant projects includes authority for maintenance, restoration, planning, construction, acquisition, modification of facilities, and the continuation of projects authorized in prior years, and land acquisition related thereto.

SEC. 3628. AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), amounts appropriated pursuant to a DOE national security authorization for operation and maintenance or for plant projects may, when so specified in an appropriations Act, remain available until expended.

(b) EXCEPTION FOR PROGRAM DIRECTION FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated for program direction pursuant to a DOE national security athorization for a fiscal year shall remain available to be obligated only until the end of that fiscal year.

SEC. 3629. TRANSFER OF DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT FUNDS.

(a) TRANSFER AUTHORITY FOR DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT FUNDS.—The Secretary of Energy shall provide the manager of each field office of the Department of Energy with the authority to transfer defense environmental management funds from a program or project under the jurisdiction of that office to another such program or project.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) NUMBER OF TRANSFERS.—Not more than one transfer may be made to or from any program or project under subsection (a) in a fiscal year.

(2) AMOUNTS TRANSFERRED.—The amount transferred to or from a program or project in any one transfer under subsection (a) may not exceed $5,000,000.

(3) DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—A transfer may not be carried out by a manager of a field office under subsection (a) unless the manager determines that the transfer is necessary—

(A) to address a risk to health, safety, or the environment; or

(B) to assure the most efficient use of defense environmental management funds at the field office.

(4) IMPERMISSIBLE USES.—Funds transferred pursuant to subsection (a) may not be used for an item for which Congress has specifically denied funds or for a new program or project that has not been authorized by Congress.

(c) EXEMPTION FROM REPROGRAMMING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of section 3621 shall not apply to transfers of funds pursuant to subsection (a).

(d) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary, acting through the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management, shall notify Congress of any transfer of funds pursuant to subsection (a) not later than 30 days after such transfer occurs.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "program or project" means, with respect to a field office of the Department of Energy, a program or project that is for environmental restoration or waste management activities necessary for national security programs of the Department, that is being carried out by that office, and for which defense environmental management funds have been authorized and appropriated.

(2) The term "defense environmental management funds" means funds appropriated to the Department of Energy pursuant to an authorization for carrying out environmental restoration and waste management activities necessary for national security programs.

SEC. 3630. TRANSFER OF WEAPONS ACTIVITIES FUNDS.

(a) TRANSFER AUTHORITY FOR WEAPONS ACTIVITIES FUNDS.—The Secretary of Energy shall provide the manager of each field office of the Department of Energy with the authority to transfer weapons activities funds from a program or project under the jurisdiction of that office to another such program or project.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) NUMBER OF TRANSFERS.—Not more than one transfer may be made to or from any program or project under subsection (a) in a fiscal year.

(2) AMOUNTS TRANSFERRED.—The amount transferred to or from a program or project in any one transfer under subsection (a) may not exceed $5,000,000.

(3) DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—A transfer may not be carried out by a manager of a field office under subsection (a) unless the manager determines that the transfer—

(A) is necessary to address a risk to health, safety, or the environment; or

(B) will result in cost savings and efficiencies.

(4) LIMITATION.—A transfer may not be carried out by a manager of a field office under subsection (a) to cover a cost overrun or scheduling delay for any program or project.

(5) IMPERMISSIBLE USES.—Funds transferred pursuant to subsection (a) may not be used for an item for which Congress has specifically denied funds or for a new program or project that has not been authorized by Congress.

(c) EXEMPTION FROM REPROGRAMMING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of section 3621 shall not apply to transfers of funds pursuant to subsection (a).

(d) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary, acting through the Administrator for Nuclear Security, shall notify Congress of any transfer of funds pursuant to subsection (a) not later than 30 days after such transfer occurs.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "program or project" means, with respect to a field office of the Department of Energy, a program or project that is for weapons activities necessary for national security programs of the Department, that is being carried out by that office, and for which weapons activities funds have been authorized and appropriated.

(2) The term "weapons activities funds" means funds appropriated to the Department of Energy pursuant to an authorization for carrying out weapons activities necessary for national security programs.

SEC. 3631. FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR ALL NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAMS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

Subject to the provisions of appropriation Acts and section 3621, amounts appropriated pursuant to a DOE national security authorization for management and support activities and for general plant projects are available for use, when necessary, in connection with all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4546), to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House amendment struck out the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House with an amendment which is a substitute for the House amendment and the Senate amendment. The differences between the Senate amendment, the House amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

Summary Statement of Conference Actions

The conferees recommend authorization of appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for the Department of Defense for procurement; research and development; test and evaluation; operation and maintenance; working capital funds; military construction and family housing; and for weapons and environmental restoration programs of the Department of Energy, that have a budget authority implication of $392.9 billion for the national defense function.

This funding level represents a $3.5 billion reduction to the amounts requested by the President to reflect the proper accounting for civilian retirement and health benefits under current law. The administration's budget included $3.5 billion in the national defense function as part of a governmentwide proposal for accrual funding that was not adopted by the committees of jurisdiction within Congress. This reduction of $3.5 billion is an accounting adjustment that does not reduce the amount of funding available for defense programs and would not result in any reduction in benefits for federal civilian employees of the Department of Defense or the Department of Energy.

Summary Table of Authorizations

The defense authorization act provides authorizations for appropriations but does not generally provide budget authority. Budget authority is provided in appropriations acts.

In order to relate the conference recommendations to the Budget Resolution, matters in addition to the dollar authorizations contained in this bill must be taken into account. A number of programs in the national defense function are authorized permanently or, in certain instances, authorized in other legislation.

The following table summarizes authorizations included in the bill for fiscal year 2003 and, in addition, summarizes the implications of the conference action for the budget authority totals for national defense (budget function 050).

Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Army in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense.

The Senate amendment would authorize $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Aircraft Procurement, Navy—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $8,204.0 million for Aircraft Procurement, Navy in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $9,077.6 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $9,037.2 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $8,979.3 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

MV–22/CV–22 Osprey aircraft advance procurement

The budget request included $60.3 million in advance procurement to support production of 13 MV–22 aircraft in fiscal year 2004 and $10.1 million in advance procurement to support production of two CV–22 aircraft in fiscal year 2004.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $9.2 million in Aircraft Procurement, Navy and a decrease of $10.1 million in Aircraft Procurement, Air Force. These decreases reflect support for buying a total of 11 MV–22 aircraft and no CV–22 aircraft.

Authorization of a maximum of 11 V–22 Osprey aircraft for fiscal year 2004 is consistent with section 123 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107). That provision restricts production of the V–22 (MV–22 and CV–22) to the minimum sustaining production rate until the Secretary of Defense can make certain certifications to Congress.

Given the V–22 schedule for testing, the Department of Defense has agreed that the maximum number of V–22 aircraft that it will be able to buy in fiscal year 2004 is 11. The Department of the Navy and the Department of the Air Force have asked, however, that Congress support buying nine MV–22 and two CV–22 aircraft in fiscal year 2004.

Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize a total of $41.0 million in Aircraft Procurement, Navy for advance procurement for nine MV–22 aircraft, a decrease of $19.3 million. The conferees agree to authorize the budget request for advance procurement supporting CV–22 aircraft.

The conferees do not want support for buying CV–22 aircraft in fiscal year 2004 to be interpreted as any change in their views concerning the requirements in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107). Therefore, the conferees direct that no CV–22 Osprey aircraft be used for missions other than testing, training, or tactics development until that aircraft is in a configuration that has received the certifications required in the applicable parts of section 123 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107).

T–45 training system

The budget request included $221.8 million to purchase eight T–45C aircraft but included no funds for advance procurement to support T–45C aircraft procurement in fiscal year 2004. The projections in the Future Years Defense Program include no T–45 procurement beyond fiscal year 2003.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $10.0 million for advance procurement to support fiscal year 2004 procurement.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

The conferees understand that the Navy has stated a requirement for 234 T–45 aircraft. The Navy's inventory, however, will total only 181 aircraft after delivery of the eight aircraft to be produced with fiscal year 2003 funds.

The conferees understand that the Navy may be reconsidering the original decision to truncate production with the fiscal year 2003 procurement. Absent a change in the requirement for additional T–45C aircraft to support training requirements of the Department of the Navy, the conferees believe that the Navy should continue to buy T–45 aircraft and its associated training systems.

If the Navy decides to continue production, the conferees encourage the Department of the Navy to investigate options for acquiring additional systems in the manner most advantageous to the Government, to include adopting a multiyear procurement contracting strategy.

Procurement, Marine Corps—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $1,288.4 million for Procurement, Marine Corps in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $1,377.2 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $1,343.1 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $1,355.5 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Batteries

The budget request included no funding to replace batteries in the Marine Corps' fleet of prepositioned equipment stored in Norway or aboard the Maritime Prepositioning Force ships.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would support the budget request.

The Marine Corps believes that the use of batteries with newer technology that would replace the current lead-acid batteries could help reduce total ownership costs for vehicles maintained in long-term storage.

The conferees, therefore, agree to an increase of $3.0 million for batteries to be used for long-term storage applications.

Procurement, Defense-Wide—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $2,688.5 million for Procurement, Defense-Wide in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $3,235.4 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $3,054.9 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $3,691.6 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Advanced SEAL Delivery System

The budget request included $21.8 million for the Advanced SEAL Delivery System (ASDS) procurement, $34.7 million for ASDS advance procurement, and $12.2 million in PE 1160404BB for ASDS research, development, test and evaluation (RDT&E).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize $27.3 million for ASDS procurement, no funds for ASDS advance procurement, and no funds in PE 1160404BB for ASDS RDT&E, but it would identify $13.7 million of unused fiscal year 2002 procurement funds to meet fiscal year 2003 RDT&E requirements.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million for ASDS procurement, no funds for ASDS advance procurement, and an increase of $9.6 million in PE 1160606BB for ASDS RDT&E. Of the $23.8 million authorized for ASDS procurement, the conferees agree that $12.0 million would cover the procurement of lithium ion batteries. The conferees have also included a provision (sec. 214) that would transfer $13.7 million from the amount authorized and appropriated in fiscal year 2002 for ASDS advance procurement to the fiscal year 2003 ASDS RDT&E account.

Subsequent to submission of the budget request and the passage of the House and Senate bills, the U.S. Special Operations Command (SOCOM) approved a restructuring of the ASDS program, and the conferees were informed of changed fiscal year 2003 funding requirements through the submission of a Department of Defense Authorization appeal. The amounts authorized by the conferees support the SOCOM-approved, restructured program.

The conferees believe that the ASDS program continues to require increased attention from the Commander in Chief, Special Operations Command; the Naval Sea Systems Command; and the Office of the Secretary of Defense. Accordingly, the conferees direct that no more than 50 percent of the fiscal year 2003 ASDS procurement funding (excluding the $12.0 million amount for the lithium ion batteries) be obligated until the Secretary of Defense conducts a complete review of the requirements, mission, management, and cost structure of the ASDS program and reports to the congressional defense committees on his findings.

Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Defense—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Army in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense.

The Senate amendment would authorize $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $1,490.2 million for Chemical Agents & Munitions Destruction, Defense. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Big Safari

The conferees are aware that the Air Force's Big Safari program office has contributed significantly to the Nation's defense through flexible and dynamic management of programs, including the RC-135 Rivet Joint aircraft and the Predator unmanned aerial vehicle.

The conferees, however, are concerned that the management realignments associated with Big Safari that have been implemented over the past 10 years may have resulted in a layering of review processes and extended acquisition cycles. The existence of several intervening headquarters and agencies, in some cases, could inhibit communication between senior Air Force leadership and those responsible for rapidly fielding innovative intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR) systems. The conferees believe the Big Safari approach to streamlined acquisition of specialized ISR capabilities is important to the effective execution of the war on terrorism. The conferees, therefore, recommend that the Secretary of the Air Force consider reestablishing Big Safari as a special projects office reporting directly to the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Acquisition.

Navy ship acquisition

The conferees remain concerned about both the Department of Defense (DOD) and the Department of the Navy (DON) fiscal year 2003 and previous budget requests for ship acquisition programs. This concern arises from many facts, among which are:

(1) Numerous witnesses, both government and civilian, have testified on the requirement for increased Navy ship acquisition and the annual investment required to recapitalize the Navy's fleet to meet the battle force ship force structure goals outlined in the most recent Quadrennial Defense Review;

(2) Despite congressional documentation over a number of years that the Navy's budget requests are insufficient to recapitalize the required fleet, the Department of Defense continues to submit long-range shipbuilding plans that are inadequate to carry out the missions assigned to the Navy in both the short and long-term; and

(3) The Department of Defense has established a consistent pattern of putting a large number of ships in the latter years of the Future Years Defense Program (FYDP), instead of placing the annual number required in the budget year.

The conferees are also concerned about the manner in which DOD and the DON are interacting with Congress on these important issues. For example, DOD was very late in submitting two acquisition-related attack submarine reports. The late submission of these reports, which required a review of the long- term approach to the stated problem of the low number of attack submarines, made it difficult for Congress to evaluate the annual attack submarine acquisition request. The Department's late or inadequate submission of congressionally mandated reports must be corrected.

Absent more immediate investment, DOD will have to reduce the number or scope of missions assigned to Navy ships. Witnesses have testified that, if neither course is incorporated in future Navy budget programs, the men and women of the Navy and the Marine Corps will bear the burden of these decisions through some combination of longer deployments and less time at home between deployments. The conferees believe that concrete evidence has been presented to demonstrate that these burdens will result in lower retention, less training, and eventually undermanned ships at sea.

In many instances, the overall Department of Defense ship acquisition message is confused. The conferees believe that DOD has provided only lukewarm support for the acquisition of new ships to modernize the Navy. Despite a sizeable increase in the fiscal year 2003 budget for national defense, the number of ships in the new construction shipbuilding account has declined from the level planned in the last FYDP. The conferees also believe that the DON shares blame for this confusion because it has been inconsistent in its description of force structure requirements. This situation makes it appear as if the Navy has not fully evaluated the long-term implications of its annual budget requests. Because it is difficult for Congress to dramatically adjust the course set in a budget request, the departments must consider the long-term implications of their annual budget requests.

Other, more specific situations inform the conferees' conclusions, as noted below.

(1) DOD and DON witnesses have consistently testified over a number of years that the DON hopes to make reductions in operating and support costs and reallocate those funds for necessary shipbuilding investments. The conferees believe that sufficient evidence has accumulated over a number of years to conclude that the Navy's hopes of harvesting operating and support funds sufficient to recapitalize the fleet are misplaced.

(2) The size of the Navy has been steadily declining, with no apparent solution to halt the decline. Despite this fact, the DON has continued to retire mission-capable ships before the end of their useful service lives. While this action will achieve modest, short-term operating and support cost savings, the conferees believe that this situation reveals that the DON is focusing too narrowly on near-term exigencies. Retiring ships earlier than planned merely adds to the size of the acquisition "bow wave" that may already be reaching insurmountable proportions. Accordingly, the conferees further believe that the nation can ill afford to make a 30-year investment in a ship acquisition and then receive less than 30 years from that investment. If the DON continues making these early retirements, the Navy may only achieve short-term savings at the expense of preserving the capability to maintain the level of forward presence and crisis response that is presumed in the most recent Quadrennial Defense Review.

(3) The Navy has occasionally invoked an argument that a smaller number of more capable ships can do the same job as a greater number of ships with less capability. While the conferees recognize that the Navy buys new ships with increased capability as a response to the evolving threat, the conferees believe that the number of ships required to carry out the presence mission has not diminished from those stated in the two previous Quadrennial Defense Reviews.

(4) Placing additional ship acquisition requirements on an underfunded ship acquisition program has exacerbated the budget pressure on the ship acquisition account. The number of ships required to execute the national military strategy should be fully funded and should take priority over new ship acquisition programs that have not been fully vetted. The Navy's tendency to create new ship program requests during the congressional budget review period indicates a lack of planning, analysis, and foresight. This practice generates questions about the validity of the entire request and disrupts support for programs budgeted to meet validated requirements.

(5) The conferees note that the DON submitted a report to Congress on the most efficient plan for buying the ships in the long-range shipbuilding plan, but despite its own analysis, the Navy subsequently submitted a budget request that did not include those efficiencies. Consequently, the conferees believe that the Navy's acquisition strategy has resulted in higher unit prices, ultimately resulting in a smaller number of ships procured for the available funding.

(6) DOD has conducted additional reviews, performed multiple analyses, and produced numerous reports on ship acquisition programs. These additional reviews, while arriving at the same conclusions as previous analyses, have been used as means to delay ship requirements validations and acquisition increases to meet those requirements. The conferees believe that these postponements put added pressure on the Navy's new construction shipbuilding account and increase the slope of the acquisition "mountain" facing the Navy.

(7) The conferees perceive that DOD lacks a commitment to buy the number and type of ships required to carry out the full range of Navy missions without redundancy. The DON has proposed to buy more ships than the stated requirement in some classes, while not requesting sufficient new hulls in other classes that fall short of the stated requirement. Additionally, the conferees believe that the cost of ships will not be reduced by continually changing the number of ships in acquisition programs or by frequently changing the configuration and capability of those ships, all frequent attributes of recent DON shipbuilding plans. The conferees intend to scrutinize closely proposals for ships that would only yield marginal improvements in any mission area already inherent in the fleet.

(8) The conferees note that the Navy has testified that personnel and maintenance comprise the largest cost in the total acquisition and life-cycle costs, yet the DON is not taking deliberate steps to buy ships that would require smaller crews and would operate with lower maintenance costs. Some ships are being designed to achieve significant manpower life-cycle savings, but the DON has delayed their acquisition and reduced their numbers. Consequently, the conferees believe that these delays will result in a more expensive future force than need be.

(9) Although some programs, such as the DD(X) destroyer, aim to reach significant manpower reduction goals, the DON is not identifying reasonable goals for other major ship programs in the FYDP. Despite DON testimony that manpower reduction goals are very important, a General Accounting Office (GAO) review of existing and future ship programs informs that most of those programs do not include human systems integration (HSI) in the operational requirements documents. GAO further concluded that research shows HSI has great potential for minimizing the costs of manning, thereby reducing total ownership costs. Accordingly, the conferees believe that the DON must institutionalize the process by which they will reach their goal of an effective Navy in the future at reduced total life-cycle costs.

The conferees strongly recommend that the Navy design ship acquisition programs to take advantage of the best acquisition strategies that have been identified in the Navy's own reports as leading to the greatest cost savings. These include multiyear procurement, block buy of long lead materials and configuration stability for blocks of ships. The conferees further recommend that, once structured, the DON submit fully vetted and supported programs for acquisition and not change course in the middle of the process. Congress fully supports a strong Navy and Marine Corps team as indispensable to the national defense. DOD and the DON bear a significant responsibility for correcting the deficiencies noted above.

Cryptographic equipment modernization

The conferees believe that the National Security Agency is making substantial progress in developing modern cryptographic equipment and materials. The conferees, however, fail to see evidence that the services are programming sufficient resources for cryptographic modernization procurement. The conferees expect the services to make better progress in addressing this problem by providing adequate procurement funding in future budget submissions.

Signals intelligence architecture

The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence (ASD (C3I)) has the responsibility to provide guidance and oversight with respect to policy for all aspects of information exchange networks and to all Department of Defense components. The ASD (C3I) is also responsible for providing guidance for data information and storage systems and their standardization to ensure service interoperability. The conferees recognize that the National Security Agency (NSA) has an important role in supporting this ASD (C3I) responsibility in the area of developing standards for signals intelligence (SIGINT) architecture for the Department of Defense.

The conferees addressed airborne SIGINT architecture issues in the statement of managers (H. Rept. 107–333) accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107). The conferees encouraged the ASD (C3I) to develop an architectural plan to provide standards-based policy direction to the services, whose platform program offices can develop systems, and, to the maximum extent possible, share developments. The statement of managers expressed the expectation that the plan should include: (1) a robust spiral development approach; and (2) adequate emphasis on fielding and modernizing the appropriate ground support infrastructure.

The conferees have been unable to detect progress within the Department on such an effort. The ASD(C3I) and the Director of the NSA have not been able to develop and field a cohesive SIGINT architecture with the necessary technical standards. In addition, the conferees can find no evidence that the leadership in either organization has provided sufficient support for establishing an organizational framework for coordinating their own organizational activities or for providing the cross-service oversight of joint intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR) SIGINT activities, particularly when it comes to information-sharing, routing, and access.

Therefore, the conferees direct the ASD (C3I) to provide a report to the congressional defense and intelligence committees by May 30, 2003, on progress he is making in developing standards for SIGINT architecture for the Department of Defense.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (secs. 101–107)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 101–107) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2003 funding levels for procurement for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Defense-Wide activities, Defense Inspector General, Chemical Demilitarization Program, and Defense Health Program.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions (secs. 101–107).

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Defense (sec. 106)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 106) that would authorize $1.5 billion, the amount included in the budget request, for the destruction of chemical agents, munitions, and materiel.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 106) that would authorize the requested amount for chemical demilitarization in a Defense Department account, in accordance with section 1521(f) of title 50, United States Code.

The House recedes.

The conferees are disappointed that the Department of Defense requested funds for chemical demilitarization for fiscal year 2003 in an Army budget account, contrary to the requirements of law. Section 1521(f) of title 50, United States Code requires that funds for this program shall not be included in the budget accounts for any military department. The conferees expect the Department to comply with the law in future budget requests and therefore have approved a separate provision, described elsewhere in this report, concerning the budget submission.

Subtitle B—Army Programs

Pilot program on sales of manufactured articles and services of certain Army industrial facilities without regard to availability from domestic sources (sec. 111)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 111) that would extend the authorization for Army industrial facilities to sell articles and services to commercial contractors providing weapon systems to the Department of Defense through fiscal year 2004.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Report on impact of Army aviation modernization plan on the Army National Guard (sec. 112)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 145) that would require the Chief of the National Guard Bureau to submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the requirements for Army National Guard aviation, including an analysis of the impact of the Army Aviation Modernization Plan on the Army National Guard.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Chief of the National Guard Bureau to submit the report through the Army Chief of Staff for any comments and recommendations he considers appropriate before he forwards the report to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives. The conferees expect the report to include an analysis of the impact of the Army Aviation Modernization Plan on Army National Guard homeland security search and rescue, MEDEVAC, and state emergency missions.

Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles (sec. 113)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would provide the Army multiyear procurement (MYP) authority for the procurement of the Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles (FMTV).

The budget request included $681.4 million to procure the FMTV to replace the Army's aging fleet of medium tactical vehicles. The FMTV is a complete series of trucks and trailers based on a common chassis, varied by payload and mission. In the fiscal year 2003 budget request, the Army intends to buy 2,572 FMTV A1 models through the option clause of the current sole-source multiyear contract and 1,002 FMTV A1 competitive rebuy (CR) models through the first year of a "competitive rebuy" multiyear contract scheduled for award in March 2003.

The Army failed to request multiyear procurement authority for the FMTV A1 CR until after both houses of Congress had acted on their respective National Defense Authorization Bills for Fiscal Year 2003.

The conferees note that the Army has had technical problems with previous versions of the FMTV. Therefore, the conferees agree that the Secretary of the Army may not enter into a multiyear contract until the Secretary certifies to the congressional defense committees that the FMTV A1 CR models meet all key performance parameters required in the initial operational test and evaluation.

The conferees also note that the Army estimates a $222.0 million cost savings (6.5 percent of the contract value) using a five-year multiyear procurement contract for the FMTV A1 CR over that of annual buys, for the same period of time. The conferees believe that the Army can achieve at least a 10 percent cost savings when both multiyear procurement authority and competition are factored into cost estimates. Therefore, the conferees agree that the Secretary of the Army may not enter into a MYP contract until he certifies that the total cost of the procurement of the FMTV A1 CR under the program over five fiscal years using MYP contracting authority is estimated to be at least 10 percent less than the estimated total cost of the procurement of FMTV A1 CR over the same five-year period through the use of successive one-year contracts. The Secretary of Defense may waive this limitation if he determines that the procurement of vehicles using a MYP contract is in the national security interests of the United States; certifies that the Army cannot achieve a 10 percent cost savings; and submits to the congressional defense committees, in writing, a notification of the waiver together with a report outlining the reasons why the use of a MYP contract is in the national security interests of the United States and reasons why the Army cannot achieve a 10 per cent savings of the total anticipated costs of carrying out the program through a MYP contract.

Subtitle C—Navy Programs

Extension of multiyear procurement authority for DDG–51 class destroyers (sec. 121)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 122) that would authorize an extension, through fiscal year 2007, of the multiyear procurement authority for Arleigh Burke-class (DDG–51) destroyers.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Sense of Congress on scope of conversion program for Ticonderoga-class cruisers (sec. 122)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 123) that would state that the Secretary of the Navy should maintain the scope of the cruiser conversion program to cover all 27 Ticonderoga-class cruisers with an appropriate mix of modernization upgrades.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment making the scope of cruiser conversion a sense of Congress.

Continuation of contract for operation of Champion-class T-5 fuel tanker vessels (sec. 123)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 112) that would prohibit the Navy's requested acquisition of Champion-class T-5 fuel tanker ships.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would permit the Navy to acquire the vessels. The amended provision would require that the Navy maintain the current operating contract for each vessel until the end of the current contract, or until the Navy or Military Sealift Command is no longer using the vessel, whichever is earlier.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

Multiyear procurement authority for C-130J aircraft program (sec. 131)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 121) that would authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to enter into a multiyear contract 30 days after the Secretary of Defense has submitted a certification that the C-130J program is making satisfactory progress toward a successful operational test and evaluation.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 131) that would authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to enter into a multiyear contract that could extend for six program years, subject to the program's having been cleared for worldwide overwater capability.

The conferees agree to a provision that would authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to enter into a multiyear contract that could extend for six program years, subject to the program's having completed qualification for air assault operations and installation of certain software upgrades.

Pathfinder programs (sec. 132)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 132) that would require: (a) the Secretary of the Air Force to submit to Congress a list of Air Force programs designated as acquisition reform pathfinder programs by February 1, 2003; (b) approval or disapproval of the spiral development plans associated with these pathfinder programs by the Secretary of Defense; and (c) assessments by the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller), the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, and the Joint Requirements Oversight Council of those pathfinder programs that were not chosen to be spiral development programs. Spiral development programs are covered by another Senate provision (sec. 803).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The conferees agree that Congress needs a further understanding of the Department of Defense plans for pathfinder programs, as well as information on lessons learned from pathfinder programs that could be applied to other programs. The conferees also agree that appropriate oversight should be maintained over such programs.

Therefore, the House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of the Air Force to submit a list of Air Force programs designated as pathfinder programs by February 1, 2003, and would require the Secretary of Defense to ensure that the Undersecretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics, the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, and the Joint Requirements Oversight Council maintain oversight of each pathfinder program. The amendment would also require the Secretary of the Air Force to submit to Congress by March 15, 2003, a report on pathfinder programs describing how oversight by these organizations will be accomplished, as well as the management, acquisition, and test and evaluation plans for each pathfinder program. The report would also contain a description of any innovative business practices that could be applied to other programs. The amendment would not exempt Air Force pathfinder programs from the requirements for spiral development programs specified in section 803.

Leases for tanker aircraft under multiyear aircraft-lease pilot program (sec. 133)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 134) which would require that the Secretary of the Air Force not enter into any lease for tanker aircraft until: (1) he has submitted the report required by Section 8159 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107-117); and (2) he has obtained authorization and appropriation of funds necessary to enter a lease for such aircraft, in accordance with his publicly stated commitments to Congress.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would clarify that the Secretary may not enter into such a lease until the Secretary either: (1) obtains authorization and appropriation of needed funds; or (2) submits a new start reprogramming notification to the congressional defense committees. The Secretary of the Air Force informed the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate February 12, 2002, that he would not take any action on tanker leasing proposals without first coming to both the authorization and the appropriations committees to have money authorized and appropriated or reprogrammed for these purposes. The conferees expect that the Secretary will live up to this commitment, regardless of whether the request for funds is submitted through the normal budget deliberation process or through established procedures observed in the reprogramming process.

Subtitle E—Other Programs

Destruction of existing stockpile of lethal chemical agents and munitions (sec. 141)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 143) that would require that the chemical demilitarization program be managed as a major defense acquisition program. It would also require that the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) provide an annual certification that the budget request for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program has been submitted in compliance with applicable Federal laws.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment that would specify that the Comptroller certify that the budget request has been submitted in accordance with section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for 1986 (Public Law 99-145).

Section 1521(f) of title 50, United States Code requires that funds for the chemical demilitarization program, including those for military construction, "shall be set forth in the budget of the Department of Defense for any fiscal year as a separate account. Such funds shall not be included in the budget accounts for any military department." The Department of Defense submitted the fiscal year 2003 budget request for chemical demilitarization in an Army account, contrary to the law. The conferees expect the Department to comply with the law in future budget requests by submitting the budget request for chemical agents and munitions destruction in a Department of Defense account. This certification provision is intended to help ensure such compliance.

Report on unmanned aerial vehicle systems (sec. 142)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 144) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to Congress on unmanned aerial vehicle (UAV) systems.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the report to describe the process by which the Department will ensure that any UAV program proceeding past the science and technology stage does so only as part of an integrated, overall Office of the Secretary of Defense strategy for UAV acquisition.

The conferees support the Department's plans to procure and field a substantial number of UAVs starting in fiscal year 2003. However, the conferees also want to ensure that UAV systems are appropriately integrated into an overall departmental strategy that will minimize redundancy and maximize commonality.

Global Information Grid system (sec. 143)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1527) that would prohibit the obligation of funds for the Global Information Grid (GIG) system until the Secretary of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that the system is secure and protected from unauthorized access.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that prohibits the obligation of funds for the GIG until the Secretary of Defense submits a plan to ensure that, as part of bandwidth expansion efforts, the information transmitted within the system is secure and protected.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Compass Call program

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 135) that would shift $12.7 million in Compass Call aircraft modifications from the Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Program line to the Classified Projects line.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Integrated bridge system

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 121) that would authorize $5.0 million for the integrated bridge system.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision. By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Marine Corps live fire range improvements

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 124) that would authorize $1.9 million for various improvements in live fire training ranges of the Marine Corps.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Mobile emergency broadband system

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 137) that would authorize $1.0 million to buy technical communications-electronics equipment for the emergency mobile broadband system.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Reallocation of certain funds for Air Force Reserve Command F–16 aircraft procurement

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 122) that would authorize $14.4 million for the 36 Litening II modernization upgrade kits for the F–16 block 25 and block 30 aircraft (rather than for Litening AT pods for such aircraft).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes on the provision. By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Shipbuilding initiative

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 111) that would authorize an additional $810.0 million for shipbuilding programs.

The section would provide that if the Virginia-class prime contractor were to reach an agreement with the Government as of the date of enactment of this bill to spend at least $385.0 million for the Virginia-class submarine program from its own funds, then the provision would authorize: (1) an additional $810.0 million for an additional Arleigh Burke-class (DDG–51) destroyer; and (2) multiyear procurement for Virginia-class submarines, commencing in fiscal year 2003.

If such an agreement were not reached, the provision would authorize the following:

(1) $415.0 million for Virginia-class submarine advance procurement;

(2) $210.0 million for cruiser conversion advance procurement; and

(3) $185.0 million for a nuclear attack submarine refueling overhaul.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE II—RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $53,924.2 million for Research and Development for the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $56,816.6 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $55,751.4 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $56,777.4 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Department of Defense science and technology funding

The budget request contained $10,009.2 million for defense science and technology, including all defense-wide and military service funding for basic research, applied research, and advanced technology development. To address the conferees' concerns with respect to critical shortcomings in the budget request, the conferees recommend an authorization of $10,384.7 million, an increase of $375.5 million for the defense science and technology (S&T) program.

The conferees note that the budget request represents an increase of $1231.4 million, or 14.0 percent above the amount requested for the fiscal year 2002 budget, and 2.7 percent of the budget request. The conferees also note that the amount in the budget request for science and technology is an increase of $132.0 million from the amount provided by Congress for fiscal year 2002. However, the Army and Navy science and technology accounts each decreased more than 21 percent (nearly $400 million each).

The conferees view defense science and technology investments as critical to maintaining U.S. military technological superiority in the face of growing and changing threats to national security interests around the world, and believe that both the defense agencies and the military departments have vital roles in the Department's science and technology investment strategy. Although pleased with the overall progress in the defense science and technology program, the conferees continue to be disturbed by the continuing trend of overall reduction in the military departments' science and technology programs and the effect of that trend on the critical role that the military departments play in the transition of science and technology into acquisition programs.

The conferees note the finding of the Defense Science Board Letter Report on the Department of Defense Science and Technology Program (August 2000) which noted that a significant change in defense science and technology over the past 10 years has been the erosion of military department's science and technology budgets. The report notes, and the conferees are aware, that a major reason the military departments' science and technology budgets have declined is because the services have had to emphasize funding for current operations. The shift in funding away from science and technology raises issues of whether the services are investing sufficiently to properly address their long-term technology needs.

The Department's science and technology program has long played a crucial role in the development of technology and in the education and training of the scientific and engineering personnel required to support the continuing technical advances critical to maintain superior military capabilities. The ability of today's U.S. military forces to deploy anywhere in the world, sustain forward presence, and win decisively on the battlefield results from past investments in research and technology. For more than 50 years, these investments have enabled the Department of Defense to advance the frontiers of knowledge and develop the technologies necessary to gain and maintain operational and technical superiority.

The conferees commend the Department of Defense commitment to a goal of three percent of the budget request for the defense science and technology program and progress toward this goal. The conferees also note the finding in the Defense Science Board report that successful high technology industries invest about 3.5 percent of sales in research (equivalent to the DOD S&T program) and the recommendation that S&T funding should be increased to ensure the continued long-term technical superiority of U.S. military forces in the 21st Century. The conferees believe that the Department must continue to provide the necessary investments in research and technologies that ensure a strong, stable, and robust science and technology program for our Armed Forces.

ARMY

Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $6,918.5 million for Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $6,933.3 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $7,301.4 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $7,158.3 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

NAVY

Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Navy—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $12,501.6 million for Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Navy in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $13,274.5 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $12,913.1 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $13,244.2 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Marine mammal research

The budget request included $393.6 million in PE 61153N for basic research to support naval applications.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.1 million to the budget request for marine mammal research.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million to the budget request.

The conferees recommend an increase of $2.0 million for basic research on marine mammals. The conferees support research on marine mammal behavior that can help address heightened public concern about the effects of military and industrial activity on these animals, including additional behavioral and acoustics research and efforts to detect the presence of marine mammals and take mitigating action to protect animals as necessary.

Littoral support craft—experimental

The budget request contained $57.6 million in PE 63123N for force protection advanced technology development but included no funds to continue the development of the Littoral Support Craft—Experimental (LSC–X). The Office of Naval Research has proposed to conduct a phased program to develop and demonstrate an experimental littoral support craft demonstrator that would provide the basis for operational experiments on the contribution that such a craft could make to naval operations in the littorals, and $36.2 million for this purpose was provided in fiscal year 2002.

The House bill would authorize an additional $13.7 million to continue development of the LSC–X.

The Senate amendment included no similar recommendation.

The statement of managers (H. Rept. 107–333) accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) directed the Secretary of the Navy to identify the set of experimental objectives that the LSC–X program is intended to explore and the objective measures of effectiveness that will be used to determine whether those objectives have been achieved. The conferees also directed the Secretary to define the program plan, the schedule, and the funding requirements for development of LSC–X.

The Secretary of the Navy submitted a report, dated August 6, 2002, that provides the Navy's plan for the development of the LSC–X. The report addresses the experimental concepts to be explored by naval forces in a phased plan that culminates in the use of the craft to test new technology and operational concepts which could be candidates for future support of expeditionary and littoral operations. The report stated that no additional funding would be required to build, outfit, and test the LSC–X prototype hull, beyond those funds already provided in fiscal year 2002.

According to the Navy's plan, the vessel should be ready for initial sea trials in the summer of 2004. The conferees also note the views expressed in the House report (H. Rept. 107–33) that a littoral support craft demonstrator such as the LSC–X design, which would include a modular payload capability that allows the use of different technology demonstrators and warfare mission modules, could be an effective experimental test bed for many of the technologies that might be chosen for use on a littoral combat ship (LCS). Elsewhere in this report, the conferees have directed the Secretary of the Navy to address the role that various demonstration platforms such as the LSC–X will play in the LCS acquisition strategy.

The conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to develop LSC–X as a complete system, including such combat, communications and weapons systems interfaces as may be required to demonstrate technologies and modular payloads, such as the affordable weapon system, that might be considered for the LCS program. To that end, the conferees direct the Navy to include in the phase one "design and build" portion of the program the total system interface definitions that will be required to demonstrate systems and technologies planned for the phase three "technology and operational concept evaluation" segment of the LSC–X program.

The conferees also believe that the Navy should accelerate phase three to ensure that information required for application to a littoral combat ship program will be available before the Navy requests funds to design such a ship. The conferees recognize that this may require a combination of science and technology and system development and demonstration funding.

Therefore, the conferees agree to an increase of $13.0 million in PE 63123N to continue development of the LSC–X demonstrator. The conferees also direct the Secretary to update his report on the development plan and identify any funding required for the LSC–X program. The Secretary should submit that updated report with the budget request for fiscal year 2004.

AIR FORCE

Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Air Force—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $17,601.2 million for Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Air Force in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $18,803.2 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $18,611.2 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $18,337.1 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Multi-sensor command and control constellation

The budget request for the Defense Emergency Response Fund (DERF), Security, Communications, and Information Operations activity included $488.0 million for the multi-sensor command and control constellation (MC2C) program. This request included $150.0 million for the purchase of a Boeing 767-400ER testbed aircraft for the multi-sensor command and control aircraft (MC2A) and $100.0 million for integration engineering for that aircraft. The request also included $238.0 million to accelerate the initial sensor suite, known as the multi-platform radar technology insertion program (MP-RTIP), for the MC2A aircraft and for the Global Hawk unmanned aerial vehicle. The budget request also included $191.1 million in PE 27449F for the MC2C program, reflecting a total request of $679.1 million.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a total of $429.1 million for the program. This decrease of $250.0 million was based on the belief that the Air Force did not have to budget for the testbed aircraft and its initial integration engineering in fiscal year 2003, since the MP-RTIP system would not be available to install in the aircraft until fiscal year 2007.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $75.0 million for the aircraft purchase and a decrease of $35.0 million for the associated integration engineering activities.

The Air Force has informed the conferees that they have extended the schedule for manufacturing, integration engineering, and airworthiness flight testing for the MC2A testbed aircraft. The new estimate of the schedule would reduce the amount of time available to modify the aircraft to a configuration that would support installation of the MP-RTIP sensor. The revised schedule calls for delivery of the testbed aircraft late in the third quarter of fiscal year 2004 rather than the originally planned delivery early in the first quarter of fiscal year 2004.

The conferees agree that, under the revised schedule, the Air Force may begin the purchase of the aircraft in fiscal year 2003, but should split the cost of the aircraft and integration engineering between fiscal years 2003 and 2004. Since the schedule for the aircraft has been delayed, the conferees have determined that the Air Force does not require all of the funding originally requested for integration engineering tasks in fiscal year 2003.

Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize a total of $569.1 million for the program, a total decrease of $110.0 million.

DEFENSE-WIDE

Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $16,613.6 million for Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $17,516.3 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $16,496.9 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $17,659.1 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Advanced aerospace systems

The budget request included $246.0 million in PE 63285E for research to address high payoff opportunities associated with advanced aeronautical and space systems.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $50.0 million in PE 63285E.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to a $10.5 million reduction to PE 63285E. The conferees direct that this reduction not be assessed against the Unmanned Combat Air Vehicle programs.

Arrow

The budget request included $65.7 million in PE 63881C for the joint U.S./Israeli Arrow missile defense program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $91.0 million in PE 63881C for the Arrow program.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $40.0 million in PE 63881C for the Arrow program.

The conferees strongly support the Arrow program and agree that, of the funding authorized for the Missile Defense Agency, up to an additional $55.0 million may be used for the Arrow program.

TEST AND EVALUATION

Operational Test and Evaluation, Defense—Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $222.1 million for Operational Test and Evaluation, Defense.

The House bill would authorize $222.1 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $361.6 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $311.6 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Biometric identification technology

The budget request included the following amounts for research and development activities related to information systems security programs: (1) $394.3 million in PE 33140G; (2) $14.8 million in PE 33140A; (3) $18.4 million in PE 33140N; and (4) $9.4 million in PE 33140F. Within those amounts, the budget request included $4.3 million in projects related to biometric and anti-tamper evaluations in PE 33140G and $6.0 million in PE 33140A supporting the Department of the Army and Department of Defense Executive Agent activities for biometrics.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would support the budget request.

The House report (H. Rept. 107-592) on the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003 (H.R. 4628) would recommend $15.0 million within PE 33140G for a national biometric security project.

The conferees understand that use of biometric identification techniques could dramatically improve national infrastructure security. For example, biometric technology can be used for protecting electronic information systems, ensuring the authenticity of communications, and deterring terrorist or other attacks against the national communications infrastructure.

The conferees believe that the Defense Department's biometrics research and development programs might benefit from participation in a national-level consortium. That consortium might coordinate biometric research, assess various biometric techniques, evaluate promising technologies, and educate information professionals. Such a consortium approach might be used to mobilize and coordinate biometric expertise and provide an informed basis for integrating biometric technologies into a comprehensive approach to infrastructure security. In so doing, a consortium could provide independent, private sector advice and support on how best to deploy biometrics and biometric technologies to help deter or respond to terrorist attacks against the national critical infrastructure.

Therefore, the conferees encourage the Director of the National Security Agency to investigate the possibility of sponsoring a national biometric security project and provide the results of that investigation to the congressional defense and intelligence committees when he completes that review. The conferees also believe that it would be appropriate to use resources from within the information systems security program to conduct such a review.

Delegation of research, development, test, and evaluation programs and activities

The conferees support the efforts of the Department of Defense to streamline and transform itself in order to more effectively modernize and achieve its mission. The conferees are concerned, however, about recent efforts to devolve numerous research, development, test, and evaluation (RDT&E) programs within the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) to the services and defense components. In particular, the conferees note that several programs with significant congressional interest are being transferred out of OSD, many of which are managed by OSD at congressional direction. It is the conferees' understanding that these programs are being transferred to achieve staffing and budget goals within OSD, rather than to improve the execution or performance of the affected programs.

The conferees believe that the level of support that these RDT&E programs will receive if managed by the services and defense components will be reduced without OSD oversight. In addition, many of these programs serve multiple military objectives, which may not be addressed if the programs are managed by the individual services or defense components.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to halt any efforts to transition the following RDT&E programs to a particular service or defense component: (1) Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program; (2) Defense Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research; (3) Environmental Security Technology Certification Program; (4) In-House Laboratory Independent Research; (5) High Performance Computer Modernization Program; (6) High Energy Laser Program; (7) Mentor Protege Program; (8) University Research Initiative; (9) Foreign Comparative Test Program; and (10) Joint Robotics Program.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide notification to Congress prior to the delegation of research, development, test, and evaluation activities and programs from the Office of the Secretary of Defense to a service or other defense component outside of OSD. The conferees direct the Secretary to provide justification for any proposed delegations in the form of a mandated report.

A report on a delegation of authority should include each of the following: (1) an identification of the Secretary of a military department or head of a defense agency or other element of the Department of Defense to whom the delegation is made; (2) an evaluation of how the delegation is expected to improve the efficiency and performance of the program or activity in accomplishing the stated goals and purposes of the program or activity; (3) a description of plans for continued supervision of the program by the Office of the Secretary of Defense to ensure that the program or activity has sufficient resources to accomplish its stated goals and purposes; and (4) an identification of any changes in existing law necessary to support the delegation and a request that such changes be enacted.

The conferees note that any delegation of RDT&E activities or programs by the Secretary of Defense shall be subject to careful congressional scrutiny. Some of the programs proposed for delegation were established at the OSD level by statute and will require changes to such statutes or enactment of specific authorization enabling the Secretary of Defense to delegate the program, while others may involve strong congressional interest. The conferees expect the Secretary of Defense to consider these legal requirements and congressional interests in rendering a decision on devolvement.

Management of the chemical-biological defense program

The conferees have been informed that on September 19, 2002, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics (USD(AT&L)) approved an acquisition decision memorandum that would reorganize management of the chemical-biological defense program. The new streamlined management structure would place authority and accountability with specific individuals in an effort to improve the program's efficiency and responsiveness to warfighter and national security needs. Under the revised management structure, a Joint Program Executive Office (JPEO) would be established that would have responsibility for chemical-biological defense acquisition programs and would report through the Army Acquisition Executive to the Defense Acquisition Executive. Responsibility for chemical-biological defense science and technology programs, except those programs separately funded and managed by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), would be assigned to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA), which would also continue to perform funding management functions under the oversight of the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense (Nuclear and Chemical and Biological Defense Programs) (ATSD(NCB)). Responsibility for overall coordination and integration of all activities within the chemical-biological defense program, to include policy guidance, interagency and international coordination responsibility, and day-to-day oversight, would be exercised by the ATSD(NCB) in accordance with section 1701 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160). The ATSD(NCB) would establish and chair a permanent overarching integrated product team, consisting of representatives from the military services, the Joint Staff, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense, to assist the ATSD(NCB) in this oversight role.

The conferees understand that the Joint Requirements Oversight Council has already established a Joint Requirements Office for Nuclear, Biological and Chemical (NBC) Defense in the Joint Staff, which replaces the current requirements process under the Joint NBC Defense Board and will integrate and establish priorities for chemical-biological defense requirements.

The conferees strongly support the Under Secretary's objective of establishing a streamlined management structure for the chemical-biological defense program that will improve authority and accountability and will ensure that the program is better able to respond to warfighter and national needs. The conferees agree that the establishment of a JPEO responsible for acquisition programs will provide a single, dedicated executive, who will be able to integrate programs and funding across commodity areas and services and effectively link programmatic and acquisition authority. The conferees believe that the JPEO should be established as a joint activity, with subordinate program managers drawn from all the military services.

The conferees are concerned, however, about the assignment of responsibility for the science and technology program to DTRA.

The conferees note that the predominant expertise in the chemical-biological defense science and technology program resides in the military departments and particularly in the chemical-biological, medical biological, and medical chemical defense science and technology programs of the Army, which is currently responsible for approximately 70 percent of the program. The conferees are concerned about how this existing technical expertise would continue to be leveraged under a science and technology program managed and executed by DTRA.

The conferees note that, to date, DTRA's direct participation in the chemical-biological defense program has been limited, and a significant increase in DTRA's management and chemical-biological science and technology capabilities would be required to take on the management and execution of the chemical- biological defense science and technology program.

One key attribute of the military departments' research and development laboratories and centers is their close contact with the services in the field that provides a constant awareness of the needs of deployed soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines. The conferees are concerned about the ability of a separate science and technology program under DTRA to remain focused on acquisition program requirements and the need to meet the needs of the warfighter.

The conferees believe that a close and habitual working relationship between the science and technology community and the acquisition community is necessary for the transition of maturing technologies into acquisition programs. The conferees note the difficulty in transitioning technologies developed under DARPA's biological warfare defense program into acquisition programs. The conferees believe it is important to maintain the close link between the acquisition and science and technology communities under the new program management.

The conferees note further that the congressional defense committees played a major role in establishing a defense-wide, integrated, and coordinated chemical and biological defense program that would meet the needs of U.S. Armed Forces and have closely monitored and maintained an intense interest in this critical program. A principal feature of the program was the establishment in the Office of the Secretary of Defense of a strong focal point for chemical-biological defense to provide overall policy and budget guidance and oversight for the program.

The conferees do not want to prejudge the decision made by the USD(AT&L) and note that appropriate staff agencies have begun work on the detailed plans and procedures required to implement the acquisition decision memorandum. The conferees request that the concerns noted above be take into account in the development of those implementation plans. The conferees direct that the Under Secretary review the implementation plans and procedures with the congressional defense committees before those plans become effective.

Wide bandgap semiconductor electronics

The budget request contained $5.5 million in PE 61153N for basic research and $30.0 million in PE 62712E, $1.4 million in PE 62705A, $3.5 million in PE 62271N, $1.75 million in PE 62204F for applied research in wide bandgap semiconductor electronics.

The House would authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 62271N for wide bandgap semiconductor materials technology and an increase of $5.5 million in PE 63175C for silicon carbide-based wide bandgap semiconductor technology.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.5 million in PE 62271N for wide bandgap semiconductor materials and devices for application in advanced power electronics, communications, and sensor systems, $2.5 million for silicon carbide materials and device research, and $1.5 million for advanced semiconductor materials research for high power amplifiers. The amendment would also authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 63175C for wide bandgap semiconductor technology.

The conferees agree to authorize $5.5 million in PE 61153N for basic research and $30.0 million in PE 62712E, $1.4 million in PE 62705A, and $1.75 million in PE 62204F for applied research in wide bandgap semiconductor electronics as contained in the budget request. The conferees also agree to authorize increases in PE 62271N of $2.5 million for wide bandgap semiconductor materials and devices, $2.5 million for silicon carbide materials and devices, and $1.5 million for advanced semiconductor materials, and increases in PE 63175C of $2.5 million for silicon carbide-based wide bandgap semiconductor technology and $2.5 million for gallium nitride technology.

Section 212 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) required the Secretary of Defense to carry out a cooperative program to develop and demonstrate advanced technologies and concepts for future naval radar systems and other applications with particular emphasis on development of advanced electronic materials to extend the range and sensitivity of radars. The conferees have reviewed the report by the Director of Defense Research and Engineering (DDRE), dated May 28, 2002, that addresses the cooperative program. Collaborating agencies under the overall direction of the DDRE include the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), the Navy, the Army, the Air Force, and the Missile Defense Agency.

The conferees note that the program focuses on activities needed to accelerate the development, maturation, and transition of technologies for advanced electronic materials to extend the range and sensitivity of naval radars, including radio frequency/microwave and high power wide bandgap semiconductor materials and devices, and reduce the technical risk and expedite the insertion of the technology in military systems. While several insertion opportunities exist across the services, the next generation naval radar is the primary insertion target. To support that development, an objective of the overall wide bandgap program is to demonstrate the ability to produce wide bandgap high power amplifiers that can be expected to meet cost and performance criteria of the Navy's advanced ship-based radar plan for sea-based missile defense. The goal of the program for these devices is to achieve a sufficient level of technology maturity to support the radar's preliminary design review that is now anticipated to occur between fiscal year 2007 and 2008.

The conferees note that the DDRE's report reflected an initial investment in the collaborative program of $54.9 million in fiscal year 2002. The fiscal year 2003 budget request for the program totals $40.7 million, including $30.0 million in DARPA, $3.7 million in the Navy, $1.8 million in the Air Force, $1.4 million in the Army, and $3.9 million for Defense Production Act Title III authority to facilitate the transition of technologies through the establishment of enhanced production capabilities.

The conferees note that this level of funding is not consistent with previous analyses, which have recommended an increased science and technology investment in wide bandgap technology that would total approximately $50 million per year over a five-year period, beginning in fiscal year 2002, in order to develop the technologies necessary to field advanced radar systems in time to meet the Navy and the Department of Defense (DOD) requirements in 2015. The conference agreement increases the investment in the program to the recommended level.

The conferees commend the participating DOD agencies for development of the collaborative program. The conferees place a high priority on the development of the technology for advanced wide bandgap semiconductor materials and devices for future naval radar and other applications and intend to monitor the program closely.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (sec. 201)

The Senate bill contained a provision (sec. 201) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2003 funding levels for all research, development, test, and evaluation accounts.

The House amendment contained a similar provision.

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Amount for defense science and technology (sec. 202)

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $9,677.2 million for science and technology programs in the Department of Defense. The Defense Emergency Response Fund request included an authorization of $332.0 million for science and technology programs.

The House bill would authorize $10,350.2 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $10,155.4 million.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $10,384.7 million for Department of Defense science and technology programs. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Defense health programs (sec. 203)

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included an authorization of $67.2 million for research, development, test, and evaluation activities for carrying out health care programs, projects, and activities of the Department of Defense.

The House bill and Senate amendment would both authorize the amount of the budget request.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $67.2 million for research, development, test and evaluation activities for carrying out health care programs, projects, and activities of the Department of Defense.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

RAH–66 Comanche aircraft program (sec. 211)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 211) that would place a cost cap of $6.0 billion as the total amount that could be spent on the engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) phase of the RAH–66 Comanche aircraft program. The provision would also require an annual Department of Defense Inspector General program review until the EMD phase is completed.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of the Army to provide the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives with a quarterly report on the progress of the restructured RAH–66 Comanche aircraft program during fiscal year 2003.

The conferees repeat both their strong support for and concern about the RAH–66 Comanche aircraft program as highlighted in the statement of managers accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107). The conferees believe this aircraft will be a transformational weapon system capable of an array of missions to include manned reconnaissance, light attack, and network-centric warfare. The conferees, however, have been disappointed with the Army's lackluster support in prior years for this program. The Army has consistently failed to provide the appropriate funds required to ensure that the program could meet its earlier established fiscal year 2006 initial operational capability (IOC), resulting in program slips and numerous program restructures.

In the aforementioned statement of managers, the conferees questioned the reliability of any new cost estimates and EMD program milestones and expected an accurate estimate of funds required to complete EMD and the new time line and plan for bringing the Comanche to IOC to be submitted with the fiscal year 2003 budget request. (Section 211 of the House bill addressed this lack of response.)

The Army has finally reacted to this concern and is once again restructuring the program, the sixth such restructuring since fiscal year 1988, with an approximate $4.0 billion infusion of funds to complete the EMD phase of the program. The information the Army has belatedly provided the conferees gives some cause for hope that the program is now more realistically structured and funded to field this critical capability for the Objective Force beginning in fiscal year 2009. The conferees believe the commissioning of a Comanche Independent Review Panel, which contributed to this restructuring, and the Army's due consideration of that panel's recommendations are positive steps. The conferees will closely monitor the upcoming Defense Acquisition Board's decision on the restructured program and subsequent actions related to this program as reflected in the quarterly reports required by this conference. The conferees reiterate their concern that the program remain on schedule during fiscal year 2003 and be adequately funded in the out years to meet the new fiscal year 2009 IOC.

Extension of requirements relating to management responsibility for naval mine countermeasures programs (sec. 212)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 212) that would extend, through fiscal year 2008, the requirement for the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics) (USD(AT&L)) to have primary responsibility for developing and testing naval mine countermeasures (MCM) systems. The provision would permit waiving that requirement annually, subject to certification by the Secretary of Defense that: (1) the Secretary of the Navy (SECNAV) has submitted an updated mine countermeasures master plan; (2) the budget for that fiscal year proposes sufficient resources for executing that plan; and (3) the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (CJCS) concurs with the plan and resources.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Joint Requirements Oversight Council (JROC) to carry out title 10 responsibilities regarding the Secretary of the Navy MCM plan. The amendment would also require the USD(AT&L) to submit a notification to the congressional defense committees if the Navy intends to change the plan and budget that have been certified and submitted to Congress.

The USD(AT&L) letter to Congress, dated February 6, 2002, provided a review of the Navy's fiscal year 2002 MCM plan. That letter stated, "the assessments continue to show that the programmed changes in equipment and force structure will significantly reduce the time required to counter a mine threat and hence, validate the Navy investment strategy." The SECNAV reported in a letter to Congress on March 25, 2002, that "the Commander, Fleet Forces Command has conducted a fleet review of all Mine Countermeasures Plans and Programs (MCM) and Operational Requirements Documents (ORDs) and concurs with all programs and ORDs." In a letter to Congress, dated April 18, 2002, the USD(AT&L) certified the Navy MCM program for fiscal year 2003.

Despite the USD(AT&L) and CJCS reviews and subsequent certification of both the fiscal year 2002 and 2003 SECNAV MCM plans and budget requests, the Navy has recently taken actions without congressional consultation or notification to change those plans and associated programs significantly. These actions occurred after a hearing cycle which included reviews of both MCM plans and programs and the processes for changing those plans and programs.

Recent events have included the following:

(1) Senior Navy officials testified before Congress that congressional consultation and concurrence would be sought prior to removing appropriated and authorized capabilities from Navy ships.

(2) Shortly after the USD(AT&L) submitted the fiscal year 2003 certification, a senior member of the staff of the Chief of Naval Operations, apparently without consultation with the Director of Expeditionary Warfare and without consulting or notifying Congress, issued an order for the DDG–51 program manager to delete certain organic mine countermeasures capability from ships that were nearing delivery and that were under construction. This action had the effect of making a fundamental change to the programs upon which the USD(AT&L) made his certification.

(3) In August, two senior military officers, without consultation or notification to Congress, issued an order to remove a key MCM system that was included in the approved, certified, appropriated and authorized MCM plan.

The conferees believe that these circumstances are sufficient evidence for their concern regarding the oversight of MCM programs and for requiring that the Department provide closer supervision of the execution of the certified plans and budgets.

Revised requirements for plan for Manufacturing Technology Program (sec. 213)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 214) that would revise the requirements for the annual plan for the Manufacturing Technology Program (ManTech).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Advanced SEAL Delivery System (sec. 214)

The Senate bill contained a provision (sec. 212) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to use any funds that were authorized and appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for Advanced SEAL Delivery System (ASDS) advance procurement, but are no longer needed for that purpose, for fiscal year 2003 ASDS research, development, test and evaluation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to transfer $13.7 million, which was authorized and appropriated for fiscal year 2002 for ASDS advance procurement, to fiscal year 2003 ASDS research, development, test and evaluation.

Army experimentation program regarding design of the objective force (sec. 215)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec.213) that would require the Secretary of the Army to submit a report to Congress on the details of an Objective Force experimentation program no later than March 30, 2003, and to fund that experimentation program as a separate program element in the fiscal year 2004 budget request submission to Congress.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would extend the date for the report submission to March 31, 2003.

Program to provide Army with self-propelled Future Combat Systems non-line-of-sight cannon indirect fire capability for the objective force (sec. 216)

The budget request contained $475.6 million, composed of $246.5 million in PE 63854A and $229.1 million in PE 64854A for continued development of the Crusader self-propelled artillery system.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec.214) that would move the $475.6 million requested in the fiscal year 2003 budget for the Crusader artillery system to a different budget line—the Army's Future Combat Systems (FCS)—to be used only to meet the Army's organic indirect fire needs. Upon submission of the report to Congress required by the provision, the Secretary of Defense would be allowed to seek to reprogram the funds for Crusader termination costs, for continued research and development of the Crusader artillery system, or for other Army programs identified as the best available alternatives to the Crusader for providing improved indirect fire for the Army. The provision would require the Chief of Staff of the Army to complete a review of the full range of Army programs that could provide improved indirect fire for the Army over the next 20 years and submit his recommendations. The provision would further require an annual report to be submitted to the congressional defense committees on the investments proposed to be made on indirect fire programs for the Army.

The report required by the provision was submitted to Congress by the Chief of Staff of the Army, through the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Logistics and Technology on July 26, 2002.

The House bill contained no similar provision, but the report accompanying the bill directed the Secretary of Defense to continue Crusader development until completion of the Army's Analysis of Alternatives in support of the Milestone B decision for Crusader scheduled for the third quarter of fiscal year 2003.

The House recedes with an amendment that would direct the Secretary of Defense to carry out a program to provide the Army, no later than fiscal year 2008, with a self-propelled Future Combat Systems (FCS) Non-Line-of-Sight (NLOS) Cannon to equip the Objective Force.

The conferees have carefully considered the Secretary of Defense's decision to terminate the Crusader Artillery System and the budget amendment request the Administration submitted to the congressional defense committees to transfer the $475.6 million requested for Crusader in the fiscal year 2003 budget request to other programs. The Army Chief of Staff has reported that he "fully supports OSD proposals to accelerate Army precision fire initiatives and further develop other programs to enhance fire support to ground forces. However, the acceleration of existing programs alone will not fully meet the operational requirement for organic, indirect fires by 2008." He recommends funding the fielding of a Future Combat Systems Non-Line-of-Sight Cannon and establishing a networked fires capability by 2008, stating that "we cannot fully employ Objective Force operational concepts without this capability."

The conferees believe that, in order to deliver such a system by 2008, maximum advantage should be taken of technology developed through other programs, such as the composite armored vehicle, Crusader, and the joint United States-United Kingdom Future Scout and Cavalry System.

To reduce risk in this effort, the conferees have authorized increases totaling $293.0 million to the $475.6 million requested for Crusader in the fiscal year 2003 budget request as reflected in the following program elements:

[In millions of dollars]

PE 62303A Missile Technology: Micro Electro-mechanical Systems (MEMS)	15.0

Prohibition on transfer of Medical Free Electron Laser program (sec. 217)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 217) that would prohibit the transfer of the Department of Defense Medical Free Electron Laser (MFEL) Program to any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees note that the MFEL program continues to fund high quality, peer-reviewed research that is oriented towards military medical applications. The conferees believe that the program transfer was inappropriate and, therefore, support the retention and funding of the MFEL program within the Department of Defense.

Littoral combat ship program (sec. 218)

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included no funding for research and development for a littoral combat ship (LCS). The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219J) that would authorize 4.0 million in PE 63563N to develop requirements for a littoral ship.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize $4.0 million in PE 63563N to develop requirements for a littoral combat ship and would require certain reporting requirements from the Secretary of the Navy.

Subsequent to hearings and markup by the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the fiscal year 2003 authorization request, Navy officials requested additional funding authorization for research and development of an LCS.

An LCS program may be necessary to provide capabilities to carry out the National Military Strategy. However, neither the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, nor the Navy has provided any indication that they have completed sufficient work on any number of prerequisites that the Department of Defense (DOD) is required to meet before concluding that new development is required to provide the capabilities inherent in an LCS. These include requirements in title 10, United States Code, and internal DOD directives, such as DOD 5000.2–R Mandatory Procedures for Major Defense Acquisition Programs and Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff (CJCS) Instruction 3170.01B.

The LCS has not been vetted through the Joint Requirements Oversight Council (JROC) process, particularly regarding possible alternatives and the relative priority to meet valid requirements. This should be completed prior to initiation of any program which is intended to support joint combat operations.

The conferees believe that the Navy needs to assess the adequacy of existing and planned platforms to test the littoral combat ship concept and how these platforms will be used in the development, test, and evaluation of the LCS and its mission modules. The conferees strongly believe that the Navy must capitalize on ongoing and planned experiments, demonstrations, and evaluations of existing, prototype, and experimental hull forms and platforms to better inform the Navy's decisions on the LCS. Some of these have been completed, but others are planned and await modification or construction of the hull form and platform demonstrators.

The conferees are also concerned that the Navy's strategy for the LCS does not clearly identify the plan and funding for development and evaluation of the mission modules upon which the operational capability of the LCS will depend. The conferees believe that the strategy for LCS development must provide for the identification, transition, and integration of the component technologies and subsystems to be included in the several mission modules and for the evaluation of each mission module as a system before its deployment on the LCS.

The conferees expect the JROC and the Navy to specifically deal with a number of concerns in fulfilling the requirements in the LCS provision. These include:

(1) Assessing the extent to which unmanned systems could be capable of completing the missions instead of a manned LCS vessel. Briefings on the LCS indicate that an LCS would be used for operations determined to be "too risky" for larger surface combatants. This raises questions about the level of risk the Navy has determined to be acceptable for an LCS that is unacceptable for larger surface combatants.

(2) Identifying the threat or threats that have negated the Navy's previous investments in multi-mission ships and made the missions of anti-submarine warfare, anti-surface warfare, and anti-mine warfare "too risky" for these ships. The Navy has invested heavily in providing combatants of all types and displacements with onboard and offboard sensors, weapons, and information connectivity. This investment was directed to ensure that multi-mission ships could operate at any time and in any place.

(3) Determining the level of support from other combatants and auxiliaries that LCS vessels will require, and whether this will lead to altered planning assumptions for sizing the force. An open question regarding a "focused mission" vessel such as an LCS is whether the vessel will be able to operate with impunity in the presence of threats outside its focused mission warfare area. If not, the Navy may have to adjust operating and support concepts in more significant ways than merely adding LCS vessels to the current battle group.

(4) Identifying the appropriate level of helicopter support in the baseline LCS vessel. The naval helicopter has been a proven key capability for combatant surface ships when conducting the three primary warfare areas stated for LCS. Navy briefings indicate that the LCS will require a helicopter capability to carry out its missions and will operate forward of the battle group. Nevertheless, the Navy appears to have forgotten the lessons learned from the first flight of Arleigh Burke-class destroyers and has not included a naval helicopter hangar as a key requirement for the LCS.

(5) Assessing the implications of using and supporting non-marinized systems as component capabilities on LCS vessels. For example, the Navy has indicated the desire for using OH–58D helicopters on LCS. Although these Army helicopters have flown from Navy ships for short periods, they have limited capabilities for LCS mission areas. Naval helicopters, however, have the durability and system integration required to provide joint and battle group synergism for LCS missions.

(6) Identifying whether there are changes in tactics and procedures which the Navy could apply to current platforms and concepts of operations that would accomplish the envisioned LCS missions without putting additional pressure on an already underfunded ship acquisition plan.

(7) Assessing the assignment of LCS-unique missions to the U.S. Coast Guard, close allies, or coalition partners. If we are to continue assuming joint and coalition warfare, perhaps the U.S. Navy could count on the Coast Guard or smaller navies of allies to contribute more effectively by performing "small ship" mission.

SUBTITLE C—BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE

Report requirements relating to ballistic missile defense programs (sec. 221)

The Senate amendment contained provisions (secs. 222 and 223) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to the congressional defense committees reports containing programmatic information on the Ground-based Midcourse and Air-based Boost programs. The Senate amendment also contained a provision (sec. 221) that would require the Department to submit to the congressional defense committees reports containing operational assessments of these programs by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation (DOT&E) and an annual review of the cost, schedule, and performance criteria of all ballistic missile defense (BMD) programs by the Joint Requirements Oversight Council (JROC).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The conferees agree that the Department must provide adequate programmatic information on BMD programs to the congressional defense committees and notes that the annual budget justification materials, together with the report on the cost, schedule, testing, and performance goals of BMD programs required by section 232 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107), are appropriate vehicles for transmitting such information.

Therefore, the Senate recedes on sections 221, 222 and 223 with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to annually submit to Congress, with the budget justification materials, the performance goals and development baselines for each block of each BMD system that could be fielded and for BMD systems that have been designated by Congress as special interest items. The amendment would require submission of funding profiles (i.e., year-by-year funding estimates) for each block of each BMD system that could be fielded.

Finally, the amendment would require the JROC to perform a one-time review of the cost, schedule, and performance criteria for BMD programs in order to assess the validity of those criteria in relation to military requirements and to include the results of the review with the annual statement of BMD cost, schedule, and performance goals required by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107).

The conferees believe that a cooperative relationship between the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation and the Missile Defense Agency is and will remain important to successful execution of ballistic missile defense programs. The conferees are concerned that DOT&E reporting on BMD programs, included in the DOT&E annual report dated February 2002, may not have been based on information generated with a sufficient level of interaction between MDA and DOT&E. The conferees are encouraged by recent statements by DOT&E that DOT&E involvement in BMD programs is now acceptable and expect that the Missile Defense Agency will continue to work cooperatively with DOT&E.

Responsibility of Missile Defense Agency for research, development, test, and evaluation related to system improvements of programs transferred to military departments (sec. 222)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 232) that would amend title 10, United States Code, to require the Director of the Missile Defense Agency to retain responsibility for research, development, test and evaluation related to improvements of missile defense systems and system components that have been transferred to the military departments for procurement and fielding.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Limitation on obligation of funds for Theater High Altitude Area Defense Program pending submission of required life-cycle cost information (sec. 223)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 224) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to Congress by January 15, 2003, certain types of programmatic information for the Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) program, including the development schedule and planned procurement schedule. The provision would also require submission of a life cycle cost estimate specifically required by section 232 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107) for programs such as THAAD in their Engineering and Manufacturing Development phase. The provision would specify that no more than 50 percent of the amount authorized to be appropriated in fiscal year 2003 for THAAD may be expended until the congressional defense committees have received the information required by the provision.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would specify that no more than 85 percent of the amount authorized to be appropriated in fiscal year 2003 for THAAD may be obligated until Congress has received the life cycle cost estimate required by last year's National Defense Authorization Act. Other reporting requirements related to THAAD are included in Section 221.

The conferees note that a development schedule and planned procurement schedule need to be developed in order to provide such a life cycle cost estimate. The conferees also recognize that the Missile Defense Agency (MDA) plans to evolve missile defense system capabilities through spiral development and will acquire the ballistic missile defense systems in an evolutionary acquisition process. The conferees expect that MDA will provide the congressional defense committees the basis for understanding the THAAD life cycle cost estimate.

The conferees also note that under the Defense Department's plan for obligation of THAAD funding, the Department should have until February 2003 to submit the required life cycle cost estimate prior to any adverse funding impacts to the THAAD program. Therefore, the conferees expect the life cycle cost estimate to be provided on or before the date of submission of the fiscal year 2004 budget justification materials in February 2003.

Provision of information on flight testing of Ground-based Midcourse National Missile Defense system (sec. 224)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 227) that would require the Director of the Missile Defense Agency (MDA) to submit to the congressional defense committees a thorough report on each flight test of the Ground-based Midcourse national missile defense system no later than 120 days after the test.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Director of the MDA to communicate to Congress the results of each flight test, including a thorough discussion of the content and objectives of the test, a statement regarding whether each objective was achieved, and a discussion of the reasons, if any, for not achieving the objectives.

The conferees note that the amendment, which does not require a report by a fixed date months after the flight test, would provide the Director of the MDA the flexibility to provide Congress with more complete information in a more timely fashion.

References to new name for Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (sec. 225)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 233) that would make appropriate conforming changes to reflect the change of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization's name to the Missile Defense Agency.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 225).

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

One-year limitation on use of funds for nuclear armed interceptors (sec. 226)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 226) that would prevent any funds from being obligated for research, development, test, evaluation, procurement or deployment of nuclear armed interceptors for a missile defense system.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would prohibit obligation of any fiscal year 2003 funds.

Subtitle D—Improved Management of Department of Defense Test and Evaluation Facilities

Department of Defense Test Resource Management Center (sec. 231)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 231) that would establish a Department of Defense (DOD) Test and Evaluation Resource Enterprise, which would report to the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would establish a DOD Test Resource Management Center. The Test Resource Management Center would be a DOD Field Activity headed by a Director, who would be a three-star officer, and a Deputy Director, who would be a senior civilian with substantial experience in the field of test and evaluation. The Director would be subject to supervision by the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics. The Director would report directly to the Under Secretary without intervening authority.

Under the conference amendment, the Test Resource Management Center would be responsible for developing a strategic plan for DOD test and evaluation resources; reviewing and certifying the adequacy of proposed DOD budgets for test and evaluation activities; and administering the Central Test and Evaluation Investment Program (CTEIP) and the DOD program for test and evaluation science and technology.

The CTEIP and science and technology programs would not be transferred to the Center until the beginning of the first fiscal year after the Department submits a strategic plan for test and evaluation resources to the congressional defense committees. The conferees expect that CTEIP funds will continue to be used to fund the development of critically needed, high priority test and evaluation capabilities for joint, and multiservice requirements. The CTEIP program is not intended to be a substitute for adequate funding of service-specific test and evaluation capabilities by the military services.

Objective for institutional funding of test and evaluation facilities (sec. 232)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 232) that would transfer testing funds from the research and development programs of the military departments and defense agencies to the major test and evaluation investment accounts of the Department of Defense.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish the objective of ensuring that, by fiscal year 2006: (1) the institutional and overhead costs of the Major Range and Test Facility Base (MRTFB) are fully funded through the Department's major test and evaluation investment accounts and other direct appropriations; and (2) no more than the direct costs for the use of the MRTFB facilities and resources are charged to users of the MRTFB.

The conferees expect the Secretary of Defense to submit a budget for fiscal year 2004 that will begin to fund the military departments and defense agency MRTFB institutional programs at a level such as to achieve the above objective by fiscal year 2006.

Uniform financial management system for Department of Defense test and evaluation facilities (sec. 233)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 234) that would require the Secretary of Defense to implement a single financial management and accounting system for all test and evaluation facilities of the Department of Defense (DOD) within two years after the date of enactment of this Act.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to implement a single financial management and accounting system for test and evaluation facilities as soon as possible, with the objective that such system be implemented no later than September 30, 2006.

Test and evaluation workforce improvements (sec. 234)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 235) that would require the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics to develop a plan to ensure that the test and evaluation workforce of the Department of Defense (DOD) is of sufficient size and has the expertise needed to ensure that the testing of DOD systems identifies issues of military suitability and effectiveness in a timely and accurate manner.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Compliance with testing requirements (sec. 235)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 236) that would require the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation to include an assessment of waivers of and deviations from testing requirements in his annual report to Congress.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

Pilot programs for revitalizing Department of Defense laboratories (sec. 241)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 213) that would reauthorize pilot programs intended to revitalize Department of Defense laboratories.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 241) that would reauthorize and expand the same pilot programs.

The House recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the establishment of new excepted service positions under the pilot program.

The conferees are concerned that the Department of Defense has made very limited use of authorities granted under this and other pilot and demonstration programs that could help address personnel and other issues at laboratories and test centers. Congress has provided the Department with considerable legislative authority for personnel reform, which remains unused. It is the intent of Congress that the authority granted to the Secretary under section 342 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year of 1995 (Public Law 103–337) and section 1114 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (Public Law 106–398) be broadly and expansively interpreted by the Secretary and that the Secretary exercises his discretion to the fullest extent of the law to address the unique personnel issues associated with government scientists and engineers. These pilot programs and other demonstration projects should be used to experiment with novel personnel systems, procedures, and new business practices to derive lessons learned and help shape a coordinated strategy to address personnel and laboratory reform issues in the future.

Technology Transition Initiative (sec. 242)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 215) that would establish a program to accelerate the transition of technologies into fielded defense systems.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 242) that would establish a similar program.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the Technology Transition Initiative and its procedures.

The Technology Transition Initiative establishes a joint funding mechanism for transition projects between the Office of the Secretary of Defense and a military service or defense agency. The Initiative also establishes a Department-wide Technology Transition Council consisting of representatives of the science and technology, acquisition, and operational communities that would advise the Initiative Manager on the Initiative as well as other technology transition issues.

The conferees direct the Initiative Manager to work with the science and technology community and the acquisition community to develop memoranda of agreement, joint funding agreements, and other cooperative arrangements and to utilize innovative contracting arrangements and acquisition procedures to provide for carrying out projects under the Initiative in an efficient manner.

The conferees note that it is the intent of this provision to provide flexibility to the Department regarding the use and activities of the Technology Transition Council. Under this provision, the formal council would meet periodically to discuss technology transition issues, especially those relating to the Initiative and its projects. The organizations represented on the Council, however, are free to designate representatives to support the detailed technical reviews and funding decision-making processes that will be part of the Initiative.

The conferees note that the Technology Transition Initiative does not replace, but complements, the responsibility of the senior acquisition executives of the Department of Defense, the military departments, and the heads of the Defense agencies with research and development responsibilities under section 5358, title 10, United States Code, to ensure that the science and technology programs under their authority are carried out in such manner that will foster the transition of science and technology to higher levels of research, development, test, and evaluation.

The conferees direct the Comptroller General to review and evaluate the Technology Transition Initiative, the Defense Acquisition Challenge Program, and the Small Business Outreach program for combating terrorism. These reviews should occur two years after the enactment of the provisions, so as to provide the Department sufficient time to organize and establish the programs. The reviews should assess the implementation of the programs relative to congressional intent. The reviews should also recommend any necessary changes to improve the programs, including incentives for participation by services and agencies, organizational structure, and changes to the acquisition workforce. For example, the review should assess the cost savings generated by the programs and the use of those savings by participating organizations to support other missions.

Defense Acquisition Challenge Program (sec. 243)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 216) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish the Defense Acquisition Challenge Program, a pilot program to promote the insertion of unique and innovative technologies ("challenge proposals") into existing Department of Defense (DOD) acquisition programs.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would provide that the Secretary act through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics (USD(AT&L)), in carrying out the program. The amendment would provide that the Under Secretary prescribe procedures for the submission of challenge proposals through the unsolicited proposal process or in response to a broad agency announcement issued to solicit challenge proposals. The amendment would also provide that the Under Secretary establish panels to carry out preliminary evaluations of challenge proposals and prescribe criteria to be considered in those evaluations and would establish additional criteria to be considered by the program office and the prime system contractor in consideration of those challenge proposals referred for a full review and evaluation.

The conferees believe that the panels will be an important tool in the preliminary screening and identification of meritorious challenge proposals and that the amended provision would provide the USD(AT&L) the flexibility needed to prescribe proper panel make-up. The composition of the panels may change ranging from a technical level review by knowledgeable scientists and technologists to a very senior level blue ribbon panel, depending on the issue or technology being reviewed. The conferees expect that review panels would take a "best value" approach in evaluation of challenge proposals.

The conferees believe that the use of the broad agency announcement and the unsolicited proposal process under procedures prescribed by the USD(AT&L) will provide the Department the ability to manage the submission of challenge proposals and to identify specific technology areas of interest and areas that could be transitioned rapidly into fielded programs under a broad agency announcement, while at the same time allowing prospective contractors the opportunity to propose innovations for a program at any time under the unsolicited proposal process. The conferees believe that the authority for appropriate DOD officials to identify and refer unsolicited challenge proposals to a panel would permit their expeditious review under appropriate circumstances. Upon completion of a preliminary review by a panel, those challenge proposals with merit would be requested to submit a more detailed proposal to be reviewed by the Government program office and the prime system contractor for the impacted program. The conferees note that the detailed analyses should include a cost estimate and examination of relevant industrial base issues.

The conferees believe that the challenge program could provide an excellent avenue for accelerating the introduction of new and innovative technology into defense acquisition programs and that program offices and prime contractors should be encouraged to incorporate such approaches as new technology insertions by appropriate incentives, such as share-in savings approaches.

The conferees also believe that the Under Secretary should establish procedures for adoption of those extraordinary challenge proposals that, based on their evaluation, promise such far-reaching improvements in performance, affordability, manufacturability, or operational capability that a termination of a contract for the convenience of the Government and an award of a contract for insertion of the technology would be justified.

Encouragement of small businesses and nontraditional defense contractors to submit proposals potentially beneficial for combating terrorism (sec. 244)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 243) that would establish a program to assist the Department of Defense in utilizing small businesses and nontraditional defense contractors in developing technologies to combat terrorism.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees direct the Department to use all available electronic commerce technology to carry out its activities, including proposal submission, review, response to proposers, and recommendations within the Department. This is consistent with the Department's efforts to streamline its procedures and make more use of electronic transactions in conducting Department business. The use of these technologies should also address a systemic problem within the Department by making technical proposals and evaluator responses easier to track and document by both contractors and Department of Defense personnel alike.

The conferees direct the Department to use the size standards appropriate for the Small Business Innovative Research program when determining eligibility for participation in the Small Business Outreach Program.

The conferees are concerned with the communication between the various federal agencies responsible for developing technologies to combat terrorism. Therefore, the conferees recommend that the activities of the panel be coordinated with the activities of appropriate federal agencies and the Office of Science and Technology Policy, including the forwarding of proposals not specific to the needs of the Department of Defense to other appropriate federal agencies.

Vehicle fuel cell program (sec. 245)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 244) that would require the Secretary of Defense to carry out a cost-shared program to develop fuel cell technology for use in Department of Defense vehicles.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment that would require the Secretary to carry out the program in coordination with the Department of Energy and other appropriate federal agencies.

Defense nanotechnology research and development program (sec. 246)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 245) that would establish a Department of Defense nanotechnology research and development program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment that would encourage the Department of Defense to coordinate its nanotechnology research activities with the National Nanotechnology Initiative.

The conferees note that there are many ongoing activities in the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency and the military services that are attempting to exploit the promise of nanotechnology to develop new military capabilities, for example in biosensing, smart materials, computing, and nanoelectronics. The conferees urge the Department to leverage these activities in developing the coordinated research program. In particular, the conferees direct the Department to capitalize on the special technical area review on nanoelectronics by the Department's Advisory Group on Electronic Devices as it works to develop a research portfolio, investment plan, and transition strategy in this important technical area.

Activities of the Defense Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (sec. 247)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 246) that would modify the Defense Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (DEPSCoR) and to require a National Research Council assessment of the program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to continue to support the DEPSCoR effort to develop new defense research capabilities across the Nation. The conferees encourage the Secretary to continue to support activities that will develop world-class researchers in DEPSCoR states and to work closely with the individual states' planning committees to ensure that the program supports the development of defense research infrastructure.

Four-year extension of authority of DARPA to award prizes for advanced technology achievements and additional authority of military departments and Defense Agencies to award prizes for achievements in promoting education (sec. 248)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 247) that would reauthorize the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) to award competitive prizes for advanced technology achievements.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the reporting requirements related to the authority.

The conferees note that competitive prizes have been used successfully in the past to support the development of advanced technologies and have been endorsed by the National Academy of Engineering. The conferees support DARPA's interest in utilizing this authority in the future.

The conferees direct the Director of DARPA to address the whole area of competitive prizes seriously and to develop an overall program rather than a limited "one-shot" approach to the use of the authority. This includes fulfilling the reporting requirements included in the provision; conducting a market survey of those corporations and other entities who might want to participate in such an initiative; coordinating with the military services on the most relevant and promising technical areas in which to run competitions; and establishing a competitive prize program that supports the National Academy of Engineering's finding that prize contests have the ability "to attract a broader spectrum of ideas and participants" to the pursuit of scientific and technological objectives "by reducing the costs and other bureaucratic barriers to participation by individuals or firms."

The conferees urge the services to make use of similar prize authority granted to the service secretaries by the provision. The conferees believe that service-sponsored programs to promote science, math, and engineering can provide a positive contribution to communities and would help increase national emphasis on the role of science, math, and technology education in meeting long-term national defense needs.

The conferees note that the Army's eCybermission program to establish a nationwide math, science, and technology competition for elementary and secondary schools is an excellent example of this type of effort. The conferees urge the Secretary of the Army to make use of these authorities to continue the eCybermission program.

Plan for five-year program for enhancement of measurement and signatures intelligence capabilities of the United States through incorporation of results of basic research on sensors (sec. 249)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1038) that would require the Director of the Central Measurement and Signatures Intelligence Office to submit a plan for a five-year program for incorporating the results of basic research on sensors into the measurement and signatures intelligence systems fielded by the Federal Government.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit the plan.

Legislative Provisions Not Adopted

Aerospace Relay Mirror System demonstration

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219I) that would authorize funding for an Aerospace Relay Mirror System demonstration.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes. By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Agroterrorist attacks

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219E) that would authorize $1.0 million for research and analysis of efforts to counter potential agroterrorist attacks.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Analysis of emerging threats

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 216) that would authorize funding for analysis of emerging threats.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Army radar power technology

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219A) that would authorize funding for a radar power technology for the Army.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes. By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Aviation-shipboard information technology initiative

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219H) that would authorize, of the funds authorized to be appropriated within Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Navy, up to $8.2 million for the aviation-shipboard information technology initiative.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Basic seismic research program for support of national requirements for monitoring nuclear explosions

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 211) that would require the Secretary of the Air Force to manage the Department of Defense program for basic seismic research in support of national requirements for monitoring nuclear explosions. The provision would also authorize $20.0 million for this seismic research program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that the Department of Defense is planning to transfer management of the research program to support national requirements for monitoring nuclear explosions from the Defense Threat Reduction Agency to the Air Force and the Army. The conferees are concerned that, while the requirements for monitoring nuclear explosions have become significantly more challenging since the mid-1990s, management of and resources for the research program to support these national requirements have been neither stable nor sufficient since that time. Congress has repeatedly appropriated additional funds above the budget request levels for this research program.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by February 1, 2003, describing how the management of and resources for this research program will support the national requirements for monitoring nuclear explosions and ensure that the United States is able to meet these requirements.

Critical infrastructure protection

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219B) that would authorize funding for critical infrastructure protection.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

DDG optimized manning initiative

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219D) that would authorize an additional $2.5 million in PE 64307N for the DDG optimized manning initiative.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Demonstration of renewable energy use

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 218) that would authorize an additional $2.5 million in PE 64710N to continue a demonstration program of renewable energy use, rather than in PE 63508N.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Full-scale high-speed permanent magnet generator

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219G) that would authorize an additional $1.0 million in PE 63123N to develop and demonstrate a full-scale, high-speed, permanent magnet generator.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Increased investment in test and evaluation facilities

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 233) that would increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for investment in Department of Defense test and evaluation facilities.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The amounts authorized for investment in test and evaluation facilities are reflected in the appropriate accounts.

Laser welding and cutting demonstration

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 215) that would authorize an additional $6.0 million in PE 62123N for laser welding and cutting demonstration, rather than in PE 63508N.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Limitation on obligation of funds for procurement of Patriot (PAC–3) missiles pending submission of required certification

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 231) that would prevent obligation of funds for procurement of PAC–3 missiles pending submission of criteria to the congressional defense committees for the transfer of missile defense programs from the Missile Defense Agency (MDA) to the military departments and certification by the Secretary of Defense that those criteria have been met for the PAC–3 program. The criteria and certification are required by sections 224(b)(2) and 224(c), respectively, of title 10, United States Code.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

In its budget submission for fiscal year 2003, the Department of Defense proposed transferring the PAC–3 program from the MDA to the Army. The conferees understand that the Department has decided not to transfer the PAC–3 program, pending full agreement within the Department on the appropriate criteria to establish prior to the transfer. Furthermore, the conferees understand that such criteria, as well as the appropriate certification, will be submitted to Congress prior to proposing such a transfer in the future. Based on this, the conferees consider the House provision to be unnecessary at present.

The conferees strongly support the PAC–3 program and expect that, prior to transferring this or any other program from MDA to the services, the Department will establish appropriate criteria to ensure that the programs are adequately funded, managed, upgraded, and supported over time.

Report on implementation of Defense Science Board recommendations

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 237) that would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the implementation of the recommendations of the December 2000 report of the Defense Science Board Task Force on Test and Evaluation Capabilities.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Theater Aerospace Command and Control Simulation Facility upgrades

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219C) that would authorize $2.5 million for Theater Aerospace Command and Control Simulation Facility (TACCSF) upgrades.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

Very high speed support vessel for the Army

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec.219F) that would increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for research, development, test, and evaluation for the Army by $5.5 million for the development of a prototype composite hull design to meet the theater support vessel requirement. The provision would offset this increase by a reduction of $5.5 million authorized to be appropriated for research, development, test, and evaluation for the Navy for the submarine tactical warfare program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

By convention, outcomes of funding differences between the House bill and the Senate amendment are included in the tables elsewhere in this report.

TITLE III—OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

Overview

The President's budget request for fiscal year 2003 included $129.8 billion for operation and maintenance programs and $3.3 billion for working capital fund accounts.

The budget request also included $20.1 billion in the operation and maintenance title for the Defense Emergency Response Fund (DERF). Of this amount, $10.1 billion was requested for specific programs and $10.0 billion was requested as unspecified contingency funding for continuing the war on terrorism into fiscal year 2003.

The House bill would authorize $130.4 billion for operation and maintenance accounts and $2.4 billion for working capital fund accounts.

The Senate amendment would authorize $129.5 billion for operation and maintenance accounts and $2.6 billion for working capital fund accounts.

The conferees recommend an authorization of $129.1 billion for the operation and maintenance accounts and $2.6 billion for the working capital fund accounts of the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003.

The amounts recommended in this title include two reductions discussed more fully in title X of this Act, one for improved management of services contracts and one for reductions in proposed information technology modernization prior to design of a comprehensive financial management structure. For operation and maintenance, the conferees agree to a reduction of $494.1 million for savings from services contracts and $51.6 million from financial management information technology systems.

The conferees agree to a reduction of $654.4 million in working capital funds, including a $328.0 million increase (as requested in the DERF) for renovation and reconstruction of the Pentagon, a decrease of $839.1 million for changes in the accounting structure for health and retirement benefits that were not adopted (discussed more fully below), a decrease of $148.6 million from financial management information technology systems, and an increase of $5.3 million as requested in the DERF.

The House bill, the Senate amendment, and the conference agreement transfer the funding requested in the DERF to the appropriate accounts throughout the Department of Defense. The authorization of appropriations for the unspecified $10.0 billion for continuing the war on terrorism, which would fund the costs of ongoing military operations as well as the additional pay and benefits of mobilized guard and reserve personnel, has been transferred to title XV of this Act.

The conferees' actions on the $10.1 billion in funding for the other portion of the DERF are reflected in the tables throughout this report which describe the accounts to which those funds were transferred.

The budget request also proposed to change the accounting structure for various health and retirement benefits of federal civilian employees to an accrual basis. As discussed in the House and Senate reports, Congress did not agree with this proposed change. The operation and maintenance accounts in the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the conference agreement have been reduced by $2.3 billion to reflect the appropriate funding levels for defense programs under current accounting procedures. The authorizations for revolving and management funds in this title have been reduced by $839.1 million for this same reason. These reductions would not entail any change to the benefits of federal civilian employees funded by either direct appropriations or through the working capital funds.

Department of Defense foreign language training

The budget request included $135.4 million in Operation and Maintenance, Army for the Defense Language Institute/Foreign Language Center (DLI/FLC).

The House bill and the Senate amendment would support the budget request. The House version of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2003 (H.R. 4628) would authorize an increase of $2.0 million for the satellite communications for learning (SCOLA) project at the DLI/FLC.

The conferees agree to authorize $136.4 million, an increase of $1.0 million in Operation and Maintenance, Army for SCOLA. The conferees also direct the Secretary of the Army to designate an appropriate organization to manage the SCOLA program beginning in fiscal year 2003.

The SCOLA project provides important support within the Government. Financing to date for the SCOLA project has been provided by reimbursements from defense agencies and other government activities seeking SCOLA program support. The conferees believe that the SCOLA program deserves more focused management that would benefit the program with: (1) a more reliable funding line item in the budget; and (2) better support in the programming and budgeting process from the Department. The conferees also believe that the DLI/FLC would be an appropriate organization to manage the SCOLA program effort.

Ship depot maintenance

The budget request for fiscal year 2003 included $3.5 billion for ship depot maintenance.

The Senate amendment recommended a $90.0 million increase in ship depot maintenance to address war-related requirements and emergent repairs.

The House bill contained no similar increase.

The conferees agree to authorize the amount included in the budget request.

The request for the fiscal year 2002 supplemental appropriations bill included $90.0 million to fund regularly scheduled maintenance that would have been deferred until fiscal year 2003 because funds were being diverted for war-related repairs. This funding for ship depot maintenance was approved by Congress.

Because supplemental funding was provided that would allow regularly scheduled maintenance to proceed as planned, the conferees did not adopt the increase recommended in the Senate amendment.

Secure communications for the reserve components

The budget request for the Defense Emergency Response Fund included almost $200.0 million for the reserve components to increase reserve communications infrastructure.

The House bill fully funded this request.

The Senate amendment expressed support for the proposed improvements, but it also expressed concern over whether the entire amount requested could be executed in one fiscal year. Accordingly, the Senate amendment reduced the request by $40.0 million. The Senate report also required the Commander in Chief for Homeland Security to conduct a review of requirements to expand reserve component communications and to report the results of this review to the congressional defense committees no later than April 30, 2003.

The conferees agree to authorize a $40.0 million decrease and jointly endorse the need for the required review.

Since the Senate completed action on its bill, Congress has received a report from the General Accounting Office (GAO) entitled "National Guard: Effective Management Processes Needed for Wide-Area Network." This report identifies a number of deficiencies in the management of the National Guard's wide-area network, known as GuardNet. The conferees are concerned that the Department of Defense (DOD)'s plans to expand GuardNet and/or increase its use may be overly aggressive, given the apparent lack of defined requirements, uncertain configuration of the network, and potential security risks. The conferees believe that GuardNet can play a critical role both in enhancing the readiness of our Armed Forces by facilitating training and in bolstering capabilities to defend the homeland through rapid, secure communications with and between National Guard units. Therefore, the conferees strongly urge DOD to address these management concerns as quickly as possible and to include an update on any actions taken in its report to the congressional defense committees in April 2003.

Items of Special Interest

Formerly Used Defense Site at Lowry Bombing and Gunnery Range

The Army is the executive agent for the Formerly Used Defense Site (FUDS) Program, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers manages and executes actual remediation activities. The conferees urge the Secretary of the Army to expeditiously move forward with remediation efforts at all former military ranges.

The conferees are aware of the environmental cleanup activities needed at the former Lowry Bombing and Gunnery Range in Arapahoe County, Colorado, and recognize the importance of completing needed cleanup and containment to protect the health and safety of the surrounding residences and to permit planned residential and school construction in the surrounding area to proceed. The conferees encourage the Army Corps of Engineers to complete cleanup in a timely manner by providing sufficient resources and selecting appropriate cleanup and containment methodologies for the former Lowry Bombing and Gunnery Range and for all other installations included in the FUDS Program.

National Imagery and Mapping Agency commercial satellite imaging support

The conferees recognize the importance of a viable, technically competent, commercial space imaging industry as an important complement to U.S. national technical means and note that the Director of Central Intelligence has directed the National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA) to make fuller use of commercial imagery. The conferees believe that a long-term government commitment to the appropriate use of commercial imagery is necessary in this context. The conferees believe that such a long-term commitment would cause commercial capital to become available to industry to support development of next generation commercial space imaging capabilities and infrastructure and would also result in greatly reduced cost-per- unit for commercial imagery.

Section 2306b, title 10, United States Code, provides the head of an agency with the authority to enter into a multiyear contract for the purchase of property for more than one, but not more than five program years to the extent that funds are otherwise available for obligation. This authority is further qualified in that the agency head must find that the multiyear saves money, that the requirement is substantially stable, and that there is a reasonable expectation throughout the contract period that sufficient funds will be budgeted to avoid contract cancellation. For the Department of Defense, the agency head's authority is also restricted to contracts less than $500.0 million, with an unfunded contingent liability of $20.0 million or less. For amounts greater than these, congressional notification or express congressional approval is required.

The multiyear authority does not waive the requirement for annual appropriations from Congress for each contract year nor does it preclude the Government's ability to terminate the contract for convenience. Nevertheless, because multiyear contracts can bring a significant measure of stability and economic order quantity activity to a program, it provides for considerably more efficient program execution and savings to the Government.

The conferees believe that the termination liability in a multiyear contract for pixels or product from the commercial remote sensing industry need not exceed $20.0 million in any contract year. Thus the conferees understand that the Director of NIMA, under the foregoing statute, has the authority to award such a multiyear contract to a commercial remote sensing company for up to five years and $500.0 million ($100.0 million for each of five years) without requiring express congressional approval, as long as the unfunded contingent liability does not exceed $20.0 million. If the Director desired to purchase imagery from more than one industry source, he could award more than one multiyear contract on his own authority; however, congressional approval would be required if the aggregate amount were to exceed $500.0 million or $20.0 million in termination liability.

The conferees expect NIMA to take advantage of existing multiyear contracting authority, including the authority contained in 10 USC 2306b, for commercial satellite imagery when such use is in the best interests of the Government.

Legislative Provisions Adopted

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (secs. 301–302)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 301–302) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2003 funding levels for all operation and maintenance and working capital fund accounts.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions (secs. 301–302).

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Armed Forces Retirement Home (sec. 303)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 303) that would authorize $69.9 million from the Armed Forces Retirement Home Trust Fund for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Home, including the Armed Forces Retirement Home—Washington, and the Armed Forces Retirement Home—Gulfport.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 303).

The Senate recedes.

Grant to National Guard Youth Foundation (sec. 304)

The conference agreement includes a provision (sec. 304) that would authorize $2.5 million for a grant to the National Guard Youth Foundation for building and strengthening the character and competence of the Nation's youth.

Subtitle B—Environmental Provisions

Enhancement of authority on cooperative agreements for environmental purposes (sec. 311)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 311) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to enter into and fund cooperative agreements with Federal, State and local agencies, as well as Indian tribes, that begin in one fiscal year and end in another fiscal year.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Single point of contact for policy and budgeting issues regarding unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, and munitions constituents (sec. 312)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 313) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a single point of contact for policy and budgeting issues regarding unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions, and munitions constituents (UXO).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment clarifying the authority that may be delegated under the provision.

The conferees direct the Department of Defense to provide a consolidated budget exhibit on all proposed funding to address environmental impacts of UXO with its budget submission in each of the next four fiscal years as noted in the Senate report accompanying S. 2514 (S. Rept. 107–151).

Authority to carry out construction projects for environmental responses (sec. 313)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 2802) that would clarify that the secretaries of the military departments are required to notify Congress of their intent to conduct military construction projects necessary to carry out an environmental response action when such projects are in excess of the minor construction threshold.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 312) that would require the Secretary of Defense to fund environmental restoration projects through the Environmental Restoration accounts of the Department of Defense and not as military construction projects.

The House recedes.

Procurement of environmentally preferable procurement items (sec. 314)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 313) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish: (1) goals for the increased purchase of procurement items that are environmentally preferable or are made with recovered materials; and (2) a tracking system to enable the Department to monitor its progress in achieving these goals.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the requirement to establish goals. The Secretary of Defense would be required to develop and implement an effective and efficient tracking system to identify the extent to which the Defense Logistics Agency procures items that have been determined to be environmentally preferable or made with recovered material. To the maximum extent practicable, the tracking system would be required to separately track the procurement of each category of such procurement items. In identifying categories of procurement items to be tracked, the conferees expect the Secretary to consider the Comprehensive Procurement Guidelines and Guidance on Acquisition of Environmentally Preferable Products and Services developed pursuant to Executive Order 13101 and products identified as environmentally preferable in the Federal Logistics Information System. The conferees also expect that the system will track the procurement of such items as a percentage of all purchases of procurement items that serve a similar purpose.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 311) that would amend the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (Public Law 93–300) to create a statutory exemption for the Department of Defense (DOD) for the incidental taking of migratory birds during authorized military readiness activities.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would create interim authority under which the Migratory Bird Treaty Act would not apply to the incidental taking of a migratory bird by DOD during authorized military readiness activities. The amendment would direct the Secretary of the Interior to prescribe regulations, no later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act, to exempt DOD for the incidental taking of migratory birds during authorized military readiness activities. The interim authority would not expire until the regulations have taken effect. The amendment would also require the Secretary of Defense, acting in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, to identify measures to minimize the adverse impact of military training activities on affected species of migratory birds during both the period of interim authority and the period after the regulations have taken effect.

The conferees believe this provision to be entirely consistent with the underlying terms of all treaty obligations of the United States.

Subtitle C—Commissaries and Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentalities

Authority for each military department to provide base operating support to Fisher Houses (sec. 321)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 321) that would authorize the service secretaries to provide appropriated fund support to Fisher Houses associated with the health care facilities of that military department.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 903).

The Senate recedes.

Use of commissary stores and MWR retail facilities by members of National Guard serving in national emergency (sec. 322)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 322) that would authorize members of the National Guard to use commissary and exchange stores when ordered to duty in other than a federal status in response to a federally declared national emergency.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Uniform funding and management of morale, welfare, and recreation programs (sec. 323)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 323) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to permit installation commanders to manage funds appropriated for installation Morale, Welfare, and Recreation (MWR) programs under the procedures used for nonappropriated funds and would authorize conversion of certain employment positions, with the employees' consent, from appropriated fund positions to nonappropriated fund positions.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Rebate agreements under the special supplemental food program (sec. 324)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 344) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to enter into contracts for rebates with producers of food products for the exclusive right to provide food in Navy Exchange Markets as supplemental food for the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) Overseas Program, consistent with current authority for products sold in commissary stores. The recommended provision would also increase the maximum period of the exclusive rights contracts from one year to three years.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle D—Workplace and Depot Issues

Notification requirements in connection with required studies for conversion of commercial or industrial type functions to contractor performance (sec. 331)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 331) that would require the Secretary of Defense to notify Congress of the outcome of a required study for conversion of a function to contractor performance, regardless of whether the study results in conversion to contractor performance or maintaining performance in the public sector.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Temporary authority for contractor performance of security-guard functions to meet increased requirements since September 11, 2001 (sec. 332)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 332) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense or the secretary of a military department to waive the prohibition in section 2465(a) of title 10, United States Code, on contracting out security guard functions in certain circumstances. The House provision would authorize the Department to contract for security guard functions if: (1) those functions are or will be performed by members of the Armed Forces; or (2) the security guard functions were not required before September 11, 2001.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would authorize the waiver of section 2465(a) to meet increased security guard functions undertaken in response to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, if: (1) the functions are or would be performed by members of the Armed Forces; and (2) the secretary concerned determines that the contractor personnel are appropriately trained and supervised and can be used without a reduction in security at the affected installation or facility. The authority to contract out security guard functions under this provision would expire three years after the date of enactment of this Act. The Secretary of Defense would be required to identify any longer-term requirements for security guard functions and submit a plan for meeting those requirements to the congressional defense committees no later than six months after the date of enactment.

Repeal of obsolete provision regarding depot-level maintenance and repair workloads that were performed at closed or realigned military installations (sec. 333)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 334) that would repeal section 2469(a) of title 10, United States Code, which addresses depot-level maintenance and repair workloads that were performed at installations closed or realigned under the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-510). Because all installations have completed closure or realignment actions in accordance with that law, this provision is no longer necessary.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Exclusion of certain expenditures from limitation on private sector performance of depot-level maintenance (sec. 334)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 333) that would revise section 2474(f) of title 10, United States Code. Currently, that section excludes, until 2005, all work that is performed by private sector personnel at Department of Defense maintenance and repair depots from the percentage limitations (50/50) on private sector depot-level maintenance work. The provision would remove the date limitation.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would revise the date limitation. The amendment would extend the exclusion for the duration of all public-private partnership contracts for depot maintenance that are signed before the end of fiscal year 2006.

Subtitle E—Defense Dependents Education

Assistance to local educational agencies that benefit dependents of members of the Armed Forces and Department of Defense civilian employees (sec. 341)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 331) that would authorize $30.0 million for continuation of the Department of Defense assistance program to local education agencies that benefit dependents of service members and Department of Defense civilian employees.

The House bill contained a similar provision (sec. 341).

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Housing benefits for unaccompanied teachers required to live at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station, Cuba (sec. 342)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1107) that would require the Navy to make excess military family housing at Guantanamo Bay Naval Station, Cuba, available for lease to Department of Defense Education Activity teachers assigned to teach at that station.

The House bill contained a similar provision (sec. 342).

The House recedes.

Options for funding dependent summer school programs (sec. 343)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 333) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide dependent summer school programs on the same financial basis as programs offered during the regular school year.

The House bill contained a similar provision (sec. 343).

The House recedes.

The conferees expect the Secretary to exercise the authority to charge fees for certain summer school programs only when necessary to offer a course. When a fee is charged, the Secretary should provide authority to waive the fee, on the basis of financial need, for students otherwise eligible for free education.

Impact aid eligibility for local educational agencies affected by privatization of military housing (sec. 344)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 366) that would authorize continued eligibility of certain local education agencies for impact aid during temporary reductions in the number of qualified students because of conversion of military housing units to private housing. The provision would also exclude basic allowance for housing payments to military personnel residing in privatized military housing from income for purposes of determining eligibility for free or reduced price school lunches.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 1064).

The Senate recedes with an amendment deleting the provision for free or reduced price school lunches because this provision was enacted in separate legislation.

Comptroller General study of adequacy of compensation provided for teachers in the Department of Defense Overseas Dependents' Schools (sec. 345)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 334) that would extend from May 1, 2002 to December 12, 2002 the date for the Comptroller General to report on a study on whether compensation for teachers in the Department of Defense dependents' education system is adequate for recruiting and retaining high quality teachers. The provision would also require the Comptroller General to consider whether the process for setting teacher compensation is efficient and cost effective.

The House bill amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle F—Information Technology

Annual submission of information regarding information technology capital assets (sec. 351)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 352) that would require the Secretary of Defense to include, along with the annual budget request, a description of and complete budget information on major information technology, national security system, and national security capital asset programs.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment to clarify certain terms and to minimize reporting requirements.

Policy regarding acquisition of information assurance and information assurance-enabled information technology products (sec. 352)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 353) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish and implement a policy limiting the acquisition of all commercial off-the-shelf information assurance and information assurance-enabled information technology products to those products that have been evaluated and validated in accordance with appropriate criteria, schemes, or programs.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to: (1) apply the policy to all information assurance and information assurance-enabled information technology products (not just commercial off-the-shelf products); and (2) authorize the waiver of the policy in the national security interest of the United States.

Installation and connection policy and procedures regarding Defense Switch Network (sec. 353)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 354) that would direct the Secretary of Defense to establish uniform policies and procedures throughout the Department for the installation and connection of telecom switches to the Defense Switch Network.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 348).

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Subtitle G—Other Matters

Distribution of monthly reports on allocation of funds within operation and maintenance budget subactivities (sec. 361)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 361) that would clarify that the monthly reports on operation and maintenance accounts that the Department of Defense is required to provide to Congress should be delivered to the congressional defense committees.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Continuation of arsenal support program initiative (sec. 362)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 364) that would extend the Arsenal Support Program Initiative through fiscal year 2004. The provision also required a report from the Secretary of the Army evaluating the Initiative's results.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 346).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Extension of work safety demonstration program (sec. 363)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 350) that would extend by one year the authority for the work safety demonstration program through September 30, 2003.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Condition on authority of Defense Security Service to impose fees on fee-for-service basis (sec. 364)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 363) that would prohibit the Secretary of Defense from converting the Defense Security Service (DSS) to a working capital-funded entity until the Secretary certifies that DSS has the requisite financial systems to support such operations.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment clarifying that DSS is currently a working capital-funded entity but cannot impose fees on a fee-for-service basis until proper certification is provided.

Logistics support and services for weapon systems contractors (sec. 365)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 345) that would allow the Defense Logistics Agency (DLA) to provide services to weapon systems contractors on a reimbursable basis. The authority would be limited to no more than five contracts, with a total value of less than $100.0 million.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment specifying that, in accordance with section 2208(h), title 10, United States Code, all revenues from such contracts would be credited to DLA accounts.

Training range sustainment plan, Global Status of Resources and Training System, and training range inventory (sec. 366)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 365) that would require the Secretary of Defense to develop a comprehensive plan for addressing training constraints caused by limitations on the use of military lands, marine areas, and airspace; a plan to modify the Global Status of Resources and Training System to better reflect the impact of such training constraints; and a training range inventory for each of the military services.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment clarifying the content and timing of the required plans and reports.

Engineering study and environmental analysis of road modifications in vicinity of Fort Belvoir, Virginia (sec. 367)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 349) that would provide $5.0 million to the Secretary of the Army to conduct a preliminary engineering and environmental study on the feasibility of providing an alternative to Beulah Road (State Route 613) and Woodlawn Road (State Route 618) at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, which were closed as a force protection measure. The Secretary would submit a summary report on the study and analysis to Congress with the budget justification materials for the fiscal year 2006 budget request.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees are aware that other communities have been adversely impacted by the closure of public roads that traverse military installations and believe the communities that have lost access to thoroughfares constructed and maintained with local tax dollars should be appropriately compensated for this loss. The conferees understand that Fort Dix, New Jersey, and Fort Drum, New York, are among the communities affected by road closures. The conferees are also aware of a long-standing issue of road access on Andersen Air Force Base, Guam.

Accordingly, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to identify all localities affected by the closures of public roads on military installations to enhance force protection, to work with local communities to find appropriate means, including compensation, to address these situations, and to include those measures in future budget requests as necessary.

Reauthorization of warranty claims recovery pilot program (sec. 368)

The conference agreement includes a provision (sec. 368) that would extend the warranty claims pilot program through September 30, 2004.

Expanded eligibility for loan, gift, or exchange of documents, historical artifacts, and condemned or obsolete combat materiel (sec. 369)

The conference agreement includes a provision (sec. 369) that would include nonprofit military aviation heritage foundations and associations among the entities eligible to receive transfers of excess Department of Defense (DOD) materiel.

The conferees authorize this expansion with the recognition that section 2572(d)(2) of title 10, United States Code, prescribes very limited circumstances under which DOD may bear the costs of demilitarizing equipment to make it safe for transfer. The conferees further note that, under existing statute, DOD is not responsible for the costs of operating, maintaining, or repairing equipment once it has been transferred. The conferees direct that any transfers made under this section be conducted in accordance with DOD regulations pertaining to the safe and secure operation of transferred equipment.

Legislative Provisions Not Adopted

Calculation of five-year period of limitation for Navy-Marine Corps Intranet contract

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 351) that would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to extend the current contract for Navy-Marine Corps Intranet (NMCI) services from the current five years to seven years.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 342).

Because similar legislation has been enacted (Public Law 107–254), the conference report does not include either provision.

Clarification of required core logistics capabilities

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 335) that would expand the definition of core logistics capabilities to include acquisition logistics, supply management, system engineering, maintenance, and modification management.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Cleanup of unexploded ordnance on Kaho'olawe Island, Hawaii

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 314) that would require the Secretary of the Navy to continue cleanup activities on Kaho'olawe Island, Hawaii, until the Navy has inspected and assessed 100 percent of the island, cleared 75 percent of the island in accordance with Tier One standards, and cleared 25 percent of the island in accordance with Tier Two standards.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Impact aid for children with severe disabilities

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 332) that would authorize $5.0 million for continuation of the Department of Defense assistance program to local educational agencies that benefit dependents with severe disabilities.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

The conferees agree to authorize $5.0 million of the funds available for Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide, for continuation of the Department of Defense assistance program to local educational agencies that benefit dependents with severe disabilities.

Lift support for mine warfare ships and other vessels

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 351) that would authorize $10.0 million to be made available for implementing recommendations resulting from the Navy's Non-self Deployable Watercraft (NSDW) Study and the Joint Chiefs of Staff Focused Logistics Study, which are to determine the requirements of the Navy to provide lift support for mine warfare ships and other vessels. The provision would also reduce funding for mine countermeasures ship cradles by the same amount.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

The conferees agree to authorize $10.0 million for implementing recommendations resulting from the Navy's Non-self Deployable Watercraft (NSDW) Study and the Joint Chiefs of Staff Focused Logistics Study and to reduce funding for mine countermeasures ship cradles by the same amount. The conferees are specifically not directing a particular solution to meeting lift support requirements.

Military readiness and the conservation of protected species

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 312) that would amend the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (Public Law 93–205) to prohibit further designations of critical habitat for endangered species in areas for which an Integrated Natural Resources Management Plan has been prepared under the Sikes Act (Public Law 86–797). The House provision would further amend the Endangered Species Act to require regulatory agencies to consider national security concerns in addition to economic impact prior to designating future areas of critical habitat.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees believe that all federal agencies, including the Armed Forces, should be required to comply with all federal environmental laws. However, due to their unique military training and operational responsibilities, the Armed Forces often face unique challenges in balancing the obligations to comply with environmental laws and sustain military readiness. Examples of these challenges include increasing limitations and restrictions on lands and waters which are currently set aside for military training exercises as well as significant restrictions on the times and conditions under which military training exercises can be conducted. The conferees are concerned that future designations of critical habitat on military training ranges could have an adverse impact on the military's readiness capabilities.

The conferees strongly endorse the consultative process through which the military services work with the Fish and Wildlife Service to ensure the protection of threatened and endangered species by adopting effective Integrated Natural Resources Management Plans at military installations. The conferees are concerned that questions have been raised regarding whether the protections provided by these Integrated Natural Resources Management Plans, such as the one at Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, California, are sufficient to avoid the need for future designations of critical habitat that could adversely affect military training. Nevertheless, the conferees encourage the Department of the Interior and the Department of Defense to pursue a cooperative approach in managing natural and cultural resources throughout the Armed Forces.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives recommendations for any legislative proposals that he considers necessary to accomplish these stated goals.

Minimum deduction from pay of certain members of the Armed Forces to support Armed Forces Retirement Home

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 362) that would require that the minimum amount deducted monthly from the pay of all active duty enlisted, warrant officer, and limited duty officer personnel for the support of the Armed Forces Retirement Home be no less than $1.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

National Army Museum, Fort Belvoir, Virginia

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 306) that would authorize $100,000 to initiate planning and development efforts for the National Army Museum at Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Navy data conversion activities

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 352) that would authorize $1.5 million in Navy operation and maintenance funds for the Navy Data Conversion and Management Laboratory. The provision would offset this increase with a reduction of $1.5 million from Army operation and maintenance funds for utilities privatization.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Navy Pilot Human Resources Call Center, Cutler, Maine

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 305) that would authorize $1.5 million of Navy operation and maintenance funds for the Navy Pilot Human Resources Call Center in Cutler, Maine.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision. The Navy operation and maintenance table contained in this report describes the conference agreement for the Cutler call center.

Range Enhancement Initiative Fund

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 304) that would authorize $20.0 million to create a new Range Enhancement Initiative Fund from which funds would be drawn to purchase easements or cover other costs incurred by the military departments resulting from agreements entered into under the authorities contained in section 2811 of the Senate amendment.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Reimbursement for reserve component intelligence support

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 343) that would authorize the use of operation and maintenance funds of the military departments, combatant commands, and defense agencies to reimburse pay, allowances and other expenses when members of the National Guard and Reserve provide intelligence or counterintelligence support to such departments, commands, or agencies.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE IV—MILITARY PERSONNEL AUTHORIZATIONS LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Active Forces

End strengths for active forces (sec. 401)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 401) that would authorize the following end strengths for active duty personnel of the Armed Forces as of September 30, 2003:

Service	FY 2002 authorized	FY 2003		Change from
		Request	Committee recommendation	FY 2003 request	FY 2002 authorized
Army	480,000	480,000	484,800	4,800	4,800
Navy	376,000	375,700	379,457	3,757	3,457
USMC	172,600	175,000	175,000	0	2,400
Air Force	358,800	359,000	360,795	1,795	1,995
DOD Total	1,387,400	1,389,700	1,400,052	10,352	12,652

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 401) that would authorize the following end strengths: Army, 485,000; Navy, 379,200; United States Marine Corps, 175,000; Air Force, 362,500.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would authorize the following end strengths:

Service	FY 2002 authorized	FY 2003		Change from
		Request	Committee recommendation	FY 2003 request	FY 2002 authorized
Army	480,000	480,000	480,000	0	0
Navy	376,000	375,700	375,700	0	– 300
USMC	172,600	175,000	175,000	0	2,400
Air Force	358,800	359,000	359,000	0	200
DOD Total	1,387,400	1,389,700	1,389,700	0	2,300

The conferees believe that the active duty end strengths should be increased substantially. This belief is based not only on the testimony of senior military officers who describe their personnel as stretched to the limit by ever-expanding missions and operations tempo, but also on the fact that more than 70,000 mobilized reservists remain on active duty a year after the start of the war on terrorism, and active duty tours for thousands more have been extended for a second year because the active components lack the manpower to meet requirements.

Furthermore, the conferees are disappointed that due to insufficient additional appropriations, the conference report was unable to include the increased active end strength authorizations recommended by the House and Senate in their separate bills.

That notwithstanding, in order to give the service secretaries and the Secretary of Defense more flexibility to man the force to meet mission requirements, the conferees have, in separate provisions, expanded the authority of the Secretary of Defense to increase active end strength from the current two percent to three percent above authorized levels. The conferees have also created new authority for the service secretaries, recognizing the practical limitations they face, to increase active end strength by two percent above authorized levels.

In recognition of the conferees' strong view that active duty end strength should not be reduced any further as well as the Secretary of Defense's apparent commitment to hold end strengths at or above the requested levels, another provision in this conference agreement (sec. 402) eliminates the Secretary of Defense's current authority to reduce end strength below authorized levels.

Revision in permanent end strength minimum levels (sec. 402)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 402) that would establish end strength floors for the active forces equivalent to the end strengths recommended by the committee in section 401.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would establish end strength floors for the active forces equivalent to the end strengths contained in the budget request and would eliminate the Secretary of Defense's current authority to reduce end strength below authorized levels.

Expanded authority for administrative increases in statutory active-duty end strengths (sec. 403)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 403) that would authorize the secretaries of the military departments to increase the authorized active duty end strength of their respective military service by up to one percent.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would expand the authority of the Secretary of Defense to increase active duty end strength from the current two percent to three percent above authorized levels and would provide new authority for the service secretaries to increase active duty end strength by two percent above authorized levels.

This provision reflects the conferees' belief that the requested end strength is not sufficient and gives the service secretaries and the Secretary of Defense greater flexibility to increase end strength as needed to meet mission requirements.

General and flag officer management (sec. 404)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 404) that would exclude an officer serving in the position of Senior Military Assistant to the Secretary of Defense from the limitation on active duty officers in grades above major general and rear admiral, increase by one the limit on the number of lieutenant generals authorized for the Marine Corps, require that the Chief of the Veterinary Corps of the Army serve in the grade of brigadier general, and require the Secretary of Defense to review and report to Congress on active duty and reserve general and flag officer authorizations. The grade requirements of this provision would be effective on the date of receipt by Congress of the report required by this provision.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 403) that would authorize one additional Marine Corps general officer in a grade above major general.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would exclude an officer serving in the position of Senior Military Assistant to the Secretary of Defense from the limitation on active duty officers in grades above major general and rear admiral, increase by one the limit on the number of lieutenant generals authorized for the Marine Corps, and require the Secretary of Defense to review and report to Congress on active duty and reserve general and flag officer authorizations. The provision regarding the grade of the Senior Military Assistant to the Secretary of Defense would be effective on the date of receipt by Congress of the report on active duty and reserve general and flag officer authorizations. The provisions regarding the number of lieutenant generals in the Marine Corps would be effective upon date of enactment. The grade of the Chief of the Veterinary Corps of the Army is addressed in a separate provision.

Extension of certain authorities relating to management of numbers of general and flag officers in certain grades (sec. 405)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 405) that would extend to December 31, 2004, three expiring authorities relating to general and flag officer management. Those authorities provide for: the process by which the Secretary of Defense and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff fill vacant senior joint four-star general and flag officer positions; the exemption of the senior joint four-star general and flag officers appointed by that process from the general and flag officer limits that apply to the military services; and the process by which the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff designates and fills 12 general and flag officer positions on the joint staff and 10 reserve component general and flag positions on the staffs of the commanders of the unified and specified commands.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 501) that would extend these authorities to December 31, 2003.

The Senate recedes.

Increase in authorized strengths for Marine Corps officers on active duty in the grade of colonel (sec. 406)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 404) that would increase by 40 the authorized strength for colonels on active duty in the Marine Corps.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Authority to increase strength and grade limitations to account for reserve component members on active duty in support of a contingency operation

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 402) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to increase the limit on active duty end strength by the number of members of the reserve components serving on active duty, with their consent, in support of a contingency operation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE V—MILITARY PERSONNEL POLICY

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Department of Defense education partnerships

The conferees recognize the importance of the continued growth and development of partnerships, using web-based technology, between the Department of Defense, high schools, and institutions of higher education in order to ensure that the services are able to effectively recruit and retain the most qualified service members. The conferees are also aware that the Department of Defense and the military services already have a number of ongoing initiatives to foster such education partnerships.

The conferees encourage the Department to pursue new partnerships, in a manner that is fully coordinated with ongoing initiatives, that will facilitate the enrollment and transfer of students with full recognition of credits among two-year and four-year institutions of higher education. Such new efforts could enhance education opportunities for minority men and women, a demographic that currently makes up nearly 40 percent of the enlisted members in the armed services.

Enrollments at Air Force Institute of Technology and Naval Postgraduate School

The conferees are concerned that the Air Force and the Navy are not heeding the previous directions, as specified in the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (Public Law 106–398) and the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (Public Law 107–107), to produce sufficient numbers of military personnel with the requisite graduate level education in science, engineering, and technology.

The Air Force Institute of Technology and the Naval Postgraduate School are uniquely qualified to meet these graduate education requirements with specialized, military-relevant curricula. As noted by the Secretary of the Air Force and the Secretary of the Navy in March 2002, the Air Force and Navy are committed to maintaining each school as world-class, higher education institutions underpinned by their unique service heritage and character.

Despite such commitment by the secretaries, the conferees remain concerned that neither service is fully utilizing the military student enrollment capacity of these two institutions. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretaries of the Air Force and the Navy to report 120 days after enactment of this Act their plans to increase the military student enrollment at both schools.
